MacCracken, Brittin Given Ten-Day Jail Terms in Contempt

Senate Allows Four Days Delay for Filing of Appeals.

Second Air Line Head, Aid Freed

Prisoners to Be Held by Jurney at Hotel During Fight.

By Felix Bruner.

William P. MacCracken, jr., former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and L. H. Brittin, vice president of Northwest Airways, were found guilty of contempt of the Senate last night.

Each was sentenced to serve 10 days in the District Jail, but execution of sentence was suspended for four days to allow the prisoners to perfect appeals.

Meanwhile, MacCracken and Brittin remain in the custody of Chesley Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, who took them to rooms in the Willard Hotel. MacCracken already has spent two nights in the hotel in Jurney's custody.

The two other defendants in the contempt case were found not guilty. They are Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representatives of Wetsern Air Express.

Six-Hour Session.

Sentences were pronounced at 7:30 p. m. after the Senate had been in executive session for more than six hours.

The Senate began voting on the question of guilt or innocence of the defendants at 6:05 p. m. The first vote was on the question of whether the cases should be remanded to the courts. This question was voted down.

The next four votes were to establish the guilt or innocence of each of the four defendants. The last two were to fix the punishment

Ponzi Is Freed; May Be Exiled

Swindler Ends 11-Year Term; Deportation Bond Granted.

Boston, Feb. 14 (AP).—Freed after 11 years' imprisonment on stock-swindling charges, Charles Ponzi walked today into the waiting arms of immigration authorities.

Expressing hope that he would be allowed to remain in the United States, the "get-rich-quick" expert of other days was taken away to post a $1,000 bond pending hearings on the Federal Government's order that he be deported to Italy.

Ponzi emerged from the Massachusetts State Prison 40 pounds heavier than when he entered 11 years ago.

The braggadocio air was gone and, in its place, a subdued but smiling reserve.

He felt, he said, he had expiated his offenses.

"Eleven years and seven months," he said. "That's the length of time I served, in all. No one can fool me about that. I counted every day of it."

Ponzi said he had no definite plans and was unable to look further in the future than today's luncheon.

Ponzi praised the treatment he received in prison, where he was a clerk, and the godspeeds accorded him by prison officials and trusties who crowded about to shake his hand indicated that he left some friends behind.

Miss Mary Ward, immigration commissioner, admitted him to the customary bail of $1,000. The Washington authorities already had granted him a 90-day stay at the urgent plea of his young wife.

Georgia Bank Loses $10,000 Cash, Bonds

Lincolnton, Ga., Feb. 14 (AP).—Ten thousand dollars in cash and a number of securities were stolen today by burglars who blew the safe of the Farmers State Bank. The money was taken from vaults of the bank and the securities from private lock boxes.

Traylor's Breathing Stops Two Minutes

Chicago, Feb. 14 (AP).—Melvin A. Traylor stopped breathing for two minutes early today and only heroic measures by his physicians started his respiration again.

The banker, victim of pneumonia for a month, was very low during the early hours, but again as the morning wore on he rallied. Traylor still essays a cheerful attitude during his waking hours.

William Humphrey Dies After Stroke

Former Trade Official, 71, Had Served Many Years in Congress.

William E. Humphrey, 71, former Federal Trade Commissioner, who was removed by President Roosevelt, died suddenly last night as the result of a stroke.

He had been in frail health for several months, but at no time had his condition been considered alarming.

The President's action in removing Humphrey as a member of the Trade Commission stirred a controversy which still is rumbling in Congres sand forms the basis of Humphrey's suit in the Court of Claims here to contest Mr. Roosevelt's authority and to collect back salary.

Humphrey, born near Alamo, Ind., was a member of Congress from Washington from 1902 until 1917. In the latter year he sought the Republican nomination for Senator from Washington and was defeated.

After his service in Congress, Humphrey practiced law here and in Seattle until 1925 when he was appointed to the trade commission by President Coolidge for a six-year term. He was named again in 1931 by President Hoover for another six-year term.

Bank Reform Steps Taken By President

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt made two moves yesterday significant of Administration desire for banking reform and revival of private enterprise.

He agreed to a year's postponement of the permanent bank deposit guaranty law, leaving the way open for further study and reform of the country's banking structure.

Bankers are united in the view that the important thing is to assure sound banking rather than to insure unsound banking.

He disclosed that he will confer today with Gov. Black of the Federal Reserve Board and other officials on the problem of stimulating bank loans. While some Administration adviser are still urging Federal guarantee, in part, of long-term bank loans, Gov. Black and Treasury officials are not in favor of it.

Conservative opinion has been all along that, here again, the basic trouble is lack of confidence rather than lack of capital for loans, and that Government guaranty of loans is no more a basic remedy than Government guaranty of bank deposits.

Lending Prostrated.

Treasury opinion is that the President will not venture into guaranteeing loans. As stated in these columns some time ago he had rejected the idea of direct Federal loans, but some of his advisers were studying the idea of some form of Federal guaranty of loans.

However, this move at this time

John D., Sr., Basks In a New Sun Room

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Installation of a sun room at the Pocantico Hills estate of John D. Rockefeller, sr., has convinced friends the millionaire oil man intends to abandon his annual trip to Florida this winter.

Farley Bares Air Contract Award Plot

Lines Were Overpaid 46 Million Since 1930, He Asserts.

Air-mail contracts were divided among carriers by agreement, no competitive bids were received and aviation companies were overpaid a total of $46,800,000 beginning with the fiscal year 1930 and ending with December 31, 1933, Postmaster General James A. Farley charged yesterday.

The charges, together with letters and documents, were sent by Farley to Senator Hugo Black, chairman of the committee investigating air-mail contracts. The letter and copies of documents were in explanation of the reason for cancelling all domestic air-mail contracts.

With one possible exception, Farley charged, "all the present domestic air-mail carriers secured contracts based on conspiracy or collusion." The "possible exception," Farley said, is the National Parks Airways, "which will be given further consideration."

Meeting Is Revealed.

Farley related in detail a story of meetings at which contracts were divided by agreement. Some of the meetings, he declared, were held at the Postoffice Department and Walter F. Brown, then Postmaster General, was present. Farley presented Black with documents purporting to be minutes of these meetings.

Farley charged that only favored companies were admitted to the meetings and that representatives of other companies were denied admission.

"I do not believe," Farley said, "Congress intended that the air-mail appropriation should be expended for the benefit of a few favored corporations, which could use the funds as the basis of wild stock promoters who invested little or no capital. Nor was it intended to be used by great corporations as a club to force competitors out of business and into bankruptcy. Nor should

Savants Find Perfect Eclipse On Pacific Isle to Test Einstein

Losap, Caroline Islands, Feb. 14 (AP).—Scores of photographs which they believe will contribute greatly to further studies of light were obtained today by American and Japanese scientists during a total solar eclipse.

Because of cloudless skies and careful preparations the scientists who journeyed to this lonely mid-Pacific isle declared themselves as confident they had conducted one of the most successful expeditions in the history of astronomy.

They were interested particularly in two problems, involving a determination of whether light of the sun's corona is direct or reflected, and the angle of deflection of the sun's light—which bears on Prof. Einstein's relativity theory.

Losap's 350 natives, after three weeks' schooling in the purpose of the astronomers, showed none of primitive man's customary terror at the awesome spectacle, as the scientists had feared. Japanese marines were not far off to help if natives accused the visitors of interfering with nature.

Instead, most of the natives were equipped with smoked glass—which the scientists had tught them to make. They clapped their hands in childish glee as the sun slowly

Ocean Mail Shakeup Set; Farley Snaps Back at Lindy

Lacked All Facts, His Reply to Eagle

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Complete revamping of ocean-mail contracts is planned by the Administration, President Roosevelt revealed yesterday. At the same time, Postmaster General Farley, replying to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's criticism of his order canceling air-mail contracts, said that had the noted flier known "all the facts," he would not have believed any injustice would be done to air transport companies.

Other developments in the mail-contract controversy included:

Announcement that Mr. Farley will contest court action brought in New York to restrain his cancellation of air-mail contracts on the grounds the District Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction.

Extension of the emergency air-mail network to be flown by the Army Air Corps next Tuesday by three more routes, which total 739 miles and bring to 11,845 the mileage on the immediate schedule.

Criticism of Col. Lindbergh by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, retired Air Corps chief, who declared, "Among airmen, Col. Lindbergh has just sold his aeronautical heritage for a mess of pottage."

Introduction in the House of an Administration bill to legalize Army operation of the air-mail routes and to authorize short-term air-mail contracts with independent carriers.

Disclosure of plans by the House Naval Affairs Committee, with Presidential approval, to open up income tax returns of aircraft companies in its investigation of an "air trust."

U. S. Ocean Subsidy Aim.

Sweeping clean the whole mail-contract system of the Postoffice Department, the President wants ocean mail placed on an entirely new basis to provide in its place a frank subsidy to maintain the American flag in world commerce. This he freely told questioners at his press conference, reviving a problem still under investigation by the Black Senate committee.

First of all, the President believes Government aid to shipping should be called a subsidy—as its correct name—instead of employing the subterfuge of mail contracts. He favors continuing subsidies to keep the merchant marine abreast of foreign nations, but wants a thorough overhauling of the present contract system.

Because of the subterfuge, some shipping companies are receiving

4 Doggies Going To Last Round-up For Hurting Child

Cortland, N. Y., Feb. 14 (AP).—Sport, Pal, Curley and Jack, convicted of being "murderous dogs," tomorrow will pay with their lives for an attack that may cost Joyce Hammond, 6, the use of her right arm.

Joyce knows nothing about the forthcoming execution. She has been told only that the dogs are "locked up." In a hospital here she played with a hundred valentines sent by friends.

For the condemned animals there will be no special last meal in the morning. The village of McGraw, paying the cost of keeping them in barred cages at an animal hospital here, and the cost of the execution, saw no reason for increasing their charge.

Loyal Austrian Troops Mass For Dawn Attack to Crush Socialists and End Civil War

It's Brother Against Brother in Austria

Wide World Photos.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Vienna, Feb. 15 (Thursday) (U.P.).—The government massed Loyalist forces early today for an attack before dawn on Socialist strongholds in an offensive designed to overwhelm the Socialistic army.

Government troops and Heimwehr units concentrated preparatory to storming the Reichbridge over the Danube.

Chancellor Dollfuss, meanwhile, hoped for peace, possibly today. He made a passionate radio appeal to the nation last night to support his government and offered pardons to all who surrendered by noon today.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, Feb. 14 (A.P.).—Beaten back by a terrific government cannonading, insurgent Socialists retreated tonight to a high hill near Vienna, where they were reforming their shattered ranks and preparing for another assault on the capital.

Under cover of darkness, it was estimated that 3,000 Socialists were throwing up breastworks and building machine gun placements while street fighting continued in Vienna's body-strewn workers' sections.

The number of dead in the three days of bombardments and terror was estimated at 1,000 to 1,500, among them many women and children—fighters, too, with their men, or helpless victims of shells that wrecked their homes.

Socialists claimed that Julius Deutsch, general secretary of the Socialist party and commander in chief of the outlawed Republican Guards, was directing their "strategic retreat" and pointing them for a march on Vienna.

Murrell Freed In 45 Minutes By Attack Jury

Frame-up Claim Supported and Former Football Star Exonerated.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 14 (U.P.).—A Federal jury took only 45 minutes tonight to bring in a verdict acquitting Lieut. John Murrel, U. S. A., of charges that he attacked a Birmingham divorcee on a Government reservation.

The verdict, returned by a jury of three farmers and nine business men, exonerated the former West Pointer and all-American football star, who had claimed from the start that the charges of Miss Blanche Ralls were a "frameup."

"I expected this kind of a verdict all the time," said the handsome

Czech Government Revision Is Forced

Revaluation of Currency Topples Cabinet.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 14 (AP).—The government of Czechoslovakia resigned today on account of the dissatisfaction of the Czech National Democrats over the recent devaluation of the currency.

The National Democratic party withdrew the minister of commerce, Josef Matousek, from the cabinet, and went into opposition to the government.

It was understood that Premier Malypetr would remain as head of the government and all other changes will be minor.

Birmingham Rocked By Two Bomb Blasts

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 14 (AP).—Bomb explosions early today rocked two neighborhoods of Birmingham. Police said they believed they were connected with the strike of laundry workers now in progress.

One of the bombs was set off beneath the home of Sam Filippo, an unemployed man and the other in a Negro section.

CWA Dismisses 150,000 Today; Dole Predicted

1,800 Lose Jobs in District as Demobilization Begins.

By Walton Onslow.

Demobilization of the Civil Works program will begin today as originally scheduled by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, with release of 150,000 workers on Federal CWA projects from the pay roll.

Dismantling of the huge relief program, bitterly opposed in Congress, was ordered begun by the works administration in the face of Senate predictions that 4,000,000 workers will be "on the dole and on the street" May 1. The action followed passage by the Senate of the bill providing $950,000,000 for the remainder of the CWA program and emergency relief.

The first step of national demobilization was taken when heads of Federal departments and bureaus were ordered to cut Civil Works staffs under their supervision 50 per cent, effective tonight. Orders to drop State and local civil workers in the deep South will follow immediately with release of regulations governing the winding up of the program by May 1.

1,800 Hit Here.

In the District the 13 CWA projects of the National Park and Planning Commission will be taken over by the local administration to save 1,400 workers their jobs. About 3,600 other persons are employed by other Federal bureaus here, and it is expected that the orders dis-

Narrowly Miss Death As Flames Raze House.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scholl, near Walkersville, narrowly escaped death when their home was destroyed by fire early today.

Making his way to a window, Scholl leaped and secured a ladder. While waiting rescue Mrs. Scholl was burned about the face. Scholl was awakened by dense smoke and discovered the stairway and downstairs in flames. He ran a quarter of a mile through the snow to the home of a neighbor and summoned assistance. Firemen of the Independent Hose Company made a run of 10 miles and fought the fire two hours, saving the barn, wagon shed and other outbuildings.

Hitler Moves To Make Reich A Single State

Berlin, Feb. 14 (AP).—The government of Chancellor Adolf Hitler moved today toward the formation of a single, unified state to replace the 17 individual federated states composing the German Reich.

By decree, the central power controlling all Germany abolished the Reichsrat, last stronghold of the federation. The Reichsrat, or federal council, represented the single states in the Reich.

Elimination of the council, which well-informed circles believe will eventually lead to complete effacement of individual state lines, was viewed as another move by the chancellor toward complete unification of all political units and agencies in Germany.

The single states virtually have been without power for nearly a year. In March, 1933, Chancellor Hitler stripped them of their rights under the constitution when he ob-

O'Hara Poem Again to Mark Arlington 'Bivouac of the Dead'

"On fame's eternal camping ground,
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

Col. Theodore O'Hara's immortal verses, "The Bivouac of the Dead," will return to Arlington Cemetery in an honored place.

It was announced yesterday that the poem, honoring "the brave and fallen few" will be inscribed on the wall of the trophy room in the Ampitheater opposite the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The poem once was scattered through the grounds, stanza by stanza, on iron markers. They were removed six years ago because of "unsightliness."

The decision to place the poem back in the cemetery is a compromise, Representative Virgil Chapman, of Kentucky, said in making the announcement.

Representative Chapman recently introduced a bill to restore the markers. He will not press his bill, he said, because he feels the poem will be read by more persons from the Ampitheater wall.

Agitation for restoration of the marker came originally from Kentucky. Col. O'Hara, a major in the Mexican War and a staff officer in the Civil War in the Confederate Army, was a Kentuckian.

His poem was written and read publicly when Kentuckians killed in the Mexican War were brought back to Frankfort for burial.

On this occasion, Henry Clay, whose son was among those whose bodies returned to Kentucky, listened to the poem.

The War Department, which has jurisdiction over the cemetery, has not given official sanction to the new inscription, but it is understood officials are favorable.

2 Army Corps Move to Border; London, Rome Fight League Appeal.

Rome, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—A formidable concentration of troops on the Italian-Austrian frontier was ordered by Premier Mussolini tonight. The movement was described officially as a purely "precautionary measure."

Two army corps from Bolzano and Udine were moved up to the border.

It is understood this concentration of troops was ordered when events at Vienna looked doubtful. If the Dollfuss Loyalists retain control, the units may be withdrawn.

London, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—The British and Italian governments are determined to prevent Austria from appealing to the League of Nations at present, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

Geneva, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Chancellor Dollfuss, of Austria, probably will appeal to the League of Nations next week to head off trouble with the Nazis, members of the League believed tonight.

In the event Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, head of the semi-Fascist Heimwehr, dissuades Dollfuss against the appeal, it was considered likely that a major power would bring the matter to Geneva's attention.

The Austrian delegate visited the League secretariat this afternoon.

Laughing Lads Drop Cigarets To Open Fire

By Harold Peters.
(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Vienna, Feb. 14.—A Conglomerate army, made up of regular troops, police, members of the Heimwehr and laughing, eager youths in civilian togs, is conducting the offensive against the Heiligenstat district, a workers' quarters, north of Vienna, where the Karl Marx Hof is located.

I rode into the district by taxicab today, to a point where it became necessary for me to proceed on foot.

Guns roared fro mboth sides of the lines as we approached the Floridsdorf Bridge, where I had to leave the taxi and walk. The incessant chatter of machine guns ceased as I came close to the bridge, both sides having ceased firing long enough to permit two ambulances, bearing wounded, to dash by.

Watches Attack Start.

From the Floridsdorf end of the bridge I could see a block of workers' houses on a hill occupied by a Schutzbund unit. The attack against these houses started as I watched.

I could see a detachment of troops concentrated in a hollow near the bridge, awaiting the order to move against the block of houses. The men were smiling, poking with one another and smoking cigarettes with extreme nochalance. Many of them wore civilian clothes, indicating that they were volunteers, and many of these were young—mere boys, who seemed to act as though they were on a lark.

Then came the order to attack. Where they had been paying little or no attention to the activity about them a minute before, they suddenly moved forward, pouring volley after volley into the workmen's houses. Snipers on the other side returned the fire relentlessly, adding to the din.

One detachment of cavalry and one of light artillery prepared to storm the stronghold as we moved on, in full sight of the raging battle. I had rejoined by driver, who was determined to leave the sector with all possible speed.

Shell Socialist Stronghold.

In the neighborhood of Philadelphia Bridge, we found artillerymen working, sending their shells into the Socialist stronghold. The Socialists, it became apparent, had equipped themselves with fresh supplies of rifles, and were sniping at military patrols.

Toward evening, as we continued our jaunt through the bullet-riddled district, I saw a Schutzbund rebel band reach the roof of a house near the so-called Rennweg barracks. They began firing directly into the barracks from their hazardous position. A battery of artillery, believed to have been from the Kagran district, already had been firing in the vicinity for an hour or more, and the so-called Goethehof was in ames.

Bremer Kidnap Hunters Silent

St. Paul, Feb. 14 (AP).—A secret trip to Iowa by three county officers and another conference of Federal agents with Edward G. Bremer headlined activities today in the investigation of Bremer's abduction for $200,000 ransom.

Federal investigators also were reported interested in the seizure in Minneapolis of an automobile detectives said contained a chloroform mask and other paraphernalia which might have been used by abductors. Police there questioned Edward Doran, 24, wanted in Duluth, Minn., on robbery charges.

Bremer, still suffering from injuries received when he was kidnaped January 17 and from his three weeks long captivity, held further conferences with Federal officers.

They refused to reveal what transpired and also declined to comment on reports attributed to the Portland (Maine) Express that investigators were seeking the Bremer kidnapers in that State.

Charlotte C. Lyman Given Police Guard

Boston Society Girl Was Target of Threats.

Boston, Feb. 14 (AP).—Miss Charlotte Condit Lyman, Boston society girl, was given police protection for several days recently because of the mutterings of a man on a Beacon Hill street near home, Capt. Joseph McKinnon of the Boston police department said today.

Capt. McKinnon said one of his patrolmen heard the man muttering about the Lyman family as he walked the street and the officer took him to the station house for questioning. The official said the man was released because it soon became apparent that he was harmless although slightly mentally unbalanced.

Railway Labor Leader Asks New Fraud Trial

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 14 (AP).—A motion for a new trial for Alvanley Johnston, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and former director of the closed Standard Trust Co., was filed by his attorneys today.

Johnston was convicted last week with C. Stirling Smith, former president of the bank, on nine counts of an indictment charging misappropriation of $450,000 of bank funds and making or directing false entries.

"By the Rockets' Red Glare—"

Citizens of Steyr, Austria, last night saw the remains of their ravaged homes consumed by flames as Socialists hurled incendiary bombs to halt the advances of loyal Austrian troops. This splendid panorama shows the peaceful industrial city in northern Austria before war laid its red hand on the nation.

the troops' onslaught against the Socialists—a small army had encamped.

Fifteen field pieces, 12 mounted machine guns, field kitchens and other equipment were rolled hurriedly into the darkened streets after the defenders had been forced back.

Machine gunners trained their weapons on the windows and roofs of adjacent houses.

Small knots of men and women, clustered in pathetic, solemn groups here and there through the shell-torn area, discussed the arrest of 2,000 Socialists, imprisoned for their civil war against a "Fascist government threat."

In upper Austria, meanwhile, the situation was tense. Security Director Hammerstein, at Linz, demanded that Socialists surrender arms and ammunition within 24 hours.

He offered a general amnesty if this is done, and ordered searches of houses.

Threatens to Dynamite Homes.

"Any active or passive resistance to this action on the part of householders," he declared, "will be broken under all circumstances; in case of armed resistance, houses will be dynamited."

Chancellor Dollfuss declared the threat to his administration "has failed," and that "the federal government is stronger than ever," but more troops were rushed here, fighting continued sporadically, and the nation was tense.

Graz reported 127 deaths in fighting there. At Linz, more than 100 had died.

American and German diplomatic circles, meanwhile, kept in close touch with developments and made every effort to obtain first-hand information.

Americans Brave Bullets.

Near the George Washington Court—one of the largest model tenements—a Socialist prisoner attempted to escape from police, but was shot down a short distance from where Harris stood.

Alfred Kliefoth, American charge d'affaires, also made a personal tour of these districts.

The German government sent trimotored planes to be held in readiness to fly the German legation staff to Berlin for consultations, should the need arise.

An unverified report said Socialists had captured the district police headquarters in the Ottakring workers' district and near the Socialist headquarters, destroyed by fire Tuesday morning.

The Voethe Hof municipal apartment block in Kaiser-Muehlen, south of Floridsdorf, burned tonight as a result of shelling.

Retreating Socialist forces from Floridsdorf and Jedlasee districts found shelter in the Voethe Hof and so increased the strength of the Socialist group there that army leaders decided to use howitzers in order to break the resistance.

The chief of the Floridsdorf fire department, George Weissel, was sentenced to death by a court-martial tonight for participation in the revolt. Unless pardoned, his execution by hanging was set for 43 minutes after midnight Thursday.

Weissel was charged with supplying the staff of the fire station with arms and directing their attacks against loyal troops.

Gallows Gets First Victim.

Spokesmen for both the government and the dissidents claimed ultimate victory; 36 societies were outlawed as being Socialistic; the gallows claimed its first victim among those who led the civil conflict.

How many were wounded could only be guessed, but the number was said to run into the thousands.

In the ruined Floridsdorf district across the Danube, a survey indicated that at least one woman or child was killed to every 20 male casualties.

Government troopers gained control of the Floridsdorf section and there followed a momentary lull in the strife, but this evening the fratricidal struggle resumed, the Socialists retreating from barricade to barricade as the firing continued.

The soldiers then turned upon nearby Garden City and forced defenders there to surrender.

In Linz, capital of upper Austria, where the fighting started Monday when Socialist quarters were raided and Socialists defied a "government Fascist threat" and declared a general strike, soldiers and police had control.

The force of the strike waned today. Street cars were running and vital services were being restored.

Socialists were routed from their North Railway station stronghold after a fierce encounter. Thereupon, troops invaded the Vienna Municipal Apartments, shortly after dawn, driving the stubbornly fighting Socialists before them.

Government Withholds Details.

From that point until a mid-afternoon lull, skirmishes took place when the defenders, pushed into traps during running battles, renewed their resistance.

The government gave out no details of victims, fearing that the public excitement would be aroused to an even higher pitch.

All Austrian schools, meanwhile, were closed for an indefinite period under a government decree.

A reorganization of the Dollfuss cabinet was considered in government circles. Men of Rightist beliefs, it was expected, would replace three members, Finance Minister Karl Buresch, Social Welfare Minister Richard Schmitz, and Dr. Robert Kerbert, minister without portfolio.

Socialist forces near Bruckandermur, Syria, were reported to have fled into a nearby forest. Fighting continued this afternoon between troops and Socialists at Fuchsenfeld.

Dollfuss declared railway traffic has been punctual and that utilities services continued. He inspected troop operations in Vienna suburbs.

Simultaneously, police with bayonets fixed were deployed about the Central Savings Bank of Vienna to keep in line thousands of frightened depositors, who rushed to rescue their savings.

Moving swiftly to punish the guilty in the disorders, a court-martial tried a 43-year-old cobbler and sentenced him to be hanged.

He was executed 2 hours later even though he was seriously wounded in Monday's fighting and was carried from a hospital to the courtroom.

Floridsdorf in Ruins.

A tour of the Floridsdorf suburb this morning showed that important Socialist center and factory district to be a shell-torn ruin.

Tomas street was strewn with dead. Many buildings were demolished by government artillery fire. Several were in flames. Sporadic shooting continued after the bombardment ceased.

Socialist barricades, deserted, were shattered. Trolley and telephone wires hung limp. So many were wounded in the siege that there were not enough taxis or automobiles to take them to hospitals.

A government artillery officer estimated that 100 persons had been killed in that neighborhood alone.

In the Schlinger municipal apartment house—which burned for hours after the shelling—women fought beside their menfolk through the night and early day.

A lieutenant in that area said that "women apparently insisted on remaining to help carry munitions and reload rifles" during the death-dealing barrage.

"And I have no doubt," he added thoughtfully, "there were plenty of innocent noncombatants who had no choice but to go through this shelling with them.

"But we, too, had no choice.

"The machine gun nests in this building were doing murder to our men. We had to shoot back.

"We had to smash those machine gunners. Under the circumstances, only the artillery could do it."

A soldier said only a few dead and wounded were found inside the shattered Schlingerhof—"the Socialists took their fallen with them when they fled."

At the nearby Socialist headquarters, firemen were leisurely laying hose to extinguish a blaze, which spread to an adjacent theater. Outside lay a waist-high pile of cartridge belts seized from Socialists.

Death Penalties Expected.

The shoemaker, Karl Muenichreiter, was the first Socialist to die on the gallows since the restoration of the death penalty last year for disorders, as well as the first since the outbreak of the civil war.

In Linz, Graz and Vienna, 34 Socialists faced courts martial in connection with the Socialist general strike and warfare. Death penalties were expected.

The Bourgeois section of the Vienna population clamored for the ruthless punishment of the arrested leaders, including former Socialist Burgomeister Seitz.

Fighting was said to be continuing in Steyr, Eggenberg, Bruckandermur, Judenburg, Woergl and Kufstein.

Socialist headquarters in Eggenberg were officially reported destroyed.

Reich Unification Started by Hitler

tained approval in both the Reichstag and Reichsrat of an enabling act, giving him dictatorial powers for four years.

Under provisions of the enabling act, the Reichsrat became practically superfluous because administrative measures, previously communicated to the states through the federal council, were sent directly to the statthalters, or state governors.

The council, like the Reichstag or House of Representatives, has for some time been 100 per cent Nazi, and if it met at all, it merely said "yes" to any request to the Hitler regime. The Reichstag does the same, and may, in the near future, also be abolished, many believe, since it recently gave the chancellor power to change the constitution at will.

Elimination of the Reichsrat abrogated section 4, comprising articles 60 to 67 of the constitution. This section provided that 66 members representing the states form a federal council.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 14 (AP).—Dr. Frederick A. Collins, professor of surgery at the University of Michigan, does not approve of large doses of castor oil any more than the average child.

Although dietary indiscretions are often blamed for abdominal pains, he said today, food poisoning is rare. These pains usually may be traced to appendicitis, he said.

"Resignation" Hotly Denied By Woodring

War Aid Says He Has Not Considered Move; Again Before Probe.

A terse statement from Assistant Secretary of War Woodring again denied his persistently rumored resignation yesterday as the District grand jury prepared to close its two weeks' investigation of alleged War Department purchases irregularities.

"Neither officially nor unofficially have I discussed, nor has any one discussed with me, the subject of a resignation," the Woodring statement said.

Woodring's resignation has been rumored following disclosures of allegedly irregular war material purchases by a Congressional committee. Joseph Silverman, war materials dealer, was barred from the War Department by Woodring following an investigation. Woodring was criticized recently for a magazine article in which he emphasized the military possibilities of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The grand jury's investigation of War Department purchases, including those made or to be made in connection with the Army's $10,000,000 motorization program was expected to end today. U. S. Attorney Leslie Garnett said the last witness had been subpenaed and would probably appear today. He indicated that no additional witnesses would be called.

Motor Aid Testifies.

Having retained Frank J. Hogan, attorney for William P. MacCracken, as counsel, Col. A. C. Downey, of the Fargo Co., distributors of Chrysler Motor Co. products, was called before the jury to relate, presumably, details of the bid his concern was prepared to submit to obtain a portion of the motorization awards.

More than a score of witnesses including leading automobile officials and Army officers have been called by the jury to tell what they know about alleged "influence" in connection with War Department purchases. The jury is expected to bring in a report next week.

Silverman, the only individual directly associated by name to the inquiry so far, sent a letter to War Secretary Dern last night in which he said the department was about to lose $700,000 because his firm had been barred from bidding on Government contracts.

He referred to the purchase of underwear at the Philadelphia quartermaster depot and said his concern had offered to sell similar materials at a saving of more than $1 a garment.

It was recalled that Silverman's name had been linked in rumors with attempts to resell at a higher figure clothing purchased from the department's war supplies.

Ask Personal Hearing.

"We feel," his letter said, "that not only have we been improperly treated in this matter to our very serious injury, but the action has been against the best interests of the Government.

"We therefore respectfully request that no awards be made on the Philadelphia proposals pending an opportunity for us to prove to your satisfaction the merits and advantages to the Government of carrying out the contract of December 12, 1933 (in which the company made the offer), and to this end we respectfully request a personal hearing by you in order that all the facts in connection therewith may be at your command before action is taken by your department.

"As before stated, if our contract is not approved and carried out, and if the Philadelphia proposals are accepted, it will result in a loss to the Government of at least $700,000."

Nazis Content To Stay Aloof Until 'Der Tag'

Hitlerites Want No Blame; Austria "Anschluss" Held Certain.

Berlin, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Chancellor Hitler, founder of the Nazis, and his aids are playing a "watchful waiting" game regarding the Socialist rebellion in Austria.

The Hitlerites are leaning backwards to keep hands off during the present turmoil. They want no blame to be attached to Berlin for any violence in Austria, feeling, at the same time, that the rebellion is working swiftly to the Nazis' ends—an "anschluss," or absorption of Austria into the Germanic state.

Whether the Nazi high command sent out a formal order demanding noninterference or even the appearance of such an evil at the present delicate puncture, remained conjectural, but probable. It is recognized here that any move by the German Nazis would bring bad results from the former allied powers, and the Nazis are more convinced daily that Oustria eventually will come to them of her own accord.

"Regenerates" Cared For.

Meanwhile, between 5,000 and 10,000 Austrian "regenerates" are being cared for and trained in several camps throughout the Reich, for use when "der tag" comes and Austria is taken over by the Nazis.

The principal camp at Lechfeld was said to have had as many as 14,000 inhabitants until its recent dissolution, purportedly at the request of the Italian government.

The present main group is near the town of Hof, in Bavaria, about 200 miles from the Austrian border. Smaller camps near the frontier are located at Freilassing, Burghausen, Tittmoning and Aibling.

No Military Training.

The Austrians living in these Nazi camps are occupied with voluntary labor services, sport and exercises. Military training is forbidden.

Most of these expatriates are farmers and workers who have emigrated from Austria on the grounds they were persecuted by the government there. Some are students and former civil service employes.

The exodus from war-torn Austria continues, most of the refugees living on money raised among Austrians living in Germany.

Flow of Gold To U. S. Nears 200 Million

100 Million Weekly Has Arrived Since Dollar Revaluation.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Feb. 14.—Revaluation of the dollar has started a stream of gold flowing toward the United States at the rate of some $100,000,000 a week. What does this tidal wave of precious metal toward our shores mean?

Wall street monetary experts, asked this question, replied that for the moment, at least, it represents an adjustment of world currencies to the new dollar of 15 5-21 grains of gold.

The opinion was widely held that with the approach of the dollar to its new parities with other currencies, the movement might shortly begin to subside.

A number of factors, however, it was pointed out, might tend to keep the flow in motion. Among these were mentioned further political disturbances in Europe, or a war scare, which might frighten a huge amount of foreign capital to seek haven in New York. Another might be further heavy repatriation of American funds. And a third might be a speculative boom in American markets which would attract foreign capital.

French Supply Hit.

How long such a large movement might continue was said to be conjectural, but it was felt in several quarters that it could not go on longer than a few months, for so large a flow of metal could be kept up only by making inroads into the gold reserves of France and other gold standards countries, which would eventually prompt defensive measures.

Is this huge rush of gold to the United States desirable? Wall Street experts were asked.

In the long run, most said, it is undesirable, for it tends to aggravate what is already a serious maldistribution of the world's gold supply, but a heavy movement of short duration may be considered desirable, in that it tends to bring the value of the dollar in terms of other currencies down to its new parity in terms of gold.

What if France and the other gold standard countries take defensive measures? The answer to this question was that in so doing they would abandon the free gold standard. Opinion as to the significance of this was mixed. Some thought it would aggravate current international monetary chaos, might delay world recovery. Others said it might hasten a general revaluation of currencies, and speed world recovery.

More Gold Not Needed.

The gold which the United States is receiving in the present movement, most Wall street monetary authorities said, is not needed in this country, which already has more than $7,000,000,000 in the precious metal, in terms of the new dollar, or more than a third of the world's total monetary gold supply.

It was explained that this was adequate basis for several times the total amount of currency and bank credit outstanding in this country even at the peak of prosperity. In fact, some thought it would be necessary for the Treasury effectively to "sterilize" a good part of the gold by holding it in its vaults and restricting the amount of currency and credit outstanding against it, to prevent dangerous inflation.

Some suggested that it may eventually be found desirable for the United States to give up a good part o fthe gold which it already holds, to give the world a better distribution and promote world recovery. It was recalled that President Roosevelt, in his monetary message of January 15, touched upon such an eventuality; he said the Treasury holdings of the gold might change in amount as "may be required by a future agreement among the nations of the world for a redistribution of the world stock of monetary gold."

While definite figures as to the amount of gold which has been purchased abroad for consignment to this country, since the dollar was revalued a fortnight ago, are lacking, it is estimated in the neighborhood of $200,000,00. This gold buying results from the fact that other currencies have not risen rapidly in terms of the dollar to their new parities. The dollar has been at a premium.

The premium has been narrowing of late, as dollars were offered in the foreign exchange market to buy currencies to pay for the gold, and today the dollar would buy little more than $1.01½ worth of gold in Paris.

Scientists Continue Stratosphere Study

More Balloons Sent Up by Weather Experts.

St. Louis Feb. 14 (AP).—Seeking secrets of the stratosphere which may eventually enable meteorologists to forecast weather changes with greater certainty, scientists at Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field today continued releasing at 2-hour intervals small hydrogen-filled balloons bearing sensitive recording instruments.

"This study," said Prof. Carl G. Rosby, meteorologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "will give up the structure of the wave disturbance passing over this section. A series of such experiments may in time give us information enabling us to forecast weather changes with greater certainty. This is just the start and we don't promise anything."

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

'NRA Needs an Overhauling'

Swope and Wagner Are Among Few Capable of Big Job.

By the Unofficial Observer.

William Averell Harriman, son of the late railroad magnate, has succeeded Malcolm Muir, president of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., who did an unimaginative but reasonably good piece of work as administrator in charge of construction, machinery and other heavy industries.

Harriman is not a Johnson man; he is a Roosevelt man.

In his early forties, Harriman had inherited an important place in the industrial and banking world. He is powerful in shipping and air transport circles, chairman of the executive committee of the Illinois Central and of the board of the Union Pacific. Tall, dark, slender, quiet but determined, he has a taste for experiment and adventure unusual in a business man. At one time he had a manganese concession in the Soviet Union and is now experimenting with a high-speed motor train on the Union Pacific.

Harriman, as Railroader, Willing to Experiment.

He is essentially very conservative, but he is a personal friend of F. D. R.'s and Roosevelt consulted him on railroad policy during the 1932 campaign. Roosevelt recognized him as a man of intelligence and took him in tow, giving him several special jobs to handle in 1933, one of which was to draft legislation for the relief of bankrupt municipalities.

When the NRA was first organized, Harriman was put in charge for the State of New York, where he did a pretty good job. Then, late in 1933, he was put on the Industrial Advisory Board and when Muir left, became divisional administrator in charge of heavy industry.

With his sister, Mary Rumsey, and Vincent Astor, another rich young ruler into whose head F. D. R. has smuggled some progressive ideas, Harriman is a financial backer and associate editor of Moley's pro-New Deal weekly magazine, Today. He even takes an active part in the editorial work of the magazine.

Harriman is a young man of brains, and happens to be one of the few men in the railroad business who is willing to experiment with new devices. He is not yet a liberal, but if exposed sufficiently long to the Roosevelt influence, he may become a pretty enlightened conservative. There are many in Washington who frankly prefer the enlightened self-interest of the progressive capitalist to the somewhat irresponsible doctrines of the professed radical. Fortunately, there is plenty of room for both in the New Deal.

Another Johnson man in the NRA is young Sol A. Rosenblatt, whom Johnson brought down from a Broadway law office to take charge of amusements and various industrial odds and ends. Rosenblatt is a native of Omaha who graduated from Harvard and Harvard Law with honors. He immediately settled down in New York and began specializing in copyright, motion picture and antitrust cases, in partnership with Nathan Burkan, the well-known Tammany district leader and Broadway lawyer.

In New York Rosenblatt became a personal friend of Johnson's who is himself an effective if somewhat unconventional lawyer. Rosenblatt is bustling and dynamic. He knows more about law and negotiation than about economics, but he does know the amusement business and Johnson needed a specialist for that purpose.

Whiteside, Thorough Tory, Lacks Elementary Economics.

Another old friend of Johnson's—crusty old Maj. Gen. Clarence Charles Williams, former Chief of Ordnance of the U. S. Army, was originally put in charge of chemicals, leathers and similar industries. Hard-boiled but popular, he knew the chemical industry inside out and, as an old army man, could think in terms of the Government interest.

His job was taken over by Maj. George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen's and Assistant Unions, a man whom New York City publishers consider a "reasonable" labor leader. A major of engineers in the A. E. F. and one of the founders of the American Legion, Berry was once pretty reactionary. However, he is regarded as liberal in the American Federation of Labor.

Another of Johnson's friends, Arthur D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, is in charge of textiles and the wholesale and retail business. A Princeton graduate, now in his early fifties, Whiteside organized the National Credit Bureau and has been its president since 1912. He served with the War Trade Intelligence and the War Industries Board during the Word War. For three years he was president of the American Wool Institute and in 1931 took over Dun & Bradstreet.

As this record suggests, he is a thorough Tory. He has been on the job since the early days of the NRA and his codes are among those which are causing the most trouble. With a mind steeped in AAA credit rating based on merciless profits, he has never grasped elementary economics or the need of increasing purchasing power.

He—of all people—was named by Johnson to preside at the vitally important price increase hearing in January, 1934.

It was the first chance the frustrated Consumers Advisory Board had to show that in many industries the NRA instead of increasing was decreasing purchasing power by excessive price increases made possible by the NRA open price agreements and prohibitions against selling below cost. Whiteside practically squelched the Consumers Advisory Board and bottled up their data while he permitted George Sloan, of the Cotton Textile Institute, to read a long, meandering statement which attempted to justify increased prices in the cotton textile industry.

Johnson Sees Error, But Profiteering Goes On.

It was not until several unfavorable newspaper stories were published the next morning, causing Johnson, who reacts instantly to the press, to step in, that Whiteside saw that he had gone too far. He had undergone a wondrous change before the next session and the Consumers Advisory Board was permitted to state its case. But the change was purely expedient and, of course, nothing was done to check the profiteering.

Of all the men whom Johnson has installed in important positions in the administration of the NRA, only one—William H. Davis—stands out as a man who is both able and broad-minded enough to make the experiment work.

Davis is the new National compliance director, the chief enforcement officer of the NRA. A New Englander who has practiced law in New York since 1902; during the war Davis served with Col. Lea in the division of purchase, storage and traffic in the general staff, later becoming a legal adviser to the War Department. After the war, he took charge of adjusting the settlement of war contracts and Newton D. Baker put him on the appeals board before which troublesome contract cases were heard. He was one of the "dollar a year men" and he was worth millions to the Government.

Incidentally, he is an old friend of Frances Perkins, although she was not originally responsible for his coming into the NRA. He began as a division administrator and handled some of the most difficult codes. Astute, clear-headed and one of the few real students in the NRA, before he tackled a code he familiarized himself with the industry involved. He is a stronghold of calm and precision in the NRA hurly-burly. In a mediocre organization, he is a tower of strength.

Complete Overhauling Of Personnel Needed.

The NRA needs a complete overhauling in personnel. Some of the newer men may show up well in time and some of the lesser lights among the deputy administrators are able, but on the whole the staff is distinctly inferior in brains and in efficiency to the staff of J. P. Morgan & Co. and to any one of the 50 major industrial and financial organizations.

Prominent among the administrators of the NRA are the two men who served as its industrial and legislative parents: Gerard Swope, of the General Electric Co., and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York.

Swope, without question is one of the most far-sighted of American industrialists. Cynics might assert that he has made clever use of his clairvoyance to short-circuit class-conflict and to protect the big units of the electrical industry. It is true that he has done exactly that, but he is more than shrewd. All indications are that his mind really runs toward social planning and that his intellectual curiosity, fertility of social invention, and broad philosophy of life are the marks of a really big man.

This is a paradox, for he is not only a capitalist by heredity as well as profession but he is over 60 years old, having been born in St. Louis, the son of a shoe manufacturer. In 1895 he received his degree in electrical engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, when he had already been working for two years with the infant General Electric Co.

Swope Attitude Held Blow to Unionization.

After graduation, however, he entered the employ of the Western Electric Co., rising in its ranks until, in 1919, he was elected president of the International General Electric Co., and three years later of the General Electric Co. itself.

In this capacity he is also director of a score of big companies in the field of electrical utilities and communications in France, Great Britain, Italy and other foreign countries—one of our real Big Business magnates. Like several others in the NRA, during the war he served on the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Division of the General Staff.

Swope is short, slender, filled with nervous energy and continually briming over with ideas. He believes in widely distributed ownership of our big industries, in employe ownership, and in various insurance and pension schemes for the protection of industrial workers. Marxian critics contend that he and Owen D. Young in this way have bound their employes to their employers and thus frustrated the unionization of General Electric.

Swope's interests and responsibilities have been on the side of industrial management rather than finance, however, and he is thus one of the small clan of relatively disinterested industrial managers who think in terms of function rather than profit.

In 1931, he proposed the NRA in embryo: A way for industry to override the antitrust laws in return for added compensation and economic stability for labor. He suggested that the trade associations should draft agreements covering trade practices and so forth and submit them to the Federal Trade Commission or some other Federal agency for examinations. Approval of an agreement would automatically suspend the antitrust laws so far as the terms of the agreement were concerned. As part of these agreements he proposed to establish consolidated group insurance schemes for the whole industry, so that a worker would not forfeit his insurance by moving from one company to another.

The NRA found organized labor at its lowest ebb in a generation. The membership of the American Federation of Labor had fallen below the 3,000,000 mark and comprised less than one-tenth of all those "gainfully employed" in the United States. It maintained its power solely through the entrenched position of the craft unions in the old-line industries and by threatening big business with "communism" if the Federation bulwarks were removed. After four years of depression it was on its last legs. The wage-scale had collapsed and the Communist bugaboo had lost its power to terrify the conservatives.

Two Baltimore Prisoners Face Factor Charge

Cummings Urges Pair Be Turned Over for Chicago Trial.

Baltimore, Feb. 14 (AP).—State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor announced tonight that Maryland's charges against the alleged members of the Touhy gang captured here Sunday would be withdrawn and he would permit their return to Chicago to face charges of kidnaping John Factor, the speculator.

The announcement came after a telephone conversation with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in Washington. O'Conor said Cummings requested him to permit the kidnap charges to take precedence over the other charges.

"No consideration can be allowed to interfere with the efforts of the authorities to successfully carry out their campaign against bands of kidnapers," said O'Conor.

Three Face Charges.

Those under arrest are:

Basil H. (The Owl) Banghart, under indictment in Chicago in connection with the kidnaping of Factor and also wanted by the Federal Government for a $105,000 mail truck robbery in Charlotte, N. C., last November.

Isaac Costner, identified by Factor as a member of the gang of his abductors and also implicated in the mail truck robbery.

Mrs. Tom Touhy, who identified herself as the wife of a Chicago gang leader.

May Davis, who occupied an apartment with Banghart and is wanted by the Federal Government for alleged participation in the Charlotte holdup.

Four Jurors Named.

Chicago, Feb. 14 (AP).—Four jurors were selected today for the second trial of Roger Touhy and two others charged with the $70,000 John Factor kidnaping as reports were current that another member of Touhy's beer gang might turn State's evidence.

The reports involved Isaac Costner, arrested at Baltimore with Basil (the owl) Banghart. Factor has identified Costner as the man who brought him coffee and food and shielded him from the brutality of the other kidnapers during 12 days of imprisonment last July.

Earle, who has been in this country on leave of absence, likewise is a candidate for office this year, running for governor of Pennsylvania on the Democratic ticket.

Pacific Eclipse To Test Einstein disappeared, but when darkness came and the fiery crown later leaped from a blackened disk they seemed frightened.

The shadow began hiding the sun at 8.21:24 a. m. Totality began at 10.5:23.

A weird hush fell over the quiet natives and scientists—broken only by a watch ticking off 125 precious seconds and the clicking of cameras.

The camp of the expedition, its 16 tents, and a small forest of telescopes with a background of ghostly palm trees formed a strange spectacle in the dim light.

Dr. W. M. Cohn, of the University of California, had set up five telescopes.

Joseph J. Johnson, of the California Institute of Technology, was the other American. There were 33 Japanese observers.

This flat, coral island was considered the only suitable point for scientific observation of the eclipse.

Anderson Head Of Three-State Medical Group

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). The Tri-State Medical Association, of Virginia and the Carolinas, elected Dr. Paul V. Anderson, of Richmond, president at the end of the annual convention today, and agreed to meet next year in Charlotte, N. C.

Vice presidents elected were Dr. C. M. Gilmore, of Greensboro, N. C.; Dr. H. S. Hedges, of Charlottesville, and Dr. Junius H. Taylor, of Columbia, S. C. Dr. J. M. Northington, of Charlotte, was re-elected secretary.

New members received included Doctors John C. Anderson, of Chatham, Va.; H. H. Westcott, of Roanoke, and James A. Lyon, Thomas M. Foley, and Maurice Protas, all of Washington, and a number of Carolina physicians.

Alcoholism Discussed.

There are no specific remedies for alcoholism, and those like the "gold cure," which have been exploited as treatment for alcoholics have proved disappointing, Dr. W. C. Ashworth, of Greensboro, said in a scientific paper today. A gradual weaning away from the patient of liquors and morphine was said the most satisfactory way of treatment. A complete change in environments afterwards was held most necessary.

Dr. Frances Johnson, of Charleston, S. C., attacked the giving of free laboratory service by State health units to patients able to pay as discriminatory to physicians operating pathological clinics. He said there were 23 such private clinics in Virginia and the Carolinas.

Memorial services were held for four members of the Association who died since the 1933 meeting.

Giant Appears at Session.

Ralph Williams, colored laborer, of Shelby, N. C., 7 feet 7 inches tall, was one of the exhibits at the annual session.

Williams, brought to a clinic by W. J. Lackey, of Fallston, N. C., is suffering from a glandular derangement which has resulted in abnormal growth, known as gigantism.

Dr. John Peter Monroe, of Charlotte, N. C., former tri-State president, celebrated his first return to the university in 47 years. He was graduated in medicine here in 1886.

Another former president of the association participating in this year's session was Dr. Joseph A. White, 86. He fought in the Franco-Prussian War.

Speakers today were Dr. T. M. Foley, of Washington; Dr. C. R. Robins, of Richmond; Dr. J. W. Gibbon, of Charlotte, N. C.; Dr. J. G. Lyerly, of Richmond, and Dr. J. S. Torsley, jr., also of Richmond.

Clinics were conducted in psychiatry and orthopedics by Dr. D. C. Wilson and Dr. R. V. Funsten, of the university.

North Virginia Dentists Install C. W. Chewning

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Dr. C. W. Chewning, of Orange, Va., was installed as president of the Northern Virginia Dental Society at the annual meeting here today. Dr. W. G. Palmer, of Culpeper, was elected president, to be installed for 1935 and Dr. C. Rodriguez, of Leesburg, secretary-treasurer.

Fifty of the leading dentists of northern Virginia were present. Following the business session, Dr. A. M. Wash, of the Medical College of Virginia, spoke of "local anaesthesia."

Dr. A. O. James, also of the Virginia Medical College, spoke on "preparation of unusual cavities with indications and contra indications for various filling materials."

The evening session followed a dinner, at which time Dr. Herbert Cohn, of the Medical College of Virginia, instructed the dentists on "amalgamtechnic."

Convicted Lawyer Files for Release

Claims His Imprisonment Is Illegal.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Asserting that he is illegally confined in the Maryland Penitentiary, where he is serving a life term for murder, Louis Berman, a Baltimore attorney, filed in the circuit court here a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, based on a plea of insanity. Judge Arthur D. Willard set Friday for a hearing.

Berman was arrested in Baltimore June 4, 1928, on a charge of shooting and killing Clifton Brown, a Baltimore lawyer.

Indicating that he will revert to his plea of insanity at the time of the offense, Berman stated in his petition that when an accused person alleges insanity he must be given a sanity trial. He says he was not given a sanity trial and was convicted without due process of law.

Highway Police Cut Beaten in Virginia

Committee Buries Bill to Slash Force.

Richmond, Feb. 14 (AP).—T. McCall Frazier, director of the State division of motor vehicles, was victorious in a lively political scrap when the House committee on roads unanimously buried the bill of Delegate O. E. McCue, Albermarle, designed to cut State traffic officers from 100 to 75.

Mr. McCue said the bill was offered as an economy measure only.

Meanwhile the Senate committee on roads put aside indefinitely the Wise County bill which would permit the county to divert some of its road funds to refund bonds issued prior to the adoption of the Byrd road plan.

John D. Griffith, 80, To Be Buried Today

Resident of Martinsburg Born in Virginia.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—John David Griffith, 80, who died here yesterday, will be buried here tomorrow.

He was born in the White Hall section of Frederick County, Va., but came here when a boy.

Official Denies Expansion Plan By Virginia City

Fredericksburg Does Not Wish to Annex Two Arears, He Says.

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—A joint meeting of the Supervisors and School Board is expected to inform Fredericksburg whether that city will be allowed to use a portion of the work hours allotted the county under the second phase of civil works for extending sewers and water mains into Elwood City and Mayfield.

Levin J. Houston, jr., city manager of Fredericksburg, declares the city wishes the work done for sanitary purposes only, and not, as was feared by the county board, as preparation for annexing the two areas to Fredericksburg.

Mr. Houston claimed annexation would be unprofitable because added tax returns would not compensate the city for additional school facilities required. Failure of the board to grant hours to complete this work would make annexation more probable because the city could not permit unsanitary conditions to exist on its borders, Houston contended.

S. P. Powell, former Commonwealth's Attorney, has advanced a petition signed by Elwood City property owners advocating the extension, because of increased land values and other grounds.

The joint supervisors' and School Board meeting will decide whether school projects can get along on sufficiently few hours to grant the extension and whether to abandon other proposed projects in favor of sewer and water line extensions.

Survey Near Peak.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—The Virginia Historic American Building Survey has been built up approximately to its total strength pending orders for renewed CWA activities to make possible immediate additions, announces Philip N. Stern, State director of the survey.

The quota for Virginia is 30, of whom 24 are now engaged, said Mr. Stern.

Buildings being surveyed by the six local office workers include the Mary Washington Home, the Rising Sun Tavern, the John Marshall House near Marshall, and an old early type American log cabin near The Plains.

CWA Groups Cleared.

Louisa, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Exonerating the Louisa County Reemployment and Advisory committees of charges of "inefficiency" and "corruption," pressed last week by Dr. E. Barbour Pendleton, Frank Hartman, of Charlottesville, district civil works administrator, yesterday cleared the records of complaints against the accused organizations.

That the charges "had not been substantiated in any single case" after a hearing conducted here Monday was announced by Hartman, who commended members of the committees, headed by John Q. Rhodes, Louisa member of the General Assembly, on the performance of their duties.

Reservoir Nearly Ready.

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). If weather is favorable, work on the new reservoir here, the first CWA project approved in Virginia, will be completed in a few days. It probably will be the first Virginia CWA project of considerable size to be finished.

The sum of $11,036.62 was allotted for the reservoir which has a capacity of 5,000,000 gallons.

Virginian Flays Bill to Imprison Liquor Buyers

Control Board Salaries Put Up to Governor in Senate Measure.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 14.—Senate rejection of a liquor bill provision to imprison customers of bootleggers will be demanded tomorrow by Senator Aubrey C. Weaver, Front Royal.

His plan was announced after administration forces prevailed today in the first Senate test of whisky sentiment. The Senate approved, by 20 to 16, an amendment by Senator John W. Eggleston, Norfolk, to authorize the governor to fix salaries of control board members at any figure up to $7,500 a year.

Senator Cecil Connor, of Loudoun, in a speech lasting more than half an hour, asserted the $7,500 salary was more than was paid to the State treasurer, comptroller and other high officers.

Earlier the House killed by overwhelming majorities bills designed to permit local option elections on Sunday movies and sports. The measures were introduced by Delegate E. B. English, Richmond.

Mr. Weaver characterized as "utterly lacking in practical sense," a clause in the liquor bill as passed by the House which would make every person who bought a drink illegally subject to a fine of $500 and 12 months in jail. The provision would place buyer and seller on the same footing.

Weaver Ridicules Measure.

"That provision would double lawlessness," Mr. Weaver contended. "The bootleggers' chances of winning acquittal would be improved because he would have the advantage of the public sentiment favoring his customer."

He argued buyers would stand on their constitutional rights and refuse to testify against bootleggers for fear of self-incrimination.

"We didn't even have such a provision in the Cannon-Layman prohibition act," he added.

Mr. Weaver referred to Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Senator George W. Layman, New Castle, author of the old dry law.

Mr. Eggleston forced a vote on his $7,500 salary amendment after the Senate rejected, by 28 to 7, an amendment to pay the chairman $6,500 and the other two members $6,000 each. The House previously voted $5,000 salaries for all members.

"What Is Peanut Politician?"

When Senator Cecil Connor, Leesburg, sought to hold the compensation to $5,000, Eggleston charged he wanted a liquor board composed of "peanut politicians."

"What is a peanut politician?" Mr. Connor inquired.

"The senator from Loudoun County has been here long enough to know," the Norfolk member responded.

Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., Louisa, succeeded in delaying action on an amendment to require legislative confirmation of board members. Senator William M. Tuck, South Boston, champion of such an amendment, was absent.

Committees Rush Work.

Richmond, Feb. 14 (AP).—With a general agreement that committee action on bills within the next week is necessary if they are to have time to pass the two Houses, General Assembly committees today began speeding their work.

The Senate courts of justice committee reported favorably the Smith bill, which would prohibit the governor from appointing a judge to fill a vacancy during a recess of the General Assembly. The object of the bill is consolidation of judicial circuits.

The Senate privileges and elections committee reported the senatorial redistricting bill which would make two major changes. One of them would consolidate the districts now represented by Senator A. P. Staples and Senator Harvey Apperson, eliminating Senator Apperson's district, and providing that the consolidated district should be represented by two senators. The other change would take Rappahannock County from the district now represented by Senator Cecil Connor and put it in the district represented by Senator Aubrey G. Weaver.

Virginia House Rejects Sunday Movies, Sports

Compromise on Liquor Board Pay Adopted by Senate.

Richmond, Feb. 14 (AP).—The House of delegates today killed twin bills for legalizing Sunday movies and sports under local option, and the Senate adopted a compromise amendment on the subject of salaries for the proposed alcoholic beverage control board.

Tomorrow the Senate will consider the hgih-test beer excise tax reduction proposed by the Senate finance committee, State manufacture, and other controversial amendments

While there were reports that there would be a move to eliminate gas tax refunds, Senator W. O. Rogers, of Waverly, introduced a bill allowing the use of gas tax revenue for maintenance of the primary highway system.

Gas Tax Boost Proposed.

Meanwhile Senator Lloyd M. Robinette introduced a bill increasing the gas tax from 5 cents to 5½ cents, and provided that one-eleventh of the revenue be allocated to the localities for use in paying off road debts contracted locally before the enactment of the Byrd road law.

The Holt redistricting bill, passed by both houses yesterday, leaves the First and Second districts unchanged. The Third loses Goochland to the Eighth. The Fourth gains Appomattox, Buckingham and Cumberland. The Fifth gained Wythe from the Ninth. The Seventh gained the City of Charlottesville, and the counties of Greene, Albemarle, and Madison fro mthe Eighth.

The Upper House yesterday passed the Cather-Layman bill setting up the minimum education program principle, after removing from it all specific figures as to appropriations. The bill provides for the allocation of State funds for instructional costs on the basis of teachers.

Auditing Bills Passed.

The Senate also passed the Cather auditing bills, providing that the costs for State audits of local accounts shall not exceed $500 in counties of more than 20,000 population; $400 in counties with population of between 10,000 and 20,000, and $300 in counties under 10,000.

Among the outstanding bills introduced in the upper house was the Smith bill providing that the governor, while the assembly was in recess, should not appoint circuit judges to fill vacancies. The object of the bill was to bring about consolidations of judicial circuits.

Continuation of the DeJarnette Sanatorium at Staunton as a pay institution was favored by a 10-to-8 vote of the Senate public institutions committee yesterday.

The bill allowing municipalities to levy a tax on fire insurance premiums to provide for the relief of firemen and their dependants was reported by the House committee on insurance and banking after the bill had been amended to place the tax at 1 instead of 2 per cent.

A boat that carries mail and provisions from Baltimore to Tangier Island has been unable to get to the island for three days, Coast Guard officials were informed.

The lighthouse depot here today announced that because of ice conditions in Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac and other rivers, a number of lights and buoys have been put out of commission. In the Potomac, it was stated, the Blakistone Island lighted bell buoy, Kettle Bottom Channel entrance buoy 1-KB and 9-KB and upper Machodoc flats lighted buoy number 13 had been carried away by ice.

Both the Bay Line and Chesapeake steamers left here tonight for Baltimore but will anchor when they reach the ice pack and not attempt to enter Baltimore until daylight. Patrons Fight School Merger

Hayfield Parents Contend Buses Are Dangerous in Frederick Plea.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). The Frederick County School Board which recently embarked on a program of consolidation of county schools has met with stiff resistance from the parents at Hayfield, eight miles west of here.

The patrons of Hayfield school, who have been gathering evidence against such a move, today cited their side of the case. They declare that hauling of children in school buses is dangerous, citing the recent train-school bus accident in Illinois killing 25 pupils. Safety should come before economy, they declare.

The Hayfield parents claim transportation of the children to schools in other towns will remove the pupils from their native environment with a result that their learning ability will be lessened and friendships broken.

Hayfield has three churches and there is no reason why it should not have a school, the patrons argue, adding that the school provides a central point for sociability and entertainment.

Next Shakeup To Hit Ocean Mail Contracts

thousands of dollars a year for carrying only a few pounds of mail, which occasions more expense and more delay than if a frank subsidy system were adopted. Postoffice officials are studying the ocean mail situation with this view to reorganization.

New Air Contracts Denied.

Reports that the Administration contemplates reletting some contracts to the same air-mail carriers whose services were ended were discredited at the White House and denied by Mr. Farley. President Roosevelt said his Executive Order attempted to meet only the emergency phase of Army operation of the air mail and that no future policy has yet been determined.

Meanwhile, Henry M. Hogan, an attorney for Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., which has brought suit to restrain the Postmaster General from proceeding with the cancellation, served on Mr. Farley an order to appear before Judge John C. Knox, in New York Federal District Court, Friday.

"Postmaster General Farley does not consider that the proper service of the writ has been made upon him," a postoffice statement said, "nor that the New York court has jurisdiction to determine the case.

"It is the opinion of the solicitor of the Postoffice Department, Karl A. Crowley, that the Supreme Court for the District of Columbia has exclusive jurisdiction unless waived by the Postmaster General. It will not be waived.

Conboy to Appear.

"The United States attorney for the Southern District of New York, Martin W. Conboy, will appear in the case, and the solicitor will cooperate if necessary."

Thus was the Administration prepared to fight any attempt by the air-mail carriers to retain their contracts. The action of the Transcontinental & Western, which employs Col. Lindbergh as technical adviser, will be watched closely by other such companies protesting the Government's treatment.

Another statement by the Postoffice Department announced that present air-mail routes from Boston to New York, Atlanta to New Orleans, and Toledo to Detroit, would be operated Tuesday. Other routes will be added to the system—which at present covers 27,000 miles—as fast as details can be worked out.

Mr. Farley's reply to Col. Lindbergh's telegram, which was referred to him by the White House, was made public at the office of the flier's attorney in New York. The Postmaster General carefully avoided giving it to the press here before Col. Lindbergh had an opportunity to do so in New York. It was on this point that the aviator incurred a White House rebuff for seeking "publicity."

"Your wire of February 11 addressed to the President has been referred to me for reply," the Farley telegram said. "I am certain that if you were in possession of all the facts you would not feel that any injustice has been done or will be done."

Oregon's Birthday Noted by President

Sends Greetings to State Society Here.

Greetings were extended yesterday by President Roosevelt to the State of Oregon on the occasion of its seventy-fifth anniversary of admission to the Union.

At a jubilee meeting of the Oregon State Society at the Roosevelt Hotel last night, the President's message was read:

"In the record of our National expansion, in the deeds of its pioneers and its progress through 75 years of Statehood, Oregon presents inspirational evidence of action and achievement. With the same courageous spirit with which Oregon builded so well, we must face the problems of the future, different in kind, but alike in their appeal to patriotic devotion and the ideals of common interest for public good. I welcome this opportunity to extend my cordial greetings to the people of Oregon."

Fascist Warning Seen in Austria

U. S. Socialist Head Calls Strife World Threat.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 14 (AP).—Leo Krzycki, National chairman of the Socialist party of America, today praised resistance of Socialists in Austria against "Fascist forces of the nation."

"The heroic struggle of our Austrian brothers against Fascist forces should serve as a warning to workers everywhere to strengthen and consolidate their forces," Krzycki said. "Fascism has become a worldwide threat. The forces of reaaction grow more powerful day by day.

"Signs of Fascism in the United States are by no means absent. The growing militarization, the domination of the NRA by big business and the potential dictatorial powers of the Federal Government are all straws in the wind."

Farley Reveals Air Mail Contract Spoils Conference

Terms Lease Extension Illegal.

Farley declared that at the time of the passage of the Watres act in 1930 there were many well-established passenger lines that received no consideration whatever.

He said that contracts awarded a number of short lines were extended on November 6, 1929, for six months by order of Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover.

"I am satisfied," he said, "that the extension of these contracts for said period of six months was illegal. There was no attempt whatever to readvertise said routes or reaward them, or emergency requiring them to be let without competitive bidding, and the course pursued was a part of the conspiracy hereinafter mentioned.

"Extension of these contracts for a period of 10 years, under the so-called 'certificate' method, were arbitrarily made by Postmaster General Brown on May 3, 1930.

"Then Postmaster General Brown proceeded to build up by so-called 'extensions' of routes, part of the system of the United Aircraft & Transport Corporation, and the greater part of the American Airways and Transcontinental & Western Air systems.

Huge Systems Traced.

"This means, in simple terms, that if one of these companies had a contract for part of a through route, a transcontinental system could be built on that short line. To illustrate, if one had a route from Boston to New York, it could be extended from city to city until it reached the Pacific Coast without competitive bidding. These great systems were built in this manner."

Farley said the conferences in which he charges the companies divided the Government business among themselves by agreement were held in May and June, 1930.

"Some of these meetings were held in the Postoffice Department and were attended by Postmaster General Brown and Second Assistant W. Irving Glover."

He said that William P. MacCracken, against whom charges of contempt were being heard by the Senate when the Farley letter was made public, was chairman of these meetings.

Farley charged that the following companies were represented: United Airlines, Transcontinental Air Transport, Eastern Air Express, National Parks Airways, Varney Airlines, Aviation Corporation, S. A. F. E. Express, Eastern Air Transport, Thompson Aeronautical, United States Airways, Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, Clifford Ball, Inc., Curtis Flying Services and Delto Air Service.

Bidding Was Eliminated.

"These meetings resulted in a division of all air mail contracts of the United States and the practical elimination of competitive bidding," Farley charged.

Farley said a written report of the agreement for division of the business was filed with Brown. He said the original of the report, which he said MacCracken admits he signed, was not in the files.

Farley charged that all the companies participating secured "extensions, colsolidations, increased allowances or favors not contemplated in the original contracts," with the exception of National Parks Airways.

"There has been paid to air mail carriers for the fiscal years 1930, 1931, 1932 and up to December 31, 1933, more than $78,000,000," Fairley said.

"The air mail carriers collectively have been given contracts upon the basis of more than twice as much space as was actually needed or used. In sundry instances this was done by a change of the terms actually advertised. If payment had been made for the service actually rendered, the cost would have been about 40 per cent of the above amount. The excess payments during the period aggregate, therefore, the sum of about $46,800,000.

Illegality Asserted.

"My investigation, based on the records, books, papers, contracts and documents in the department, or introduced before your committee, or taken from the files of Mr. MacCracken, shows that every corporations whose contracts I annulled, or its predecessor or its subsidiary corporation, had representatives in the conference hereinbefore mentioned, which, I am convinced, was contrary to law.

"It is incontrovertible that the 1930 meeting was held, that it was confined to those who subsequently obtained the contracts, that the provision of law calling for competition in bidding was not carried out, and that all the present domestic air mail carriers secured contracts based on conspiracy or collusion, with the possible exception of the National Parks Airways, which will be given further consideration."

Farley gave the following instances of alleged "practices pursued by the contractors:"

"It was agreed at the meeting terminating June 4, 1930, that American Airways should have the Southern transcontinental route from Atlanta to Los Angeles. On August 23, 1930, two written contracts were executed involving this route. One was between American Airways and Earle P. Halliburton, who controlled Southwest Air Fast Express, Inc., and who was not only present at the conference, but was a bidder for the Southern route.

Line Agreement Made.

"American agreed with Halliburton that if the latter would join with an American subsidiary known as Robertson Aircraft Corporation and make a bid on the Southern route, it would then buy the rights acquired from the Postmaster General and pay Halliburton and his corporation $1,400,000.

"This was to be done by the organization of a corporation to handle the transaction. The contract to purchase the Halliburton Co. was contingent upon the company securing from Postmaster General Brown the contract to carry the mails from Atlanta to Los Angeles. Postmaster General Brown awarded the contract as prearranged.

"The other agreement, executed simultaneously, was between the companies comprising Transcontinental and Western Air. This concern agreed to pay American Airways for some stock and a half interest in a hangar at Tulsa, Okla., $1,399,500, thus providing money that American could use to pay Halliburton. Western Air at this time was also flying the Southern route from El Paso to Los Angeles and it abandoned this route in favor of the other company so that they could fly the entire Southern route from Atlanta to Los Angeles.

The agreement between these corporations was also a contingency. It was not to be effective unless the Halliburton contract was awarded, nor unless Transcontinental and Western Air secured the route known as the middle transcontinental route from New York by way of Pittsburgh, St. Louis and thence to Los Angeles.

"It was agreed that if Postmaster General Brown did not give the middle transcontinental route to Transcontinental and Western Air, the agreement was not to be effective. Postmaster General Brown also awarded this contract to Transcontinental and Western Air.

American Airways Overpaid.

"Whereas under the bid for the southern route from Atlanta to Los Angeles, American Airways would have been paid $3,338,675.60, it was actually paid $5,308,958.41, an excess over the actual bid of $1,970,282.91. During this period it was carrying less than the minimum amount of air mail provided for under the contract. There being only one bid for the southern route, it was awarded at 100 per cent of the maximum rate allowed by statute.

"The middle transcontinental route (now held by Transcontinental and Western Air) was advertised for bids. There was one bid of 64 per cent of the maximum rates and the high bid of Transcontinental and Western Air was 97½ per cent of the maximum rates. The contract was awarded, apparently without justification, to the high bidder, which has been paid from the starting date to November 30, 1933, the sum of $7,578,624.60.

"If it had been let to the low bidder, the amount paid would have been $4,974,686.92. There has, therefore, been paid to the high bidder during this period the sum of $2,603,937.68 more than would have been paid if the contract had been awarded to the low bidder.

"The contract in Route No. 32, from Pasco to Spokane, to Portland to Seattle, Wash., was awarded to Varney Air Lines, Inc., owned by United Aircraft, on August 21, 1929, at a rate of 9 cents per pound.

Rate Was Raised.

"This route was consolidated with another route of United Air Lines July 1, 1930, at a rate of $2.43 per pound. If the mail had been carried under the original contract the cost to the department would have been $67,592.42. The estimated amount paid subsequent to consolidation was $1,019,500.78, or an excess on this route of the sum of $951,908.36."

Among the documents turned over to Black by Farley was a "memorandum for Mr. Wadsworth" signed by Glover. The memorandum stated that the Postmaster General was desirous to have a conference with representatives of the "companies mentioned below." The companies listed are United Aircraft Corporation, Aviation Corporation of America, Western Air, Transcontinental Air Transport.

The memorandum concludes:

"The Postmaster General desires to hold up awarding of any more certificates, if possible, until after this meeting."

The next document, signed "E. B. W.," tells of a meeting on May 19. The document is dated May 20, 1930. The account of the meeting tells of the presence of representatives of various air lines and quotes each separately as favoring awarding of contracts by agreement rather than by competitive bidding.

Award of Lines Bared.

The third document is a letter addressed to Brown, bearing at the bottom the word "chairman," but no signature. It sets out in detail recommendations for awarding of contracts to seven lines, stating that the "remaining five" still are matters of controversy.

A statement dated June 5, 1930, on the stationery of the Second Assistant Postmaster General and signed "E. B. Wadsworth," tells of a meeting with representatives of passenger air lines with the Postmaster General on June 4. The statement is headed "Memorandum," but it is not addressed to anyone.

The memorandum states that MacCracken was named head of a committee and that it was decided to refer to the Comptroller General the question of how far the Postoffice Department could go in granting extensions.

An unsigned letter dated June 7, 1931 and addressed to Capt. Thomas B. Doe, Eastern Air Transport, Brooklyn, discusses technical details of contracts and stating that air mail operators should not invade either's territory. The letter evidently is a copy and there is no printing on the stationery.

Another letter, addressed to Brown and on the stationery of the Eastern Air Transport, discusses contracts for carrying mail to Cuba. It is signed "Thomas B. Doe."

The last of the documents is a scribbled memorandum on the stationery of the Second Assistant Postmaster General and signed by Glover. It is addressed to 'Dear Chase."

Among other things, it says: "Have Earl go through these bids and have their failings all lined up for the PMG when he gets home." The memorandum refers vaguely to a telegram and to a clipping from a Pittsburgh paper.

Miss Hazen repeatedly denied that she plotted death for the man she contends betrayed her.

MacCracken, Brittin Given Jail Sentences

Senate Allows Four Days' Delay to Appeal 10-Day Terms.

to be given MacCracken and Brittin.

The votes on the four defendants follow:

MacCracken: Guilty, 64; not guilty, 20; jail sentence, yeas, 56; nays, 26.

Hanshue: Guilty, 35; not guilty, 45.

Givvin: Motion to discharge, yeas, 62; nays, 18.

The motion, introduced by Senator White, that the cases be turned over to the courts was defeated, 62 to 22.

Defendants Are Grim.

At the conclusion of the final vote the doors of the Senate were opened and the four prisoners, in Jurney's custody and accompanied by their attorneys, filed into the Senate and took seats awaiting them in front of the first row of desks on the Democraitc side. They had been waiting for the summons since 1:20 p. m., when the Senate went into executive session.

Immediately the clerk began reading the finding in the case of MacCracken. The defendants remained in their seats, their faces grim. The Senate found MacCracken guilty of contempt because of desrtuction and removal of certain papers after they had ben subpenaed by the Senate. The resolution declared that MacCracken had failed to show sufficient cause why he should not be found guilty of contempt.

A second resolution, read immediately afterward, provided that MacCracken should be taken into custody immediately by the sergeant at arms and confined for ten days in the District Jail.

Immediately after the MacCracken sentence, almost identical resolutions concerning Brittin were read.

Files Plea for Bond.

Frank J. Hogan, attorney for MacCracken, immediately filed a plea for bond. He pointed out that there is pending in the District courts a case challenging the constitutional righst of the Senate to punish a citizen. The case referred to is an appeal from the decision of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Supreme Court, who refused to release MacCracken on a habeas corpus writ.

Hogan pointed out that if sentence were executed immediately the court would not have time to hear the cas bfor MacCrackn went to jail. He promised to appeal to the Court of Appeals within ten days and to do everything possible ot expedite the case.

Senator Hugo Black, chairman of the committee investigating air-mail contracts, declared that the Senate having acted, the question of bond was one for the courts and not the Senate to decide.

Seth Richardson, attorney for Brittin, asked the Senate to direct the sergeant at arms to keep the two men in custody until appeal could be perfected.

Long's Plan Accepted.

Senator Long moved that the men be taken into custody for four days by the sergeant at arms before beginning their jail sentence. The Senate agreed.

The status of MacCracken now differs somewhat from that of Brittin. MacCracken already has attempted to obtain a habeas corpus writ and has been refused. The court has ruled that the Senate has a right to act as it did. His appeal will not be from the decision of the Senate, but from the decision of the court, with the hope that the courts will decide that the Senate has no right to punish a citizen.

Brittin is one step behind MacCracken in legal procedure. His first move probably will be an application for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he is being illegally detained. If this should be refused, then appeal will be taken from the court decision and the MacCracken and Brittin cases will be exactly parallel.

Cited by Mail Probers.

In all, the Senate debated more than nine hours behind closed doors. Consideration of the cases started at 3 p. m. Monday and continued until 6 p. m. They began again at 1:20 p. m. yesterday and concluded at 7:30.

The four were cited for contempt by the Senate Air-Mail Investigating Committee after MacCracken had refused to surrender to the committee letters he had in his files. Later, after receiving word from air-mail companies whose correspondence was included in the files that they had no objection, he offered to give up the letters.

In the meantime, however, Brittin had taken some of his correspondence and destroyed it. Givvin had taken other letters and mailed them to Hanshue in New York, but they were returned to the committee by Hanshue. This action apparently gained clemency for them.

MacCracken admitted that he had been in contempt of the Senate, but that he had purged himself when the letters were returned. He contended that the Senate had no right to punish for a completed act, but only to compel abedience to its orders.

Efforts are expected to be made to obtain bond for the two prisoners to release them from the custody of the sergeant at arms pending perfection of an appeal.

Freed by Senate of Contempt Charges

Charges Bring Income Probe Of "Air Trust"

House Committee Invokes Plan to Determine Plane Profits.

The Government's favorite weapon of investigation, a probe into income tax returns of corporations, was invoked yesterday against the "air trust" alleged to control the sale of airplanes to the Army and Navy.

Obtaining the approval of President Roosevelt, and assurance of Administration cooperation, the House Naval Affairs Committee laid plans to examine returns of all airplane building companies, in an effort to check on the charges of Capt. James V. Martin that a small, powerful group of manufacturers exercised absolute control over contracts and "stole" 75 cents out of each dollar they received.

Meanwhile, Capt. Martin, an aviation pioneer, who sold the Army its first bombers, will be called before an executive session of the House subcommittee on Army aviation today for questioning as to what he knows about the "air trust" and the officers of both services, who, he alleged Tuesday, are under its domination.

As Capt. Martin's sensational charges involved contracts between airplane building companies and both the Army and Navy, a House sub-committee on naval aviation will dovetail its inquiry with that of the group questioning the accuser of the "air trust."

E. A. Deeds Summoned.

E. A. Deeds, wartime colonel and director of a number of aviation companies, named by Capt. Martin as one of the heads of the "trust," will be called before the Naval Committee.

The House committees hope, through striking simultaneously and cooperatively in three directions, to clear up the situation which a succession of charges is rendering more complicated each day.

First, the income tax returns of the aviation companies will be bared and studied, to determine if they "put only 25 cents of each dollar paid by the Government into the airplanes" they built; second, Capt. Martin is to submit a list of officers of the Army and Navy he alleges are subject to the influence of the "air trust"; third, the heads of the alleged "air trust" are to be questioned regarding their connections with aviation companies.

The questioning of Capt. Martin this morning will be conducted in secret, "for the good of the country," according to Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, chairman of the military affairs subcommittee. Rogers reiterated, however, that the hearings of his committee would be open to the public whenever possible.

After Martin has furnished his list of officers he suspects, he will offer the committee a list of the names of men who hesigned from the Army and Navy, worked for a time for commercial aviation concerns, and then entered in the service.

Representative McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, who called at the White House and received assurance of President Roosevelt's support for the income tax examination plan, also played a leading part in the summoning of Deeds before the naval subcommittee, of which Representative Delaney (Democrat), New York, is chairman.

Aim At "Big Four."

McFarlane, in suggesting that the chairman of the executive committee of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation be called, asserted that four big companies controlled aviation in the United States. He named United, the Pan-American Airways, North American Airways, and Cords Aviation Corporation of America.

These companies and their subsidiaries have interlocking directorates, and all are closely connected with "the Morgans," McFarlane said, producing lists which showed that Deeds, besides his connection with United, is a director of the National City Bank of New York, chairman of the board of the International Zeppelin Transport Corporation and a director of the Pacific Zeppelin Transport Corporation, the National Aviation Corporation and the Pratt-Whitney Aircraft Co.

Mitchell Sides With President On Lindbergh

Flyer Has Sold Heritage for "Pattage," He Says, Warns of Japan.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's rebuke of the Administration for cancellation of air-mail contracts yesterday was denounced by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, retired Army Air Corps head.

"Among airmen," Gen. Mitchell said, "Col. Lindbergh has just sold his aeronautical heritage for a mess of pottage."

Mitchell said that the President is entirely justified in what he has done. He denounced the "people" who prompted Lindbergh to make his statement and said they were merely hampering the Administration in carrying out a necessary emergency program.

The former Air Corps chief predicted the Army would fly the mail successfully.

Dwelling on an immediate need for action in National defense, Mitchell said that war clouds are darker today than they were prior to the World War.

"Our most dangerous enemy is Japan and a conflict is apt to break out at any time. Every part of the United States is open to air attack," Mitchell said.

Calling attention to the fact that Italy has a subterranean air fortress, Mitchell said that this country should be provided with a similar fortress in the middle of the continet, with bases located at Alaska and Hawaii.

Mitchell renewed his attack on management of the Army Air Corps. "Poor, weak, frail human nature has had much to do with the way things have been handled lately," he said.

Authority on John Brown Raid Celebrates His 80th Birthday

WILLIAM B. PACKETT, of Charles Town, W. Va., who has made it his life hobby to study John Brown, famous Harpers Ferry raider who was hung more than half a century ago. Mr. Packett holds one of the pikes with which Brown armed his followers.

Charles Town Resident's Home Stands Near Site of Scaffold.

Was Child of 6 When Noted Abolitionist Died for Uprising.

By Marion Butler.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 14.—The man who is said to know most about John Brown, whose Harpers Ferry raid enflamed this river country nearly three-quarters of a century ago, celebrated his eightieth birthday here today.

He is William B. Packett. The red brick towers of his home rise from the parade ground on which Brown was hung.

On his lawn is a monument that marks the spot where the scaffold stood which dropped Brown to his death that December morning in 1859.

Mr. Packett erected this marker more than 40 years ago, ascertaining the site from original records. He built it of stones taken from the foundations of the old Charles Town jail in which Brown awaited execution.

It has been Mr. Packett's lifetime hobby to study the history of this militant abolitionist who helped kindle the flame of Civil War. He was 6 years old when Brown's little band swooped down upon Harper's Ferry, a few miles from his father's farm. But he can recall the panic that reigned through the countryside, keeping women and children behind barred doors and sending men forth armed with guns and clubs. From the day his father came back from Charles Town and told his family that John Brown had been hung, William Packett's interest in the tale has continued.

Owns Many Relics.

He has collected many John Brown relics that can not be duplicated. In Packett's library is the curious revolving table used by Andrew Hunter, prosecuting attorney at Brown's trial. Its deep drawers once held papers of the death sentence, pronounced in the same Charles Town Courthouse that stands today.

One of the 1,500 steel-capped pikes with which Brown intended to arm the slaves stands against a wall. Eight feet long, it looks like a medieval jousting lance.

Especially prized is a rare old commission, issued and signed by Brown himself, appointing William H. Leeman as a captain in his army. It was drafted October 15, 1859, by Brown's so-called secretary of war, John H. Kagi, and by Brown, under his title of commander in chief. Both Leeman and Kagi met death three days later at the hands of Federal troops.

David Cockrell, Charles Town carpenter, who built the scaffold on which Brown and four of his followers were hung, gave a piece of this structure to Mr. Packett. Utilized after the hanging to build a porch for the Cockrell home, the scaffold was later reassembled and purchased by a New York souvenir firm. Never sold, it eventually disappeared. Mr. Packett's section seems to be the only piece remaining.

Tells Story to Visitors.

Whenever visitors come to his quiet home asking for information about John Brown, Mr. Packett shows them his collection of old pictures, some of which were taken at the time of the Harpers Ferry raid. Then he tells how Brown's whole career, from tanner and sheep herder on a Connecticut farm to commander of his ragged mountain army, was shaped by his fanatical desire to free the slaves. He will describe the secluded Maryland farmhouse near Harpers Ferry, which Brown rented at headquarters, preparatory to attacking. He will picture Brown and his handful of men seizing Harpers Ferry one warm October night in 1859 only to be captured 48 hours later by troops under Robert E. Lee, J. E. B. Stuart, and John T. Gibson, colonel of the Charles Town militia, and Mr. Packett's father-in-law. He will describe the famous trial at Charles Town.

Has No Personal Comment.

But Mr. Packett will make no personal comments on John Brown or his episode.

"Too many have taken sides on that already," he says. And even his eightieth birthday will not make him break his silence.

But people here still speak of the tall farmer with his white, square-cut beard. They recall him standing on the scaffold, his lank figure, with the noose around his neck, curiously composed through 19 minutes of delay before the trapdoor was sprung. And they say that the only words read by a country preacher over John Brown's grave were those that Paul spoke for all losers: "I have fought the fight; I have finished my course."

W. Va. House Votes Old-Age Pension Plan

Measure Providing $1 a Day for Indigents Sent to Senate.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Designed to permit the State to take advantage of a proposed Federal law, a bill creating an old-age pension system was adopted by the House of Delegates today, and sent to the Senate.

The measure provides a pension of $1 a day for indigents past 65. The proposed Federal law would provide Federal payment for one-third of the pensions.

The Senate defeated a House resolution memorializing President Roosevelt to pardon prohibition law violaters. Sponsored by Delegate John L. Marsh, Democrat, in the House, the bill limited the violaters involved to those without other criminal records. President A. G. Matthews opposed the resolution on the ground that the President "would do the right thing" anyway.

Tax Bill Approved.

Approval was given by both houses to a bill authorizing classification of tax levies as well as maximum levies under the 70-30 levy allotment act upheld yesterday by the Supreme Court. It directs that where excess levies are necessary the rates shall be 1 cent upon intangibles, 2 cents upon farms and homes and 4 cents upon other realty. The bill was in the form of an amendment to the Hiner tax collection measure.

The Senate voted its members a second mileage allowance and directed the sergeant at arms to prepare the warrants. The House earlier in the session also attempted to collect a second mileage but the State auditor, Ed Garb Sims, refused to honor the warrants upon the ground of unconstitutionality.

Congressional redistricting headed for an expected deadlock by House passage of the Dixon bill setting up a new alignment for the State's six Congressional districts. It was sent to the Senate with expectation of disapproval and a request for a conference. The Senate passed its own Congressional redistricting bill two weeks ago, but it failed to meet House approval.

House Objections.

The House plan was brought out in an effort to satisfy objections by Representative John Kee, of the Fifth District, and Representative Robert L. Ramsay, of the First, who declared the Senate plan would kill their chances of reelection.

A hearing was held by its judiciary committee today after Senate adjournment upon a bill to place the power of the State behind NRA code enforcement. The measure was passed by the House several weeks ago. F. Witcher McCullough, State NEC director, urged its adoption. A House committee tonight also held a hearing upon a group of bills revising the utility laws introduced by Delegate Rush D. Holt, (Democrat), Lewis.

The House today passed bills authorizing education boards in Mercer, Wood, Hancock and Preston Counties to borrow PWA funds for school buildings. The Preston bill went to the governor, the others to the Senate.

Income to Govern Alimony, Is Ruling

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals has ruled that "alimony must not be disproportionate to a man's ability to pay as disclosed by the evidence before the court."

The ruling was given in reversing a decision of the Cabell County domestic relations court and fixing the alimony of Mildred Shive Miller at $87.50 a month. The lower court had previously required Glenn F. Miller to pay alimony of $150 a month under terms of a contract at the time of divorce. He sought a reduction, citing decreased earnings.

The supreme court also has ruled that a receiver of an insolvent bank may not enforce the double liability of stockholders while a clearing house is liquidating the bank.

New Staunton Charter Sent To Legislature

Quick Approval Expected for Short Revision of Basic Code.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Unanimously approved at the last meeting of city council, a new city charter has been forwarded to Richmond for approval by the General Assembly.

It will be introduced in the House by Delegate W. Stuart Moffett and in the Senate by Senator William H. East.

It is expected the charter will be approved without contest and will replace one that has been in force for more than 50 years.

One amendment to the original draft provided that appointments made by the city manager should be subject to council's approval.

The new charter is much shorter than the old one. In preparing it the charters of other cities were studied and suggestions by the National Charter Commission were considered.

R. L. Printz Accused of Striking Man, 69; Boy Wins $7,000.

Luray, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—A hearing is scheduled for R. L. Printz, prominent Luray merchant, in justice's court here tomorrow on a charge of felonious assault upon Will Slusher, 69-year-old chief of police.

The alleged assault occurred Monday when Slusher went into Printz' store to present a town bill. Printz is under $1,000 bond.

Feeling is high here over the occurrence, and when Mr. Printz was not arrested immediately, 50 citizens went to the courthouse to make inquiry. Even then it is said Printz was not arrested, but was told to appear for a misdemeanor. When he finally came to the courthouse the charge of a misdemeanor was changed to a felony. Witnesses said Printz struck Slusher, knocking him to the pavement.

There had been other trouble between Slusher and Printz, and Printz had told him never to come in his store. Slusher has been town sergeant about 40 years.

The family of Printz is prominent. At one time damages of $5,000 were awarded against him in a writ. Recently is was said he had a violent argument with Trial Justice John Booton, but charges were not preferred against him. Following a verdict against him on another occasion he engaged in an argument with the Commonwealth's attorney.

Fairfax Courthouse, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—An award of $7,000 damages against his mother and father for the loss of an eye in an automobile accident were granted a 19-year-old boy of Winfall, in the circuit court here after a nine-day trial.

Mowbary, 30, was ordered held for the grand jury on a charge of robbing John Hawkins' filling station at McGaheysville on Christmas Day.

The note, contained in a money bag taken from the filling station, was found on the jail porch the day that a magistrate's court ordered John Kersey held for the crime. The note said an innocent man was being held and described the $68 loot which the writer claimed to have taken.

Kersey was not indicted as the only evidence against him was that bloodhounds led to his door from the filling station. Mowbary lives at the Kersey home near the filling station. Mowbary was released on $1,000 bond.

1929 Crash Blamed On Lack of Vision

V. P. I. Dean Speaks About State's Industries.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—E. B. Norris, engineering dean of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, blames "short-sightedness" of industrial laboratories for the collapse of 1929.

Addressing a group of business men here recently, he said that V. P. I. was dedicated to the industrial growth of the Old Dominion "through the development of dormant resources, the improvement of industrial products, the utilization of industrial waste and the dissemination to the engineering profession of newly discovered truths."

He said the South's cotton production has been reduced by 10,000 acres resulting in a price increase of 4 cents a pound; that 8,000 growers of wheat in Virginia have agreed to produce 4,000,000 bushels on 250,000 acres, and that a similar curtailment has been agreed on by growers of flue-cured tobacco.

Forgotten Jury Goes Hungry As All Danville Debates Golf

Then It Gives Verdict to Man Who Forgot to Call "Fore."

Danville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Seven forgotten men went hungry yesterday while a law court became embroiled in law and golf. They received the apology of the court's officers and after a hasty luncheon returned to render a verdict for the defense.

The defendant was Robert Moore, sued for $5,000 by Gordon Powell, who claimed he was struck on the ankle and permanently injured by a golf ball driven in a practice shot by the defendant.

At 12:30 Judge H. C. Leigh and the attorneys adjourned to the judge's chambers to discuss an objection and the jury was led to its room. Half an hour later Judge Leigh and the attorneys went to lunch, so did Holt Lyon, Danville's new city sergeant.

At 2:30 court reconvened, but the jury was not there. The city sergeant found it asking, "When do we eat?"

Judge Leigh ordered another recess of half an hour while the jury ate.

Golf clubs, golf balls, graphs and substantial volumes on the rules of the ancient and honorable sport were on the counsel table. Local golf stars took the stand. A woman attorney represented the plaintiff. She charged that the practice shot was a violation of the rules and that Moore did not give the customary notice by calling "fore".

The defense claimed that Lowell did not sustain the damages claimed; that he has played golf since, and that a measure of contributory negligence entered into it.

Golf players filled the courtroom, and Judge Leigh himself often turns in a par card.

"AN EYE TO THE FUTURE — AN EAR TO THE GROUND"

—this describes General Motors' policy, a policy by which the public is given what it wants in better cars year after year, and yet is safely protected against ill-timed or dubious experiments

The three outstanding advancements in modern automobiles — NO DRAFT-VENTILATION, KNEE-ACTION WHEELS, STREAMLINE DESIGN — the trio which capture public interest and public approval wherever new cars are shown — are each and all General Motors contributions!

Three in a row!

HOW the well-dressed 1934 motor car will look is no longer an engineer's guess.

The good sense and the good taste of the people of America are settling that question in a fashion no one can mistake.

By their plain-spoken approval of the new General Motors cars the people have definitely set the vogue for streamlining of mature refinement.

It would be foolish to deny our pleasure at meeting so accurately the public's taste, yet we realize what credit belongs to the public also.

Our successful 1934 streamline designs did not leap full-born into being; they are of deliberate growth, rather than of abrupt inspiration.

Years are behind them, years of stern work in laboratory and on proving grounds, a total of experience on streamlined motor cars, railway trains, airplanes, unmatched in the world.

But the soundness of our 1934 designs found priceless advance verification from the public itself—hundreds of thousands of motorists told our Customer Research Staff just what they wanted.

And we can cite Knee-Action Wheels, No-Draft Ventilation, Streamline Designs as triumphs three-in-a-row! because our will to progress is linked with willingness to listen to the people's own desires!

HOW GENERAL MOTORS LEADERSHIP KEEPS IN STEP WITH YOUR DESIRES

FIRST—The vast and varied activities in research and experiment pursued by General Motors cover virtually the whole field of transportation. Its work in aero-streamlining over many years, for example, embraces airplanes, automobiles, even railway trains.

SECOND—Through the largest automotive dealer organization in the world General Motors is in close understanding of the public mind; and last year this understanding was verified and double-checked by more than a million consumer research letters sent to automobile owners.

THIRD—It is a hard and fast policy of General Motors to suffer its own mistakes, to test and prove every innovation under conditions beyond those of normal use, to protect the buyer against any experiment of doubtful utility or value.

FOURTH—The balanced excellence of General Motors cars in 1934 as in other years includes ample and numerous features such as safe, smart, roomier Fisher Bodies, perfected No-Draft Ventilation, Knee-Action Wheels, smoother, more powerful motors, better brakes, to mention just a few.

This medallion commemorates the twenty-fifth anniversary of General Motors and of its public-minded interest in the advancement of motor transportation

Much Ado.

Representative Byrns, the majority leader of the House; Representative Fish, of New York, and 433 other members of the lower branch, are in line to take a little gentle kidding from the Senate.

Mr. Fish tried to get the House's consent to inclusion of the Lindbergh telegram in the Congressional Record. "Mr. Bulwinkle and several other members" objected, according to the Congressional Record, whereupon Mr. Fish served notice that he was going to object to every subsequent request of the session. His objections paralyzed the machinery of the House, so that at a little after 1 o'clock, after a warm colloquy between Mr. Fish and Mr. Byrns, the latter moved that the House adjourn. The legislative day was wasted.

Had the two members and their 433 colleagues had the time, or the inclination, to look in the Senate's proceedings for the day before, they would have discovered, on page 2450, that the Lindbergh telegram had been inserted in that body's proceedings by Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota. Is it to be inferred that the House members are so indifferent to their colleagues on the other end of the Capitol that not one of the 435 members saw the Senate's proceedings, which must have been on members' desks? Or, it is possible that sightless Senator Schall has been the vehicle by which proof has come that: "None are so blind as those who will not see."

Doles Vs. Insurance.

The twisted reasoning on unemployment relief which seemingly has come to prevail in Congress was thrown into bold relief by a number of events yesterday. Congressional action was completed on the $950,000,000 appropriation for direct relief and CWA pay rolls. Coincidentally, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, admitted that the British system of handling unemployment is superior to our own, and Secretary of Labor Perkins indorsed the Wagner unemployment insurance bill.

Mr. Hopkins is quoted as saying:

> On the whole, I think England has met the series of unemployment crises in that country with less commotion and more satisfactorily than we have.
> I feel that unemployment insurance, plus some schedule of work support insurance, is much better than relief.

These two officials, who are largely responsible for the Administration's policy of aiding the unemployed, recognize an urgent need for permanent machinery that will make possible the elimination of doles. Yet Congress, which prides itself on following the leadership of the President, appears to favor larger doles and smaller allowances for the vitally important work of placing unemployed men in jobs for which they are adapted.

In view of the stand taken by Secretary Perkins and Mr. Hopkins, will the Administration let Congress scuttle the United States Employment Service without a protest? The House slashed the meager appropriation of this agency—without which the establishment of an efficient unemployment insurance system can scarcely be visualized—in order to punish its officials for refusing to surrender to the spoils hunters. From this decision, as well as the Senate's attempt to secure patronage control in the CWA, it is indicated that Congress is more absorbed in its quest for political plums than in any constructive plans for dealing with unemployment on a scientific basis. It is a situation in which all of President Roosevelt's influence may be necessary to avoid an irrational backward step.

Susan B. Anthony.

Today is a significant occasion for women's organizations throughout the country. In celebrating the 114th anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony the progress of woman's struggle for equal rights will be reviewed and plans will doubtless be laid for future quests. For the life and character of this unique crusader are a source of perpetual inspiration to the feminist movements.

Miss Anthony's role in the emancipation of women can not be appreciated without understanding of social and economic conditions when she began her work. In the eyes of the law, woman was merely a chattel. The colleges were closed to female students. Only the most meager opportunities of earning a living were open to women. Politics, business, the professions and industry were entirely outside of their province. And a majority of women appeared to have little interest in extending the narrow range of their activities.

Early in life Miss Anthony evolved a modern philosophy of woman's place in the world. Her greatness arises out of her persistent and effective crusading for women's rights over more than half a century. In a three-volume biography Ida Husted Harper describes Miss Anthony as "the one woman in all the world (who) has given every day of her time, every dollar of her money, every power of her being" to this cause.

The cause so actively sponsored by this remarkable woman lives after her. Since her death women have attained the right to vote and many have been elected to high offices. Unreasonable discrimination because of sex is gradually disappearing. Only a few weeks ago the governments of the American republics, assembled at Montevideo, agreed that "there shall be no distinction based on sex in their law and practice relating to nationality."

The Vassal State.

M. Berenger, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the French Senate, has unofficially proposed intervention in Austria, to support Chancellor Dollfuss, by French, Italian and British troops. The intimation is that such intervention would be carried out under the aegis of the League of Nations.

The proposal indicates a conception of the League of Nations similar to that which inspired the ill-fated Holy Alliance in Europe after the Napoleonic wars. In the mind of the mystical Czar Alexander of Russia, sovereigns were to regard themselves as brothers. Their subjects were cast in the role of children. If the children of a brother became unruly it was a proper avuncular action to give them a whiff of foreign grapeshot in brother's behalf. It was a league of sovereigns, not of nations, and in formulating the present league great care was taken to keep the organization free from Alexander's medieval philosophy.

In the minds of some European statesmen, however, the theory that the present league might be used to justify armed intervention for political ends has always been latent. Suspicion that this is the case has been perhaps as valid a reason as any for the failure of the United States to assume the obligations of membership at Geneva. And Senator Berenger's demarche gives color to those suspicions. Undoubtedly there are some in France who would willingly use force of arms—all the better if it were international force—to maintain any Austrian government pledged to resist union with Germany.

Suggestions to this end, however, are inept for two reasons. In the first place, armed intervention to support the Dollfuss regime would mean dissolution of the League of Nations. Whatever the incentive, the present Austrian Chancellor has indulged in a war of extermination against the workers of his country which no league member possessing a democratic government could be expected to tolerate. In the second place, such intervention would solve none of the underlying problems which, since the peace treaties of 1919, have been accumulating in the now distracted republic.

In 1919 Austria, by the will of her conquerors, was created a vassal state. Nominally independent, the territorial and economic penalties applied to the heart of the old Hapsburg empire were in reality fatal to its continued existence as a truly sovereign political entity. For years the League of Nations has struggled to pump oxygen into the dying body. Except for the continued growth of ultra-nationalism in Europe these efforts might have been successful. Recent events, however, indicate that there remains little further hope for Austria in league assistance.

Doomed by the peace treaties to servitude, the tragedy of post-war Austria has been the protracted uncertainty as to her eventual master. It was not necessary that the anguish of fratricidal strife should be a part of the settlement. And for every drop of Austrian blood that has flowed so freely these last few days the discords and hatreds of the great European powers are in the last analysis to blame.

The Thirty-Two-Hour Week.

It is reported that the Administration is about to launch a campaign in favor of a 32-hour working week as a means of transferring to private industry a proportion of the workers now employed by the CWA. This, of course, is merely an old demand appearing in a slightly different guise. In the days before the CWA it was alleged that a shorter working day would permit more unemployed to be absorbed into industry. With several millions unemployed now on Government pay rolls, however, an up-to-date version of the make-work plan calls for a shorter working day as a means of relieving the Federal budget from part of the expense of its own program.

How this is to be done seems as mysterious as ever to the person with a fair knowledge of industrial processes. Of course work can be shared by cutting the wages as well as the working time of the employed, but the advocates of the shorter working week would not tolerate a division of wages as well as hours of labor. What they want is a shorter working week without deduction of pay. So that solution is ruled out. Within reasonable limits a shortening of the working week has been proved feasible under code agreements, but labor costs and hence selling prices of many classes of goods have been raised in consequence, in some cases to the serious detriment of sales volume.

Although Gen. Johnson appears to be sponsoring this movement of the 32-hour week, his remarks on the subject indicate that he is more impressed by the obstacles to its general introduction than by the possibilities afforded for creating new jobs. Thus, he points out that the bulk of unemployment is in the heavy industries, and says rather cryptically: "We can't do anything about that here; that is up to somebody else." He also concedes that many industries have eaten up their reserves. If asked to increase their costs with no contracts ahead and no means of financing their pay rolls, such groups would be thrown into bankruptcy. In any case, there is no adequate excuse for urging private industry to carry losses even if reserves make that possible, in order that the Federal Government may be relieved from the support of the unemployed.

The problem of unemployment can not be solved by a quixotic appeal to private industry to take on additional men without regard to the costs of the undertaking. Moreover, the social problem presented by unemployment can not be met by progressive reduction of the working day and working week. The absorption of the unemployed calls for a development of new kinds of wants and a capitalistic expansion which signifies an increase in wealth creation, instead of an artificial restriction upon social output.

Realism On Russia.

As its name implies, the new Export-Import Bank of Washington will attempt to stimulate an American market for Russian goods as well as to finance American exports to the Soviet. In some quarters our commercial rapprochement with the Soviet has been regarded merely as an effort to dispose of American surplus goods through the use of Federal credit. Evidently the Administration has a different and more realistic conception of the situation.

Russia needs vast quantities of goods, raw materials as well as finished manufactures. Reports that American recognition of the Moscow government might be followed by the placement of Russian orders amounting to $500,000,000 or more were based on the Soviet's prospective needs. But officials who are seeking to stimulate commerce with the U. S. S. R. are more concerned with that country's ability to pay for imports than with her acute shortage of many products.

Ambassador Bullitt indicated several weeks ago that the Administration has no intention of developing a one-way trade with the Soviet. "If we desire to sell large quantities of goods to the Soviet Union," he said, "we must take large quantities of goods from the Soviet Union in exchange." Indications are that the Export-Import Bank is working on this theory. Its policies have not yet been crystallized, but officials are keenly aware of the disappointments the Government would face if we should finance a large volume of exports to Russia without making provision for the importation of Soviet goods.

One of the first objectives of the Export-Import Bank, therefore, will be to stimulate a market in the United States for Russian commodities. Officials intend to finance only such exports as can be paid for through imports to this country direct from the Soviet. And in calculating the Soviet's ability to pay for exports three-cornered trade will not be taken into consideration. In other words, the volume of American business in the U. S. S. R., insofar as it involves Federal credit, will be measured by the ability of that country to send and our willingness to receive commodities and newly mined gold. Since there is already an active demand for American goods in Russia, it appears that the chief task of this trade-promotion agency will be stimulation of a market here for Soviet furs, caviar, manganese, lumber, coal, fish, bristles, flax, etc.

On this basis a considerable volume of trade may be developed. The illusion of fabulous orders from Moscow is gradually subsiding to a realistic view of our economic relations with Russia. Commerce developed on the sound basis of a mutual exchange of goods is less spectacular than sudden spurts of foreign business stimulated by Government credit. In the end it is also infinitely more satisfactory.

One Thing At A Time.

President Roosevelt's suggestion for an outright subsidy to shipping companies as a substitute for the poundage contracts now in effect may have much to commend it. But at the moment it is somewhat premature. Issues connected with the drastic cancellation of the domestic air mail contracts remain to be settled first.

These issues are not to be evaded by pushing the ocean mail contract system into the limelight. Nobody knows as yet whether it is proposed that the Army shall permanently haul mail, or whether, or to what extent, the contracts will be restored to private companies. Nobody knows what subsidy policy will govern if restoration to private companies eventuates. Nobody even knows for certain whether or not all or some of these companies have been unduly penalized.

The Administration has certainly shown its capacity to deal a swift punitive blow in the matter of subsidies. The record on the constructive side of the ledger is not so striking. Proposals looking to complete reorganization of the ocean mail contract system can afford to wait until unfinished business is cleaned up. What would be in order now is formulation of a definite program on the whole subsidy question, applicable, with due variations, to all forms of transportation.

The "Unofficial Observer" Slipped.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In today's issue of your paper there is a statement that I was connected with a preconvention "Stop Roosevelt!" movement.

I think you owe it to me to publish this letter, because that statement is absolutely incorrect.

Before the Roosevelt campaign, I have never taken part in any political movement in my life, except the farm relief movement in respect of which Mr. Baruch contributed my time to the Al Smith campaign.

In the preconvention period I was employed by Mr. Baruch. He favored no preconvention candidate and I had neither any political standing nor political function or following, and took no position whatever. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

The Church Not to Blame.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would protest against the frequent radio talks and published articles saddling the church with all the sins of past and present politicians in the world. The church can teach but not compel obedience.

Ever since the time of the Apostles there have been Judases and Ananiases who would be in the church for material profit and we have those who affiliate because of its indorsement and respectability and trustworthiness, but the church, properly speaking, is composed of those individuals who are following daily in His steps. The church to such is a school where any one may "learn of Him," and that is the church's sphere.

It is not the office of priest or pastor to reform governments, but men, who in turn are to govern righteously. Unfortunately, the people do not care for righteousness enough to select politicians of that type. It is not the duty of pastor or priest to fill the pulpit and Sabbath with rantings about politics and finance, but to preach the Gospel of Christ, repentance and a new life.

If the church has fallen short of its duty it has been in this very way, substituting lectures and pageants on any amusing idea instead of preaching the Gospel. Saturday evening, a radio speaker attributed every good work in the present Administration to the Government, and insinuated the church had failed in its work. I would like to know where these politicians learned righteousness if it was not through the church. The best statesmen the United States ever had were markedly Christian men, and in recent years many women, even before they were actually in legislative work officially.

Do we say our colleges are vicious because we have some scamps graduated from them? Is the college responsible for the scholars who misuse their knowledge? Neither is the church to blame for those who will not practice its teachings. There is not a single reformation in law recently made that has not been preached and urged by Christians for decades past but, of course, where there are free loaves and fishes there are multitudes following.

M. MELVILLE STOCKWELL.

Advocating Free Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has often been stated that the policy of the Federal Reserve in maintaining a stable price level during the period immediately preceding the stock market boom of 1929 succeeded—disastrously!

Permit the suggestion through your columns that in so far as Gov. Strong's policy was a success it was no disaster. It gave us a foretaste of the prosperity we may expect when a riotously overspeculative market is prevented from affecting agricultural prices by automatically decreased tax rates and the use of free Government credit money in balancing the budget whenever agricultural prices are falling. Conversely, this implies a similar limitation on a rise in farm prices by overtaxation through pegging the tax rate to the farm price level. To attain a permanent, if not Utopian, prosperity we have only to stop when passing through on the way to speculative monetary conditions.

The result of leaving other prices free to rise, as was the case in Gov. Strong's policy, is to decrease the farm population by raising all costs of production at a time when the rising efficiency of mechanization is proceeding rapidly. With enough new money at hand to promote the resultant increasing complexity of business, other occupations are opened up to those who are thus forced, or rather enticed, out of agriculture—and we need no futile policy of destruction to make the farmer prosperous.

Only the Government—i. e., all of us—can properly and effectively provide that which the Federal Reserve System lacked to stem the tide of falling prices at the right point—namely, free, new money. When the demand for such money becomes serious, counterfeiters undertake what the Government should be doing.

Our present procedure is to lock the barn door after the horse is stolen. Thus we continue an erratically speculative monetary situation that destroys property and prosperity; for eventually we have to buy our horse back at terrific expense. Not even a democracy, let alone an international trade that is under the guidance of no government, can withstand the strain of such folly. MONEY CHANGER.

To Life Insurance Investors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One who was born near Cincinnati, Ohio, and who has devoted a good many years of his life to the rather arduous profession of persuading Washingtonians to invest their money in life insurance policies, can not but read Mr. Charles F. Mosher's letter in Tuesday's Post with sympathetic interest.

For him, as well as any of the other 75,000,000 life insurance policy holders who, he feels, have suffered through the new monetary plans, just a word of consolation: Life insurance contracts do not promise to pay the beneficiaries gold nor do they require that the insured deposit therefor gold dollars as premiums. In most life insurance policies the dollar is not qualified. In some few of them the phrase "in current funds of the United States" is used.

Assuming that the underwriter who sold Mr. Mosher his policy was a good underwriter, he must have held forth to him the fact that he was selling him not dollars but provision for his beneficiary when he no longer could provide, or for his own old age should he survive his capacity to produce his own needs. There can be very little argument over the desirability of a compensated dollar—a dollar which would always buy relatively the same amount of the necessities or luxuries of life. There are, however, very wide and profound differences as to the practicability of attaining the compensated dollar.

Fortunately, life insurance has succeeded in the last 90 years in America in accomplishing in actual practice what the Administration hopes to do for the future.

Mr. Mosher has in the past deposited with his insurance company dollars of widely varied purchasing power. He has denied himself various amounts of luxuries each year in order to pay an unvarying amount of dollars to the insurance company for his policy. Now when the policy becomes a claim either he or his beneficiary will no doubt spend the proceeds over a number of years and, under present conditions, he will obtain for these proceeds an amount of necessities or luxuries varying from year to year with the purchasing power of the dollar.

Life insurance is based on the law of averages—the only law which has never been amended or repealed. It works its beneficence to give him a compensated dollar. I doubt if any life insurance man has ever heard a widow discuss the number of grains of gold in her insurance check. Usually it is so inadequate that she is not interested at all in the gold value. She is greatly interested in knowing just how far it may be stretched out and for how many days or months or years it will provide the necessities of life. And, pathetically enough, she stretches it and stretches it, getting varying amounts from year to year for her dollars, but when it is all gone she will have attained an average purchasing power equivalent to the average of her husband's premiums.

The problem of most husbands is to see that she has dollars enough to do a reasonable amount of stretching. DWIGHT T. SCOTT.

In Behalf of the Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a friend of our old veterans, and as one of the many private citizens who have, in the last few months, been trying to make up to such of them as are in need of what our Economy League Administration robbed them of in the name of economy, permit me to publicly congratulate that administration on its recent thoughtfulness and generosity (?) shown by its liberalization of its hospital policy and especially by the increase in the amount allowed for the burial of veterans!

After the decision whereby many veterans with the finest fighting records and in obvious need were so impoverished as to be financially unable to even afford meals of the "embalmed beef" type on which these older men were fed 30-odd years ago, our far-sighted economizers at Washington doubtless realized that the victims of the Economy League treatment would speedily require either hospital care or coffins! Hence this sunburst of Governmental generosity announced January 19, an announcement that informs the pauperized old vets that when they collapse from hunger or disease, aggravated by the semistarvation treatment given them by our rich and grateful—but economical—Government they may be able to find temporary succor in the Nation's hospitals, and should they be so "reduced" by the "economy" diet as to take a discharge from the penurious existence alloted them by the "hard-boiled" dietitians, then they may "go west" in happy assurance that our economically paternal Government is ready to dig down into its budgetsteered pocket and actually "hand out" around $100 to see that the emaciated remains of her military heroes reach the place "where the wicked (Economy League inquisitors) cease from troubling, and the weary (vets) are at rest!"

Now, in the case of the older veterans, the 60-year-olds and over, who have been financially guillotined so neatly by the Economic New Deal Robispierres and left to feed off their friends or get their meals from public garbage cans, it may be hoped by our Democratic traducers of good service, who, in their frenzied zeal for "budget balancing," turn up their parsimonious probosces at the rights of age, and, in harmony with that donkey which symbolizes their party, answer the demands of need with loud haw-haws, that only a few years will be needed to get rid of most of such victims by way of hospitals and cheap coffins! But will the friends and fellow veterans either forget or pardon such a deliberate and persistent policy of "sharp practice" discrimination against men who wore the National uniform? They will not! Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THE Republicans appear to be getting their first breaks on what may in these hectic times develop into the celebrated Lindbergh incident. The Democrats, of course, still have the upper hand with the big air-mail scandal, but it would seem to be worthy of comment that the Republicans get the breaks on even a collateral matter.

—BARGERON.

It may mean that the Democrats are tiring under their own pace; maybe their load is getting too great. Anyway their leaders on the Hill seem to be muffing the ball. What, for instance, does Mr. Byrns, the House leader, do but refuse to let Mr. Ham Fish insert the Lindbergh telegram protesting the cancellation of the contracts in the Record, thereby making a story out of what would likely have meant nothing at all.

* * * *

It is my guess that the great majority of newspapers carried the incident on their front pages. You can't tell at this stage but it may not have set well at all with our highly emotional people. They may have read the story and said to themselves or to their fellows as they stopped to exchange the time of day: "Now that isn't right. The Democrats ought to have let Col. Lindbergh's telegram go in the Record. There is no need of their getting too cocky."

And then it develops that there was no need of Mr. Byrnes emphasizing the telegram in this way at all, that it had already been placed in the Record!

* * * *

What seems to give the Republicans a further break, though, is the fact that what had at first appeared to have been a most clever handling of the telegram by the White House was not so clever after all.

What the White House did was to profess to be quite put out by Lindbergh's uncouthness in making the telegram public before Mr. Roosevelt had read it. There was the inference in the White House statement that while it didn't particularly care for its own self it did hate so badly for the colonel's ignorance of the social niceties to be shown so publicly. There was sugary solicitude for the colonel all through that White House statement. Indeed, there was the implied suggestion that such a fine upstanding young man as he was in the wrong environment, that he should withdraw and join up with the more refined revolutionary movement.

* * * *

It now develops, though, that Mr. Roosevelt once did the same thing, that he himself addressed a communication to Mr. Hoover and made it public before Mr. Hoover saw it.

It was the matter of his joining Mr. Hoover in the treatment of the war debts. Mr. Hoover had been defeated and was on his way back East from Palo Alto where he had gone to vote. He thought something should be done immediately about the war debts, and inasmuch as any decision he might make could be overturned by his successor, he asked Mr. Roosevelt, as I recall it, to stop by Washington on his way South and confer with him. Mr. Roosevelt replied, in effect, that the war debts were not his baby yet.

The newspaper files of the time, November 14, show that Mr. Roosevelt's reply was made public at Albany, that the newspaper gentlemen with him there reported the story in detail while the members of the Hoover party speeding Eastward were ignorant of it until much later in the night.

Indeed, it would appear that some difficulty was experienced in getting the Roosevelt reply to Mr. Hoover, that he was supposed to receive it at one place in the Middle West but missed it there and received it at another place 200 miles or so further East.

There would seem to be a moral in this: When you get to talking about the niceties of political conduct you should not live in a glass house.

Revisions and Corrections.

Perhaps the Irish novelist, George Moore, spent more time than any other contemporary writer on revising his books. Not only did he rewrite them many times before publication, but he was never satisfied with them even after that supposedly final form. He constantly rewrote and revised, getting out new editions, which are the despair of librarians, bibliographers, and book collectors. He told me in a memorable conversation that the real talent of a writer, as well as his artistic conscience appeared much more in his revisions than in his original publications. It is the capacity to change advantageously one's own work that proved whether a writer were or were not truly great.

This, I think, depends on the nature of the man. Some writers always improve by their second or third thoughts; others are at their best in the first fine careless rapture. Among the great English poets, the careful and conscientious and successful revisers are Chaucer and Tennyson. The great impromptu poets, the ones who wrote with tremendous speed hot from the brain are Shakespeare and Browning.

No End of Books

Seventy Years a Scholar.

At the age of 17, young John Burgess climbed into the family coach with a trunk of clothing and a box of tallow candles and set off to enter college—Cumberland University, Tennessee. Not a year back, John Brown had raided the arsenal at Harpers Ferry. In 1930, at the age of 86, Prof.-Emeritus John W. Burgess emerged from 19 years retirement to take part in the celebration on Morningside Heights of the fiftieth anniversary of Columbia's School of Political Science. He himself had founded that school, the first organized teaching of the subject in the country. It was but one event in a long and useful life.

"Reminiscences of an American Scholar" (Columbia University Press, $3.50) is the late Prof. Burgess's record of his years down to 1907. Nicholas Murray Butler summarizes the rest in a brief chapter, and contributes a foreword. "An all but unique personality," he writes of Burgess, and nothing need be added to this book to prove it.

• • • •

The leading passion of Burgess's life was international peace. He conceived it on a battlefield. For at 19 he was a soldier in the Union Army of Tennessee, and one night on sentry duty outside old Davy Crockett's Fort after the Confederates had attacked it, he made a vow: "If a kind Providence would deliver me alive from the perils of the existing war, I would devote my life to teaching men how to live by reason and compromise instead of by bloodshed and destruction."

"I was simple enough then," he adds at once, "to think that this thought was an inspiration, and I remained simple enough to follow it as an inspiration . . . through many countries and varied experiences . . . down to the eventful sixth day of April, 1917, when with one grievous blow this vision was dispelled and my life's work brought down in irretrievable ruin all about me." But that was 54 years later.

• • • •

A Unionist in the South, Burgess found everything else impossible but to go North for his continued education. In 1864 he entered Amherst and thought it a paradise. The professors, the students, the life of the town are recalled in these pages with acute nostalgia. Here, by the way, he knew Emily Dickinson—"vacillating in her mental processes, not always interesting, but at times almost inspired; I have heard her express more truth in 10 words than the most learned professor in an hour's lecture."

He went on to study law in Springfield, Mass. At this time the father of Eugene Field, left the young man as Burgess's ward until majority. Field was something of a handful, famous even then for his practical jokes. By Roswell Field's will, Burgess handed over some $50,000 when his guardianship was over. It took Eugene but two years of Europe to run through it.

After teaching in Illinois, Burgess went to Germany and studied under Mommsen and Helmholtz. Here he was befriended by George Bancroft, then United States Minister to Prussia, and was invited to Sunday evening soirees, where he saw Bismarck, Von Moltke, and others. From 1873 to 1876 Burgess taught history and political science at Amherst, and then, with much pain at leaving, accepted an invitation to a professorship at Columbia.

• • • •

The pictures he gives of Columbia 58 years ago are extraordinarily vivid and interesting. There were scarcely a thousand students; entrance requirements were all but nonexistent; the general tone of the organization was shown by the librarian who came to work about 11, opened the place for an hour and a half, and never bought a book if he could help it. Yet there were some amazingly fine men as teachers, and of these Burgess is most appreciative.

In 1880, with the aid of three others, Burgess founded the School of Political Science. Theodore Roosevelt was among his early students—"always there in the first row, a dozen newly sharpened pencils bristling out of his vest pocket, quick, accurate, snapping his words out like pistol shots." Here, too, was young Nicholas Murray Butler, "in most respects the most brilliant student" he ever had.

As the years went on, Burgess tells of his disappointment with Edward MacDowell as professor of music at Columbia, his friendship with Jefferson Davis' widow ("her conversation superior to that of any other woman I ever met"), his being snubbed (along with many other old friends) by Dewey after Manila Bay. Burgess minces no words over Dewey, nor over Roosevelt in the Spanish War, either.

Curiously, it was through Roosevelt that a great honor came to Burgess—he was made first incumbent of the Theodore Roosevelt professorship at the University of Berlin. This he occupied in the winter of 1906-07, giving his first lecture before the Kaiser and assembled court, and, finding the social ordeal weighty (in four months he and his wife attended 102 dinners and suppers, made innumerable calls). Writing not long after of the Kaiser: "To his clear judgment, matchless tact, warm heart and profound sense of justice I owe everything," one can infer how the blows of 1914 and 1917 fell upon Burgess.

For all of its record of a lifetime of academic activity, the book is a leisured, almost archaic tale. We don't, nowadays, have many men left like this gentle and high-minded scholar of the old school.

Student Aid Appeals Must Go to Colleges

Applications from students who wish to curtail their college expenses through part-time jobs under CWA funds must be submitted directly to the colleges and universities, it was announced yesterday.

Students eligible to enter college, but who cannot do so because of lack of funds, and those who have been forced to drop out of college, are entitled to file applications.

CWA Dismisses 150,000 Today; Dole Predicted

1,800 Lose Jobs in District as Demobilization Begins.

patched last night will cut about half of them off jobs.

Civil works officials said last night that approximately 291,000 workers are employed on Federal CWA projects in the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Independent Offices, Interior, Labor, Navy, Treasury and War. Half of them will lose their jobs, unless States and municipalities take over the projects.

In ordering demobilization to begin, Administrator Hopkins stuck to his original plan for the program, which now appears fairly certain of ending May 1. Despite dire predictions, threats of chaos and floods of protests, it was indicated by President Roosevelt that from today on 10 per cent of the CWA workers will be dropped weekly, starting in the deep South, where planting is about to begin.

Amendment Dropped.

Passage of the CWA and relief bill which came while officials wondered where they would obtain funds to meet Saturday's pay roll, occurred when the Senate receded from the McCarran amendment, which called for nomination of State relief directors by the President and confirmation by the Senate. The bill provides $950,000,000 in a lump sum without distinguishing how much will go for CWA, and how much for direct relief, grants workmen's compensation up to $3,500, and authorizes State, local and Federal projects to be continued.

Objecting strenuously to Hopkins' avowed intention to shave off the CWA program by May 1, Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, declared that 250,000 workers would be put "on the dole and on the street" immediately. Senator Wagner added his protest, asserting that not only 250,000 would receive this fate, but the entire 4,000,000 employed by CWA would be receiving dole by May 1.

President Roosevelt and Hopkins, however, claim that spring work, normal business pick up and the PWA program will absorb most of those losing their jobs.

Work Ends Tonight.

Orders to Federal department and bureau heads yesterday instructed them to terminate completely by tonight all Federal CWA projects not being operated on Federal or other public land. Such projects include tick eradication, typhus control, citrus canker work, entomological projects, archeological excavations, various Tennessee Valley improvements, erosion control, malaria control, rural sanitation and sealing of mines.

It was explained, however, that statistical studies and allied work undertaken by Federal departments with CWA help will be completed.

C. Marshall Finnan, National Capital Parks superintendent, and his assistant, George Clark, conferred yesterday with Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals as to the Park Commission's CWA jobs. It was decided that the local administration will take over the 13 jobs of that division, which includes the Manor Park and Benneker Recreation Centers, thereby saving jobs for 1,400 workers.

Regulations to govern the CWA between now and May 1 will be issued by Administrator Hopkins today or tomorrow, officials said. The regulations, drawn up under the bill approved yesterday, will set CWA wages, new State quotas, and will schedule definitely the demobilization, setting dates and places for cessation of work.

Slightly under 4,000,000 persons now are on the National CWA pay roll. With ten weeks remaining up to May 1, the dismissal of 10 per cent of the workers weekly will terminate the National program by May 1. However, it still was a possibility last night that something might be done after May 1 to help those thrown into dire need by dismissal from the rolls.

Demobilization of CWA as intended was accepted in many quarters as indicating the peak of Federal relief activities has been passed. For the first time since the Roosevelt Administration took office, persons are being turned off relief programs instead of being placed on them.

House Had Refused Change.

The Senate recession from the McCarran amendment was by a vote of 64 to 19. The House had refused to sanction the amendment, and with prospect of a payless payday facing CWA workers Saturday unless is acquiesced, the Senate surrendered on the point.

Under the initial orders issued yesterday, the 91,148 CWA workers in the Department of Agriculture will be cut to about 48,000. Other departments will take similar cuts. Officials last night estimated the following workers were employed by the various departments: Commerce, 24,269; Independent offices, 13,679; Interior, 24,900; Labor, 19,771; Navy, 11,386; Treasury, 57,930, and War, 48,262.

Airmen Play Alarm Clock for Arizona Baby.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14 (AP).—Until longer days roll around again on the Arizona wastelands, obliging air pilots will play "alarm clock" so that Baby McKinley gets his breakfast promptly.

Pilots pondered the purpose of a strange order on the Grand Central Air Terminal bulletin board telling them to flash their landing lights each morning as they pass Round Top Mountain in Arizona.

Inquiry developed that Mrs. McKinley, who lives with her husband and 5-month-old baby in the remote spot, had made the request. She wrote that the family alarm clock was broken and asked that the pilots pinch-hit until an earlier sun gets on the job again as the awakener.

Roosevelt Acts To Meet Future Needs of Nation

By Raymond Clapper.

President Roosevelt is now looking beyond the present emergency and is swinging into development of a long-range social and economic plan for better permanent use of natural resources of the Nation.

He has set up a committee of the Cabinet to wor kout a National program. This committee will seek in its recommendation to dovetail river and harbor development, hydroelectric power projects, flood control, reclamation, soil erosion, reforestation, better utilization of submarginal land on a planned basis, transportation and limited decentralization of industry.

Meantime he has asked the House Rivers and Harbors Committee to hold up the usual pork barrel omnibus bill into which various Representatives log roll favorite projects.

Mr. Roosevelt's committee will seek to build a program of recommendation to Congress listing projects in the order of urgency.

Three Considerations.

Its recommendations, in accordance with President Roosevelt's wish, will be based on three major considerations.

1. Elimination of danger to life and property, including soil erosion o rthe washing away of fertility.

2. Economic need, as, for instance, whether the probable use for a canal would be sufficient to justify the investment.

3. Social value, including questions as to whether land should be abandoned for agricultural purposes or whether by proper development it could support more persons.

In this move President Roosevelt is not only bringing reality to a long-cherished dream of a more orderly and useful development of America's great natural resources. He also is aiming a blow at the wasteful pork-barrel methods by which Congress has appropriated millions of dollars haphazardly, according to the lung-power behind the scores of proposals which flood into Congress every year.

Voted 130 Jobs in 1933.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee last May reported out 130 projects and has 31 more under consideration. It will meet tomorrow to decide what to do in the light of Mr. Roosevelt's request that it wait until his planning committee can make recommendations.

Most significant of all, as indicating what is in the back of the President's mind, he conceives the impending planning program as a permanent vehicle for carrying on after the emergency Public Works Administration disappears. He believes there always will be need of machinery for utilizing the unemployed—there were some 3,000,000 of them at the height of the boom—preferably on carefully planned work rather than on such hurriedly improvised enterprises as have been inevitable in the rush of PWA and CWA.

The Cabinet committee, as announced at the White House yesterday, consists of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of War Dern, Secretary of Commerce Roper. The way was opened for this planning work a few days ago when the House quietly slipped through a resolution requesting the President to submit a comprehensive program. The committee is not expected to report for another month at least.

His Old Plan Expanded.

This conception of the President's is an expansion of the land utilization plans he worked out while Governor of New York, and also of the venture into the Tennessee Valley where he is trying to remake a whole region as a model experiment.

The President feels that internal development, which has proceeded hit-and-miss as Congress enacted piece-meal legislation, should be guided by recommendations of a permanent commission which would be able to study the whole area of the United States by watersheds. The entire area whose water flows into the Atlantic Ocean will be studied as one unit. All projects within that area will be listed in the order of their importance. Watersheds which flow into the Gulf of Mexico will be covered in another survey, excluding the Mississippi River system, which will be treated separately. The fourth area will be the watershed which flows into the Pacific Ocean.

Every year, according to the President's plan, Congress would appropriate a more or less regular sum which, in a sense, would take the place of PWA money to help relieve unemployment and put the physical development of the country on a planned basis for the first time.

Studies Waterway Tax.

The President also is studying proposals for a tax on use of waterways so that at least maintenance may be covered to remove a burden of $80,000,000 or $70,000,000 a year from the Federal Government.

As to decentralization of industry, there are large areas, the President feels, where farming alone provides only subsistence so far as food goes, but no cash. His idea is to establish industries nearby for part-time work so that farmers whose land will not support cash crops can work in winter months. Forestry work, he feels, also can be utilized for this purpose as is the case in the Black Forest in Germany, where it has been done for years.

As the picture was finally unfolded at the White House yesterday, it appears to be the final stage of knitting together the fragments which have been coming out during the first year of the New Deal, such as M. L. Wilson's subsistence homestead plan involving decentralization of industry; Senator Norris' Tennessee Valley pattern for regional power areas; Dr. Tugwell's plan to take millions of acres of submarginal land out of direct cultivation; Harry Hopkins' program for moving hepelessly unemployed out to the farms, and the program of Thomas H. Beck's wild life committee for utilizing natural resources in increasing game, wild fowl and fur-bearing animals.

Puzzle Fitted Carefully.

Pieces of the puzzle are being fitted together in preparation for the time when hasty emergency measures will be unnecessary and when the Nation can calmly and with measured action proceed to use its great natural wealth in a way that will be most productive for the Nation as a whole.

If the Republicans attempt to brush this program aside as a visionary brain-child of the New Dealers, like as not there is some good Democrat in Congress already set to trot out the Republican party platform of 1932 which said:

"We favor a National policy of land utilization which looks to National needs, such as the Administration has already begun to formulate. Such a policy must foster reorganization of taxing units in areas beset by tax delinquency, and divert lands that are sub-marginal for crop production to other uses. The National welfare plainly can be served by the acquisition of submarginal lands for watershed protention, grazing, forestry, public parks and game preserves. We favor such acquisition."

Norris Builds Model Homes, Fully Equipped

Rents Will Range From $20 Up, With 4-Acre Farm to Each House.

Editor's note: Following is the third in a series of dispatches on the Tennessee Valley Program, detailing the building of Norris, model city and architect's dream.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Norris, Tenn., Feb. 14 (U.P.).—A typical home in this model city contains luxuries that even the White House doesn't have.

For $20 a month the worker on President Roosevelt's Tennessee River development program gets a home as architecturally perfect as can be designed.

He gets electric heating, electric hot-water heating, electric refrigeration, electric cooking, electric lighting, a tiled bath and a four-acre farm. He gets a park in front of his house and a garden in the rear. A parking place in a community garage for his car, and a living room paneled in pine, like the pent-house libraries of the rich.

He even gets a copper gutter arrangement to keep the termites from boring into his floors, porches screened with copper netting to keep out mosquitos, and casement windows.

Kitchen in Chromium.

The kitchen gleams with chromium, which the highland housewife never has seen before. There is a fireplace to make her feel at home and a great porch which she may use as a dining room in the summer.

The outside timbers are rough-hewn and the shingles hand-split, while the walls are stained a soft brown.

Anyone who has a job in Norris, headquarters for the Norris Dam and destined to be a mountain industry center, can rent a house from the TVA. Rents range from $20 a month for a three-room house to $45 a month for seven rooms.

The Electric Home and Farm Authority, a subsidiary of TVA, will install the electric furnace, refrigerator and stove, allowing the householder four years to pay for them on his electricity bill.

Costs Will Be Low.

It is estimated that the monthly bill for electricity and payments upon all the devices in the house will average about $8. After the equipment is paid for, the bill will be almost negligible.

The EHFA, meantime, is experimenting with refrigerators and stoves to simplify their design and sell them to dwellers in the valley at far below the present prices.

The farms included with each house are on the edge of town. They will be planted scientifically and corn will not be allowed to suck all fertility from the earth, year after year. Mountain freshets won't get a chance to wash away the soil.

Instead, the farms circling Norris will be operated as models for the whole valley.

Road 250 Feet Wide.

The road from Knoxville, 21 miles away, will be 250 feet wide and free of hot-dog stands and filling stations.

All this activity at Norris and elsewhere through the 200-mile Tennessee Valley is keeping the residents so busy earning a comfortable living for the first time in years that they have had little time to ponder what is going on before their eyes. Yet they have definite hopes for what the future will bring.

Receivers Deny $12,000,000 Loss

Reply Is Filed in Ontario Paper Company Suit.

Minneapolis, Feb. 14 (AP).—A general denial they had dissipated more than $12,000,000 in property through mismanagement as receivers of the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co. was filed in Federal District Court today by C. T. Jaffray and R. H. M. Robinson.

Their reply to the demand of E. W. Backus, who formerly controlled the company, for removal of the receivership existing since 1931, charged Backus' action was not brought in good faith and constituted "improper and unlawful interference with administration of the receivership."

TROPICAL BEACH STUDY.

I.

Here I sit with warm winds blowing
Where life is just a spinal showing.
Where custom says the winter term is
One vast display of epidermis;
Where young and old disport in panties
And swimming suits are merely scanties;
The sun is hot, but no one heeds it—
They want a tan where no one needs it.

II.

They strive to get the human torso
The color of a ham, or more so;
The violet rays they love to scatter
On places where it doesn't matter.
They rub their bodies with emulsions
So sunburn will not cause convulsions;
This oil they rub on one another—
Ma rubs pa and pa rubs mother.

III.

Their noses peel as do their foreheads,
It seems to be their chief desire
To look like victims of a fire.
The boys, the girls, the men, the ladies
Look like some fugitives from Hades;
They seem to think in torrid weather
A face should look like Russian leather.

IV.

The new arrivals, pale and sallow,
Disport themselves in water shallow;
Until their hides are red and peeling
They have a fierce self-conscious feeling.
They have an urge that's most titanic
To look like something quite volcanic;
They feel that they are being cheated
Unless their skins are superheated.

V.

The ugly men well over fifty
Consider they look pretty nifty
Exposing stomachs most excessive
As if they thought them quite impressive.
I ask you why, dear people, will a
Fat man who looks like a gorilla
Insist on posing on the beaches
With nothing on but midget breeches?

VI.

When folks are young and quite athletic
Their bodies aren't so pathetic,
But business men with waistbands busting
Are comical and quite disgusting;
They simply prove that form is fleeting.
They show what comes from overeating;
I'd bar them from the bathing hour
And limit them to tub and shower.

BEACH CHAIR THOUGHT.

When she parades beside the sea
She is as bare as bare can be;
Godiva of the beeches, she Gives not a thought to modesty;
Yet when she dresses in her flat
She pulls the shades . . . Now why is that?

WHO'S WHO IN THE TROPICS.

On the beaches girls and buddies
Present interesting studies:
Those whose skins are brown, oh, very,
Have been down since January;
Those with crimson head and beak
Just got into town this week;
That young woman wan and white
Just got off the train last night.

There is one thing to be said about this Paris crisis: With the French fighting one another no loan from another country is involved.

Add similes: As elated as Germany when she hears that Frenchmen are being killed off without any outside assistance.

"Senators Urge Slash in Weight of Silver Dollar."—Headline. Don't worry about the weight, boys. You provide the dollar and we'll lift it.

Reform Bank Set-Up Sought By Roosevelt

is another echo of the Administration's concern over the continuing prostration of private lending and private investment in the capital goods industries.

PWA, CWA and the various other Governmental expenditures have improved prices in some cases, relieved unemployment and spread buying power. But the buying power has been reflected mainly in consumption goods, not in the heavy industries. Save for what PWA has done the construction industry has remained stagnant.

Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC has again been exhorting bankers to lend and his last speech on this subject irked the banking community more than usual.

At the same time Treasury officials have looked into bank loan applications in a few districts and have reported that the trouble is not lack of capital eager to go into loans but lack of confidence. Mr. Roosevelt's decision to declare a 39.06-cent gold dollar removed some of the uncertainty but not enough to stimulate new enterprise.

Meanwhile the securities act has cotninued to be under fire as an obstacle to private financing and the newly devised stock exchange bill has served, however justly, to persuade capital that the Government means to keep it strait-jacketed.

Manipulation in Background.

For the moment monetary manipulation has gone into the background—though the silverites are extremely active and confident of some fresh action—and the Administration mind has turne dto consideration of the banking picture as it exists in the minds of bankers. In a sense Mr. Roosevelt's agreeing to postpone the permanent deposit guaranty is a concession to the bankers who were able to gain the ear of enough influential members of Congress to have their views count.

Mr. Roosevelt's decision was announced after he had conferred yesterday with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Gov. Black, Comptroller of the Currency O'Connor, Senator Carter Glass, Senator Fletcher, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee; Tom K. Smith, of the Treasury, who has inquired into the bank loan situation; Secretary of Commerce Roper and officials of the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

As a result, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who was one of the first proponents of deposit insurance but favored postponement of the permanent provision, introduced in the Senate a bill to extend the temporary guaranty for a year beyond July 1, when the permanent plan was to have taken effect. Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, proposed a similar measure.

It's positively the funniest picture ever made, but don't let that keep you away . . .

Lieut. Murrell Free Of Attack Charges

200-pound, lieutenant, when the jury reported.

The verdict brought to a whirlwind finish a trial that attracted national attention because of Murrel's popularity, and the fact that if found guilty he faced execution.

Miss Ralls, auburn-haired beauty, charged that Murrel attacked her October 22, 1933, while taking her home after making a round of night clubs and dances.

Murrel testified that he did take her home, but denied attacking her. He "picked her up" at a night club, he said.

Woman Intoxicated.

She was intoxicated, he testified, and he was ashamed to take her home or to a hotel. He even had difficulty in finding out where she lived, so, he testified, he took her to the reservation and tried to "sober her up."

He said he had intended to take her to the quarters where his mother lives, but as they approached the quarters she became ill.

Later, he said, Miss Ralls recovered sufficiently to tell him her address and he took her home. He denied molesting her in any manner.

Help for Aged Here Approved By Committee

House Group Also Votes Approval of Boxing in District.

The House District Committee yesterday voted to report favorably on the old age pension bill for the District, over the opposition of the Budget Bureau, with several amendments tak enfrom a measure introduced by Representative Loring M. Black, jr. (Democrat), of New York.

With Chairman Norton absent and Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, presiding, the committee voted to amend the Capper-Norton old age pension bill to provide for flexible anuities and supervision by the Board of Public Welfare.

The committee also decided to report favorably two boxing bills, to legalize both professional and amateur boxing in the District.

Boxing Board of Three Asked.

One of the bills, sponsored by Representative Hartley (Republican), of New Jersey, was amended to permit professional boxing in conformity with the measure introduced by Representative Black, a member of the District Committee.

A boxing commissino of three members appointed by the District Commissioners, one a member of the police department, is also proposed.

Action on the old-age pension bill was taken after Corporation Counsel William W. Bride reported that the Commissioners favored the principle of the old-age pension legislation but could not make a formal report because the Budget Bureau held the bills did not conform with the financial program of the President.

Gas Tax Bill Delayed.

The committee postponed action on a bill to appropriate $5,000 for the relief of Jennie Bruce Gallahan, widow of Lieut. Samuel L. Gallahan, of the fire department, who was killed in line of duty. Bride said that the Commissioners opposed the bill because the widow is now receiving $60 a month from Fund.

No action was taken on the Smith bill to raise the gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents in the District.

Leaders From 12 Cities Open 2-Day Session on Saturday.

New problems confronting the Y. M. C. A. as a result of changing economic conditions and social standards, including proposed policies in the new era of legalized liquor, will be studied by Y. M. C. A. leaders from more than 12 major cities at a conference here Saturday and Sunday in the Mayflower Hotel.

Plans for adjusting the program of the organization to meet the needs of modern youth in the trend toward increased leisure and greater personal liberty will be discussed by veteran general secretaries, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Metropolitan Secretaries Conference.

Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the Washington Y. M. C. A., and chairman of the executive committee of the conference, will preside at the series of forum discussions arranged for the two-day session.

"Certain Moral Issues Centering About Temperance and Repeal" will be one topic. J. J. McKim, general secretary of the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A., will take a leading part in this discussion, from which, officials suggest, may issue a policy in respect to the future attitude of the Y. M. C. A. toward legal liquor and beer.

Among other topics to be considered are modernization of the Y. M. C. A. program and buildings, adjustment of law and professional personnel to fit today's problems, changes taking place in the "basic philosophy" of the organization and revitalization of religious work.

Radio Waves and Ripples

IF any of the good people of Louisiana who don't like Senator Huey Long were to go to the National Broadcasting Co. for an explanation of its giving him 30 minutes on the air February 23, one of its vice presidents probably would say:

"It is the policy of the National Broadcasting Co. to give any member of the House and Senate an opportunity to use our facilities at any time." And let it go at that.

And if these same good people were to press further and inquire why Huey is allotted 30 minutes when most Senators and Representatives require but 15, the same vice president might relate, confidentially, of course, how several years ago the Senator was asked to speak 4 minutes and finished in 45, and how the minds this time got together and decided that the Kingfish should be given 30 minutes, and further that he should start "Every Man a King" at 11:30 p. m., inasmuch as they don't care very much what happens after midnight, anyway.

The vice president might do this, and then he might send his secretary out to the good people from Louisiana with the information that he was having a very long conference.

Does the Public and Its Government Realize That American

PRICES CANNOT RISE

Break the World Gold Corner?

Further dollar devaluation cannot be avoided unless worldwide forces now holding down United States prices are quickly counteracted.

Foreign Exchange and Trade Institute reports show that currencies used by seventeen hundred million people are steadily falling against gold. These falling currencies, through the effect of exchange, are forcing downward all prices throughout the world, including America. This is due to the fact (never to be forgotten) that American products wherever sold (even in America) must compete in price (and against lower alien production costs) with the world's products. Such competition constitutes one of the principal factors retarding American recovery based on higher American prices.

American Prices are directly influenced by the gold value of the dollar, and indirectly influenced by the exchange value against goods of the one international medium of exchange, i.e. gold.

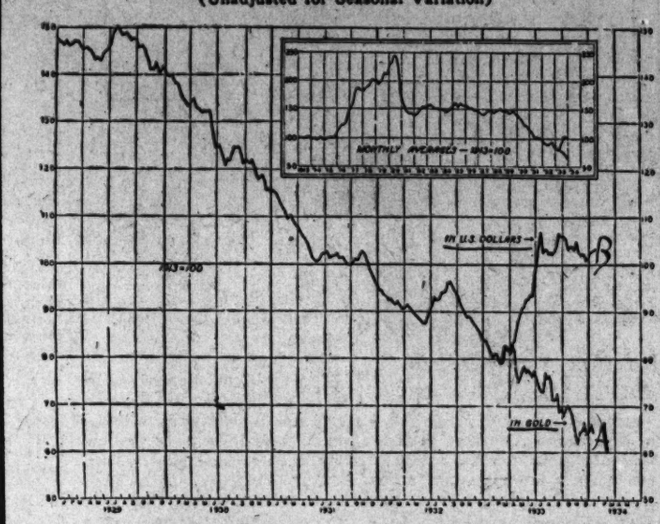
(Unadjusted for Seasonal Variation)



So long as trend of line A (prices in gold) is downward it will tend to pull down line B (prices in dollars). If line B is to be made to rise, direct action must be taken on line A to first raise it, and through this to raise line B. The only other way line B can be made to rise is through extreme dollar depreciation by uncontrolled inflation.

ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN TO CONTROL THE GOLD VALUE OF THE DOLLAR; no effective action has been taken directly to affect the exchange value of gold as against goods, except by the use of credit. But this increased use of credit can not furnish the complete solution, as it merely creates new future demands for gold. This exchange value of gold as against goods is normally regulated by the supply and demand factor of gold and of goods, but today the demand factor of gold is being accentuated by certain governments in their efforts to manage their currencies in order to control their internal prices.

THE WORLD-WIDE STATUS OF GOLD WILL BE LITTLE AFFECTED BY CUTTING THE GOLD CONTENT OF THE DOLLAR. If world trade were conducted under a universal currency system, the cutting of the gold content of such currency would simultaneously devalue the currency of the entire world in terms of gold. The demand factor would in this case be reduced. But a universal currency does not exist and ALTERING THE GOLD CONTENT OF A CURRENCY MERELY DEPRECIATES IT WITHOUT ALTERING THE STATUS OF GOLD. Progressive currency depreciation, if universally adopted, will add upward pressure on the value of gold and downward pressure on world prices, already falling.

THE EXAGGERATED DEMAND FOR GOLD CONTINUES, while the value of gold in terms of commodities and currencies steadily rises. Unless the rise in the world value of gold is arrested, the dollar must be further depreciated against gold to prevent American prices in terms of dollars from falling under the pressure of dropping world prices. THE PROPER METHOD OF APPROACH TO HIGHER AMERICAN PRICES IS THROUGH HIGHER WORLD PRICES BROUGHT ABOUT BY DIRECT ACTION ON GOLD, NOT ON DOLLARS. We cannot control the actions of other governments, but we can and should set into motion certain self-protective, basic economic forces to prevent foreign monetary policies from retarding our own recovery.

THE WORLD VALUE OF GOLD CAN BE LOWERED BY

(1) DECREASING PRESENT DEMAND FACTORS, which today are unduly exaggerated and arise from

(a) World-wide private hoarding.
(b) Artificially manipulated government foreign exchange control purchases of gold and/or gold currencies.
(c) Requirements of gold bloc nations for maintaining redemption of currency in gold.

A major part of these demand factors, (a), (b) and (c), can be rendered ineffective by the general adoption of gold embargoes. This can be accomplished by a more aggressive pursuance of the present gold purchasing policy of the United States as a temporary measure, because such action would set into motion natural economic forces which would render untenable the present position of gold currency countries. If all currencies were temporarily "off gold" the much feared international monetary chaos need not follow, as the relative values of the different currencies would then depend solely upon their supply and demand arising from legitimate commercial and financial transactions. The exchange value of the dollar might rise due to such a legitimate demand, but a rise in the exchange value of the dollar would not then cause dollar prices to fall, on account of the greater upward pressure on dollar prices exerted by rising world prices. A generally adopted gold embargo and suspension of currency redemption in gold would diminish the effective demand for gold and curtail the effect of the downward pressure on prices now exerted by the abnormal value of gold in terms of world currencies and commodities.

(2) INCREASING THE PRESENT SUPPLY FACTOR by recreating gold equivalent. This can be accomplished by direct action on silver—until recently accepted as money the world over. The restoration of silver to its former position of supplementing gold in monetary systems is essential. The former status of silver as a gold complement can be restored, with all its momentous effects on exchange and prices, without cost to the United States, by the expedient of offering to mint all foreign, as well as domestic, silver into dollars at the legal ratio, but with such variable seigniorage charge as to permit the U. S. to regulate the gold value of silver from time to time. The silver dollars so minted would be lawful money, but not redeemable in gold. The seller of silver would purchase either American goods and services or foreign exchange. In one case, United States trade would benefit with higher prices; in the other case, the United States "Stabilization Fund" would benefit in its control of the dollar, as the foreign exchanges would rise in their relation to the dollar, due to the sales of dollars. Thus would be obtained a compete control by the United States, of the exchange value of the dollar, coincidental with rising American prices.

THE WORLD-WIDE COLLAPSE in the VALUE OF GOLD through this direct action on both the demand and supply factors (and the minimizing of the effect on prices through exchange of the value of gold) will cause a rise in prices, measured in gold, throughout the world. This rise in world prices could not fail to facilitate a rise in American prices. The former gold currencies dropping and the silver exchanges rising, (and effective exchange manipulations against gold no longer possible), would tend to remove the present disparity of the foreign exchanges and would result in a stimulation of world trade, bringing about higher prices. The downward pressure now exerted by falling world prices on American prices would be reversed, American dollar prices would rise, and the risks of uncontrollable paper dollar inflation would be avoided.

THE SUCCESS OF AMERICAN EMERGENCY MEASURES (designed to prevent the U. S. debt structure from falling) can be assured only by a sound rise in American prices.

A RISE IN WORLD PRICES can be assured only by breaking the world gold corner.

AMERICA'S INTERNAL DEBT STRUCTURE CAN BE PRESERVED through increased business activity resulting from higher prices and without the dangers of vast inflation or of the establishment of the precedent of debt repudiation,

ONLY IF THE WORLD GOLD CORNER IS BROKEN.

Carroll County Load Exhausts Children's Aid

Director's Report Credits Federal Agencies With Easing Distress.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—A report declaring that unemployment in the county has exhausted the resources of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society was presented by Miss Bonnie M. Custenborder, director of the welfare agency, during the fifth annual meeting.

Miss Custenborder said distress in the county would be much greater if it were not for the CWA and PWA projects. Credit also is given the reforestation camps for relieving the situation faced by the society last spring.

She stated that resources for the care of neglected children who should be removed from their families and treated as public charges are exhausted. At the start of the fiscal year 40 children were being cared for by the agency. More children had to be boarded during 1933 than in any previous year.

Officers of the organization were elected as follows:

Mrs. Frank T. Myers, president; Mrs. Chester Hobbs, first vice president; Mrs. William H. Thomas, second vice president; Mrs. William Young, secretary; Mrs. Sereck S. Wilson, treasurer; Mrs. Clifford Taylor, assistant treasurer. They Satisfy

. . . people know it!

All you need is a light.

And all you want is a cigarette that keeps tasting right whether you smoke one or a dozen.

That's what people like about Chesterfields. You can count on them. They're milder—and they taste better.

In two words, they satisfy.

That says it.

Patrons Listed For MacWhite Art Exhibition

The Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins; Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Conboy are patrons for an exhibition of paintings by Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, which will be opened at the Roerich Museum in New York Saturday.

The exhibition will be inaugurated with a reception and tea. Numerous Government and diplomatic officials are expected to be present, and Mr. Louis L. Horch, president of the Roerich Museum, will speak.

The list of patrons includes also Judge and Mrs. Martin T. Manton, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, jr., Mr. and Mrs. John MacCormack, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Farrell, Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ewing Hope, Judge and Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. David Sarnoff.

While this is the first showing of her paintings in America, Mrs. MacWhite has exhibited previously in Paris, Geneva and Dublin. Her work includes a wide variety of subjects. She has planted her easel in Italy, Ireland, Brittany and Massachusetts and shows Venice in high color, a city bathed in sunshine. She has portrayed the kitchens of farm houses and has dwelt on the pilgrimages that make the rounds of the cavalry of Loughronan. The splendor of Venetian monuments, the majestic nobility of St. Mark's, the intensity of the polychrome sails of fishing boats and the antlike activity of the fish market are vividly depicted.

Sun and color seem to be the predominant features of Mrs. MacWhite's work. She has an admirable gift in the use of paint, and applies a vigorous palette knife. Indeed, all her work is marked by a singular firmness of treatment. There is ease and movement, a freedom of choice and treatment. As foreign critics have put it: "In her canvases there are the intensity of life and the glow of bold and harmonious color * * * her pictures please the eye, gladden the heart and enchant the imagination."

The Grand Coup.

One of the most spectacular plays at the bridge table is known as the "Grand Coup." This play occurs only when the Declarer finds that an opponent at his right holds a trump honor which is uncapturable by ordinary means because Dummy does not contain enough trumps to lead through the honor a sufficient number of times. It requires the Declarer to shorten his trumps to the same number as those held by the adversary to be couped by the process of ruffing winning cards in the Dummy and then to place the lead in the Dummy, so that at the twelfth turn to play a finessing situation has been established for the Declarer.

Dummy

Q 6

2 W E K 5 4 3

A J 10 9 8 7

Declarer

The Declarer leads the Queen from Dummy, which East properly refuses to cover. On the second round it is disclosed that East held four originally and that the King can not be captured through straight leads nor by further finessing, as there are no trumps remaining in Dummy. The Declarer, if he is to capture the adversely held King, must therefore reduce his trump holding to two, and he can do this only by trumping cards of other suits. In addition, he must be in a position to place the lead in the Dummy on the eleventh trick, with the following situation remaining:

Dummy

N W E S K 5

A J

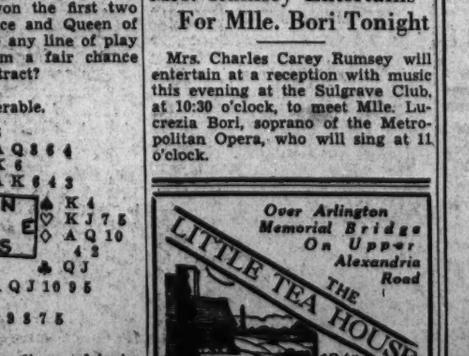
Declarer

The lead from Dummy at this point is immaterial. East is forced to trump, and whether he trumps with the five or the King does not matter. South will overtake and capture the remaining trump held by the East player.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If East is defending against a contract of four spades, played by South, and has won the first two tricks with the Ace and Queen of diamonds, is there any line of play that will give him a fair chance to defeat the contract?

North. Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Socialite Collects Only Purple Stamps

Miss Fay Jordan Describes Delights of Her Hobby.

Hobbies are more in the limelight than ever with the promise of increased leisure time as the result of shorter working hours. Fay Jordan, New Yok socialite, has used part of her leisure to build up an educational hobby that leads the way for others. She collects stamps, and she collects in one color only—purple. Her's is a 10 years' record in this field and she believes herself to have been the first woman to collect by color.

Miss Jordan has entered her collection under the cognomen "a bunch of violets" in the competitive class of the National stamp exhibition which is in progress at Rockefeller Center, New York City, and she hopes to bring home her tenth award. Her first nine have been drawn at annual shows held all over the United States.

"The fascination of a stamp collection in a color you love is the infinite variety of the little places you learn about that you would never hear of otherwise," she commented in a recent interview. She rattled off such names as Seychelles, San Marino, Stellaland, Tonga, Angola, Alaouites, Ascension, Azerbayan, Barbuda . . . . in her soft Southern accent. Miss Jordan now lives in New York City, but was brought up in Birmingham, Ala.

Miss Skinner Credits Start to Women's Clubs

Famous Actress Says Her First Encouragement Came From Them.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Unlike most women, who call their home chores "work" and go to the theater for fun, for Cornelia Otis Skinner going to the theater is work and occasionally she performs household duties as recreation.

"My husband and I often go to a little place we have in the country, where, for a change, I find it restful to cook, dust and attend to everything that goes with homemaking," she said yesterday afternoon, as she sat in the dressing room of the theater, "making up" for her matinee performance.

Watching her comb her dark, luxuriant hair and apply the rouge and eye-shadow in just the right places, the interviewer found it difficult to visualize the lovely actress scraping grease from a skillett, even in the interest of recreation. Yet, why not? If she could change from Catharine of Aragon into Anne Boleyn in 5 minutes, why could she not, with equal grace, discard the flowing velvets of the Empress Eugenie for a gingham apron?

Beginning Her Career.

"I suppose," she continued, "that I enjoy what most other women do. But, as a matter of fact, I do try to keep my home life, my husband, and my child, separate from my career."

Her career, incidentally, would be enough to absorb the average woman entirely. It had already begun when she was a student at Bryn Mawr and had started giving character sketches and monologues. Eventually these were presented at parties as after-dinner entertainments, and gradually grew into full-length programs. It was then that she began giving her sketches before women's clubs.

"Quite frankly, the women's clubs gave me my first real encouragement," she said. "I am indebted to them for my start, because they supported me for about four years. My programs, then, however, did not include the dramatic sequences.

First Play "Pretty Bad."

These came later when she began giving her one-woman performances in the theater. Previous to that time she had appeared in a number of plays on Broadway, had contributed articles to several of the foremost magazines and had written a play, "Captain Fury."

"The play was really pretty bad," she laughed. "I know my limitations and I realize now that this effort didn't deserve any better reception than it got. Of course, it never reached Broadway."

But Miss Skinner did.

Appearing in a program written, arranged and acted by herself, she helped to establish a new type of entertainment. She had added the dramatic sequences, which were to receive wide acclaim.

"The dramatic sequences are the easiest of all to write," she said. "There's nothing really difficult in preparing them for the stage, because they are already done for me. History saw to that."

Favorite Characters.

"Which of the women you portray interests you most?" Miss Skinner was asked. She paused a few moments.

"I hardly know," she said, hesitantly. "Of the Charles 2d sequence, I suppose I enjoy doing Nell Gwynn best. Her gayety and sweetness make her so appealing—so human. I can't really say, though, that I enjoy interpreting her more than Eugenie.

"Of all Henry's wives, I think Katheryn Howard appeals to me most. She was lovable, even though very unwise. We can hardly understand how she could have been such a fool! Not, of course, that we can blame her—having Henry for a husband. But with everybody in England, practically, knowing about her liaison with Thomas Culpepper, how could she expect suspicious old Henry not to find out about it, too? But going back to the question of what characters I enjoy doing most—when I consider all of them, it's really hard to say. All are very dear to me at the time I'm doing them."

Besides being a competent actress and writer, as well as a successful wife and mother, Cornelia Otis Skinner is also something of a pioneer. Like Ruth Draper, Angna Enters and Dorothy Sands, she is making the one-woman presentations a favored type of entertainment. Also, she is helping to establish the dramatic sequences as a valuable part of the theater.

'Dressmaker' Line Displaces 'Tailleur'

Suits of New Paris House Feature Softer Effect.

Paris, Feb. 14 (AP).—Suits shown by a new house here stressed the softer "dressmaker" line, contrasting with the previous severe tailleur's skirts. This line has slightly lower jackets fitted hip length and high neck blouses. They are made of deep blue, green and gray wools and gray and black necktie silks.

A chartreuse green wool model had a brown lacquered satin blouse; a navy wool had a lighter blue linen blouse three inches longer than the jacket.

Hats displayed by the most prominent modistes universally stressed an off-the-forehead line decreeing, "Show your face!"

They generally are shallow-crowned with halo brims framing the faces or rolled brims curling upward. They are made of straw, taffeta, wool, cotton or linen colored black, blue gray or green.

Farm Women Give Benefit.

Contrast.

By Katherine Smith.

You brought me laughter, quick and free,
You brought fantastic visions to
My dulling eyes, you brought to me
The brightest, gladdest side of you.

But why, through eyes of bitterness
Should I discover what you'd hide
From me, the brutal cheerfulness
Of you, upon your darker side?

Hollins College Will Inaugurate Its Head Feb. 21

Dr. Bessie C. Randolph to Be Third President It Has Had in Century.

The third president in a century will be installed on Founder's Day, February 21, at Hollins College, Hollins, Va. Dr. Bessie Carter Randolph, a distinguished graduate, who was elected president of this liberal arts college for women last July, will take the formal oath of office at that time.

Miss Randolph, a native Virginian, received her A. B. degree from Hollins in 1912 and her M. A. from Radcliffe in 1916. For several years she taught history and government at Randolph Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg. In 1926 she received her Ph. D. from Carnegie Institute of Technology. She then became head of the newly established department of political science at the Florida State College for Women.

University and college presidents from educational institutions all over the country will be present at Hollins February 21 when Miss Randolph is inaugurated. Dr. Henry N. MacCracken, of Vassar, will speak at that time, and Dr. Randolph will make her inaugural address.

A full program is scheduled for the day. In the afternoon an informal reception will be given for the new president, and at that time a large group of students will present Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite." In the evening Miss Sarah Wambaugh, of Cambridge, Mass., expert advisor on international law, will speak on "The Lost Peace."

Washington women who are graduates of Hollins College and who plan to attend the inauguration of the new president are Mrs. Douglas Clarke, Miss Emma Thom and Miss Beverly Chalker.

Blondes Staying Beautiful Are Far From Dumb

Intelligence Will Tell for Cosmetics Are Often False Friends.

Beautiful but dumb is a descriptive term which seldom applies to a really lovely blonde. The reason being that she is an intelligent blonde who preserves her fragile loveliness beyond her twenties.

Cosmetics are often the blonde's false friend. There's only a hair's breadth of difference between the art that enhances nature and the daub that gives a hard, made-up, "cheap" look.

On the other hand, if she eschews make-up altogether, she's almost sure to look "washed out," when seen in the company of her brunette sisters.

Most Effective Make-up.

The best advice to blondes is to play up hair and eyes. Use the softest-toned cream rouges, light powders with a creamy cast, and a soft rose lipstick. If she is an adept at the art of make-up, she can make up her eyes for daytime. Otherwise, it's better to reserve this enhancement for evening. Blue or gray eyeshadow is best for her. Or green if her eyes are green. If she must have mascara, it had better be brown rather than black. Though there is a growing tendency to have blonde brows and lashes dyed with a harmless vegetable dye, which carries over the effect for two to three months.

Such treatment, however, should only be intrusted to a conservative and reliable operator, since science has frequently pointed out the possible danger to the optic nerve from harmful lash dyes.

Proper Costume Colors.

Costume colors for the blonde vary. Here again is where her intelligence must come into play. If she is one type of blonde, she may wear sapphire blue or jade green. Beige or yellow is lovely on other types. Black with color accents is often highly successful, if she is not the decidedly petite type.

Orchid is good; so are blue gray and rose gray. Brown is marvelous on a certain red-gold blonde type, but gives a depressing effect to other blonde types.

Color knowledge is tremendously important to the blonde. Vivid colors will dim the flower-like quality of the true blonde; and pastel shades may give her an insignificant look. There is a trick of exactly matching her hair and her gown for evening, which every blonde should know. The effect, when successful, is ravishing.

Finds Recreation in Kitchen

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER, dramatic impersonator, finds recreation in the place most women are trying to escape — the kitchen. Domestic arts provide her occasional relaxation from the theater, which she calls "work."

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If February 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m., and from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to midnight.

If you were born on February 15, overcome any feeling of being extremely sensitive if other people offer advice or constructive suggestions. A true friend will not hesitate to criticize or comment on what he thinks is an error of judgment. Learn to appreciate an honest opinion, if given to be helpful. None of us like to be told about our faults, but if those who are interested in us did not, would we not all feel we were marvelous paragons of virtues, too numerous to count? A fault removed leaves an excellent opening for rectitude to grow.

The child born on February 15 must learn, as it grows older, not to be resentful when corrected. A morose disposition is the result of fancied wrongs. It is advisable, when trying to set a youngster right, to explain the wherefores and whys, so they will appreciate the reason for being rebuked. Children born on February 15 have far more intelligence for their age than the average adult gives them credit for or realizes. Remember, the child of today is far more advanced mentally than children of 20 years ago.

The woman born on February 15 would love to have lived when knighthood was in its prime. The chivalry of those times, she passionately yearns for now. If the neighbors would not make life intolerable, she would adore being a balcony Juliet to some romantic Romeo. Well, if your natal day is this, reconcile yourself to prosaic times, and be consoled in the thought that the man you marry should be practical enough to be able to provide a comfortable home, and have a large enough income to assure a happy life instead of an untimely end.

The man born on February 15 is wise if he remembers that, after all, "Beauty is only skin deep." In selecting your wife it is advisable to realize that a woman must possess other attributes besides physical charm. Do not let a pretty woman sweep you off your feet on short acquaintance. If you selected a business partner, his good, as well as his bad qualities, would be carefully weighed and considered. Selecting a wife, a partner for life, deserves the greatest care and consideration.

People born on February 15 must remember: "All things are changing, and we are changing with them." Many of the traditions of the past, on which you were brought up, are not practical today. Adjust yourself and thoughts to present conditions and ideas.

Successful people born on February 15:

William Henry Pickering, astronomer.

Nelson Dingley, jr., statesman.

Susan B. Anthony, reformer.

Henry E. Steinway, piano manufacturer.

Silas Weir Mitchell, physician and author.

Veteran Chef of the Occidental Has Exacting Task Of Regularly Pleasing Palates of Nation's Statesmen

Chef Colecchia, of the Occidental Restaurant, knows how to prepare the foods that please statesmen. He has plenty of them to feed, as many famous personages dine there and leave their photos on the walls as remembrance. A waiter draws a stein of beer at the Occidental's bar.

Colecchia Says Great Quantities of Sea Food Are Needed to Satisfy Cafe Patrons' Appetite

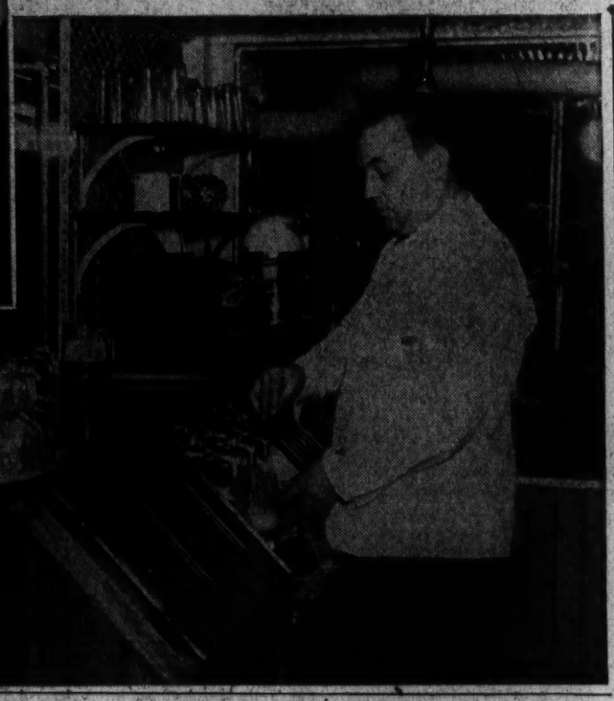
Contrasts American and European Methods of Employing Culinary Talent and Declares That on Continent Applicant Must Prove by Documents His Right to Prepare Food; Gives Favorite Recipe for Onion Soup.

By Susan Mills.

"I'll talk to you here." Chef Colecchia pulled out a chair at a table in the empty dining room of the Occidental Restaurant. "There's too much noise in the kitchen—pots and pans bump, and all the cooks yell."

Rows of famous faces stared down from the walls. Cabinet members, Senators, diplomats, famous aviators and celebrities of one sort or another characterize the decoration of the place "where the statesmen dine."

"Yes, we have many famous patrons," said the chef. "Some of them are our regular customers—the Secretary of the Interior, of the Treasury, of Labor. Many of the Senators come here and talk shop and eat sea food.



"We have to buy great quantities of sea food, 10 to 12 gallons of crabmeat in season, 9 barrels of lobsters a week, and so on.

"Our deviled crab is one of our specialties. We use only the flakes. You see, crab lumps are a muscle taken out of the back. The flakes are removed from the rest of the crab and between the claws. The lumps are just as good meat as the flakes, but the flakes are better for deviling.

How He Got His Job.

"We never use frozen fish—always fresh the whole year around.

"Yes, I like to cook fish, but it doesn't make much difference what I cook, as long as I try to make it good. After all, that's what I'm paid for.

"I've been at the Occidental 18 years. I was at the old Shoreham before that time, and I heard they wanted a cook here so I came. The manager put me to work for a few weeks' trial, and I've been here ever since, that's all.

"It was a funny thing when I first went to work at one of the Washington hotels. I went to the chef and said, 'Chef, I want a job.' He said, 'Where have you worked?' I told him the Willard and some other places, and didn't mention the fact that I had had my training abroad.

"Masquerader" Unmasked.

"So I went to work and pretty soon the chef took me aside and said I was really too good to be an American chef. Then I told him that I had had five years' experience on the other side. He understood then.

"You see, in this country a cook applies for a job and says he has worked at the Astor or the Plaza—anywhere, it doesn't matter. Then he gets a job. He may never have boiled an egg. But in Europe he has to show papers, signed by the chefs for whom he has worked. They show the type of cooking he has done, and whether or not he is satisfactory. If he has no references, he is put to work as an apprentice or washing the pots and pans. You have to serve your apprenticeship under a good chef, and then you go into a branch of the cooking, soups, roasts, or pastry, and so on.

"It is like a university—you must pass one grade before you can go into the next.

Careful European Cooking.

"That is one reason why almost all the best chefs are foreign, or have had foreign training. In Europe you have to know your business and prove it before you are a cook.

"Europeans are much more careful in cooking than Americans. For instance, in Europe lima beans are sorted according to size and cooked separately, because the large ones naturally take longer than the small. Here they are all dumped into the same pan, and that's the end of it.

"Here, I'll show you a picture of myself when I was an apprentice." He went to the kitchen and returned in a few minutes. "You see, here I am—it is like the before and after pictures, no? I am wearing the usual apprentice uniform. My knives are in a case fastened to my belt." He winked slyly. "Good thing when we got into fights—those knives."

Outwitting Sherry Nipping.

"I was an apprentice in Italy—my home. I am from the northern part of the country. Yes, they eat lots of Polenta there—in the central part, Dante's country, they eat lots of chestnuts—spaghetti in the south.

"But I'm afraid I can't tell you much," he smiled at the reporter. "Oh, yes, one thing you can tell. I won't let my cooks chew tobacco in the kitchen—if they chew, they don't cook. I didn't have any trouble keeping them from drinking, because during prohibition salt was put into the sherry we used for flavoring—that was so the cooks couldn't take a little nip now and then. Perhaps it will be harder to keep the flavorings on hand when we get the real wines back, eh?"

"I'll give you a recipe for our onion soup—it's very popular, we have to make about 15 gallons a day. You try it—it'll be the best onion soup you ever tasted."

Onions Soup au Gratin.

(Will serve four.)

One Spanish onion, 3 ounces butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 4 slices French bread, 1 quart chicken broth, salt and pepper to taste, 4 tablespoons Parmesian cheese.

Melt butter; slice onions as thin as possible and place together with butter over fire to cook until onions turn brown. Pour in flour and mix well. Pour in broth and let cook for 30 minutes. Pour small amount of mixture in four pyrex dishes, lay slice of toast sprinkled with cheese on surface of mixture and bake for 10 minutes. Serve hot.

Tomorrow the Woman's Page will introduce to you another of Washington's culinary artists.

Through Many Phases of Capital Life Cob Pipe Fits Carter's New Job When Not to Send Roses in Dixie

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Smoking a corn-cob pipe, while he offered irreproachable cigarettes to his interviewer, John Franklin Carter, equally well known as Jay Franklin, had time for a chat as he settled down on a new job as a special adviser in political economy to the Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace.

An analysis of the present American political scene by Jay Franklin has a leading place in the current Vanity Fair. Four serious studies of National and international political economy and six detective stories by Mr. Carter already are known to Washingtonians. "My slapdash detective stories are much better sellers than my political books," Mr. Carter said. His detective stories are signed "Diplomat."

• • • •

World travels have made it possible for both Mr. and Mrs. Carter to count many friends in other capitals. Resident Europeans who have known the young writer and his wife abroad are attracted to their Washington home in Leroy place. Sonia, just turned 5 years old, is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Carter, though Mrs. Carter is the mother of two older daughters, Patricia and Valentine Martyn, by a marriage to an officer in the British Flying Corps.

American parents have been so eager to follow the dictates of child psychologists in the training of children that many of them are frightened out of using normal, common-sense disciplinary training, in the opinion of Jay Franklin and his wife.

"Do you believe in more spankings, then, than psychologists advise?" inquired the interviewer. "Has your little Sonia been spanked?"

"Well-l-l—only once in her five years," admitted this learned young parent who advocates sterner discipline for American children.

Probably no other Senator keeps in touch with his home State friends while he is in Washington so closely as does Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas. Each week he makes radio talks which are carefully broadcast in Kansas at WIBW, the Senator's own broadcasting station, managed by his newspaper, the Topeka Daily Capital. This week the Capper mansion in Topeka was converted into a station for WIBW, and when thrown open to the public the station was visited by 5,000 persons. Since the death of Mrs. Capper, Senator Capper has seldom occupied his home. It was the executive mansion of Kansas during the administration of Gov. Henry J. Allen.

During his 15 years in Washington Senator Capper has accumulated a most unusual gallery of autographed photographs of persons in public life. The 200 or more such photographs, it is easy to see, are among his most cherished possessions, displayed prominently in his office above the costly antique desk that was the personal property of the late Mrs. Capper.

Never send red roses to a Southern girl.

That is the advice of a Middle Western man, who wasn't aware of the significance of a gift of red roses to a girl in the South . . . or at least in some places in the South.

"I called upon a young woman friend of mine who had been ill for months at her home in a small Southern town," the Western man said. "I brought her some red roses. Just after the flowers had been placed in water, the mother called me from the room and inquired if I intended to marry her daughter. Greatly surprised, I had to say no.

"Then you should never have brought her red roses. Southern girls regard red roses as a sign of serious intentions," the mother informed me.

"So at the risk of injuring the sale of red roses through the South I release this important information," the enlightened man announced.

Bristol Graduates Rate High in College

Bristol, Tenn., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Graduates of the class of 1932 of Bristol, Tenn., High School made better records in college than those of any other sizable high or private school in all Tennessee, according to the annual report of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Study of the report showed that Bristol graduates who attended college failed only .7 of 1 per cent of their work, as compared with a State-wide average of 12 per cent and a South-wide average of 12.7 per cent. In other words, 57 per cent of the 1932 class went to college, took a total of 416 semester hours of work, and failed only 3 hours for a record of 99.3 per cent.

Only four of the 86 accredited public and private high schools in Tennessee had a better percentage and these were all very small, none of them sending more than 7 graduates to college.

Rivera's Art Conception of Industry as Soul Of Detroit Defended by Visitor From Auto City

Dora Lappin, Noted Singer, Says It Brought About Cultural Increase.

Though he became a storm center because of it, Diego Rivera wasn't so far wrong when he painted industry as the soul of Detroit.

So says Dora Lappin, Washington-born lyric soprano who has lived in Detroit many years.

"But what of it? Certainly it's nothing one need apologize for," declared Mrs. Lappin, who is a visitor here and will make a concert appearance at the Jewish Community Center March 6.

"Labor and industry have always cleared the way for the growth of cultural interests, and out of the heroic industry of the Detroit of today one may expect the rich cultural life of tomorrow.

Detroit Groups Objected.

"To me there is something majestic and inspiring about those powerful hands of labor and industry Rivera has painted on the walls of the courtyard of the museum in Detroit's new Art Institute. They are reaching upward toward the light of a day to come; a day when cultural life will be available to every person in the city.

"But mine wasn't the popular reaction in Detroit," she laughed. "After Rivera painted those murals there wasn't a club group, nor a church group, nor a music group, which didn't register a violent objection.

"But Rivera's challenge was needed, perhaps, to rouse a latent artistic consciousness. Because there followed a perceptible increase in interest in music and art. It certainly gave invaluable advertising for the Art Institute. There were gallery walks and gallery talks, and I don't believe there was a person in Detroit who didn't know the institute was there."

Parents Reside Here.

Mrs. Lappin is one of three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Steerman, of 2610 Woodley place northwest, in whose home she is visiting. She was born in Washington and was educated here, finishing at Martha Washington Seminary.

It was not until after her marriage to A. C. Lappin, of Detroit, whom she met when he was a student at George Washington University here, that she took up seriously the cultivation of her voice.

DORA LAPPIN, Washington-born lyric soprano, who will make a concert appearance at the Jewish Community Center the night of March 6, believes Detroit's industrial spirit of today is paving the way for the cultural life of tomorrow.

"Before that, it was just an accomplishment, although I always loved to sing when opportunity was afforded," she said. "Then my husband sponsored what people are pleased to call my talent. He loves good music. He didn't want my talent wasted; and, apparently, he has no objection to careers for women. Or he wouldn't have made voice study possible for me, would he?" Her great brown eyes were quizzical.

To her husband she owes the opportunity of a five years' sojourn in Italy, studying voice and languages. From this she recently returned. With her two children, Richard and Barbara, she went to Milan, and after entering the youngsters in school, gave herself to the task of developing her singing technique.

She studied voice under Fernando Carpi, and managed to hear many of the great vocal artists of the world—and music of the incomparable Toscanini's directing—before making her operatic debut at Spezia, Italy, in 1931. She sang "Michaela," from "Carmen." Afterward, she sang in the provinces, winning ovations with her renditions of the roles of "Nedda," from Pagliacci, "Mimi" and "Musetta" in La Boheme; "Marguerite" in Faust, and other lyric soprano roles.

To Mrs. Lappin there is no music like the Italian. Its light romantic quality is peculiarly appealing to her temperament, and especially suited to her voice.

But one of her great ambitions is to sing in Russia. Her ancestors are Russian on her father's side, and she is deeply interested in what is being done for the development of music and musicians under the Soviet regime.

Gauze Eye Pad Will Banish Dull And Heavy Look

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Heavy, dull eyes have no place in the modern woman's scheme of things. Though she works all day and comes home in the evening dead tired, she can remove the tell-tale traces from around her eyes. She can smooth out the little crowsfeet, and completely do away with puffiness—if she knows how.

The German chemist of whom we spoke some days ago in regard to a skin rejuvenator, after he had so successfully marketed his first product, was deluged with requests for others. His increasing tribe of followers felt that inasmuch as he had found the secret of bringing new life and light to skin, he could go on from there and accomplish other miracles, too. The chemist turned his attention to this sort of thing. In one of his experiments dealt with an old garden herb which he remembered hearing his grandmother tell about when he was a boy. It grew profusely along the banks of the Rhine and was frequently gathered and used by old peasant women to cure all manner of ills.

When this doctor-chemist made this experiment he found that many of the properties with which his grandmother had endowed this "wonder plant" were there, in truth. He had designs drawn for gauze eye pads which he stuffed with the herb. This pad, dampened with warm water and laid across the eyes, most miraculously drives away both eye-fatigue and the consequent strained appearance.

Indestructible Dolls.

There's a new species of dolls on the market. They're first cousins to the old rag dolls but ever and ever so much more sophisticated. These are made of a very fine quality of felt strips placed one on top of the other to form the heads, trunk, and limbs of one of the nicest families of dolls we've seen. They are the kind of doll a child loves to carry to bed, to sleep with it clasped in her arms.

This particular variety was made for hard wear and tear. They can be ducked, dragged, kicked at, pinched and treated most shamefully, and still not seriously damaged. They manage somehow to keep their shape and affable expression.

These dolls come in the guise of Little Miss Muffet, Simple Simon, and the little Dutch Girl. For small boys who might not care so much about dolls there are little felt Jumbos and Scotties that can stand the gaff too.

Conservative Radios.

Radio manufacturers are not content to sit back and be satisfied with present products. They are forever launching something with more public appeal. And we stand by, helplessly, and admit that here indeed is a product well worth our patronage.

One of these very new radios comes in a wooden box cabinet, very plain and conservative. Usually in shopping around for a portable radio we come across all kinds of models, which make no pretensions, or too many, to capture our artistic eye. But here is one which by its very plainness and simplicity of line which takes the laurels. For such a small radio, the depth of tone is astonishing.

Think what a shame to travel around the neighborhood carrying such a little beauty in careless fashion. To protect it from scratches and to make it easy to handle, there are specially designed little portable radio hand cases made of deep tan suede, fastening at the top with a zipper.

Bargains to Be Had in Evening.

The after-inventory sale in a downtown store is certainly clipping the costs off a lot of household necessities and interesting novelties. There are 50-cent fiber whisk brooms, now 17 cents. Paper napkins, ordinarily 10 cents, now 5. A 10-cent roll of cellophane, 4 for 25 cents. A $1.50 set of chessmen and board, 98 cents. A child's blackboard reduced from $1 to 59 cents. A 50-cent box of writing paper, 35 cents.

During the sale there are no deliveries from the store but time is allowed for everyone to come and shop. It's conveniently open until 10 p. m.

Zippered Wallets.

An F street shop is displaying some lovely leather wallets with unusual zipper fastenings. Wives who are exasperated with their husband's carelessness in stuffing bills in his pocket, or sliding them half way into an open wallet, will do well to stop by and purchase one of these. They're moderately priced, convenient to carry, and come in two shades, black or brown.

Keeping Parties at Concert Pitch.

A unique package on the market now is known as mental whoopee. It contains 20 sets of seven party games, and such games as they are! They are designed to show just how dumb, or how bright we are. They test our observation, or concentration, and sense of deduction—all this painlessly. Most of them are competitive things, ideal for keeping a party in full swing.

New Spring Styles Are Subtle Blend of Grace and Utility

Babson Says Nation Needs "Secretary of Character"

Statistician Declares Present Breeding Methods May Bring Downfall.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 14 (AP). Systematic development of character through the home, school and church was recommended by Roger W. Babson in an address here before the Committee of One Hundred, exclusive organization of business and social leaders.

The statistician said he favored the appointment of a Secretary of Character in the President's Cabinet to have charge of education, the motion picture industry, taxation and genetics.

"If we love our posterity," he said, "we will unite with the President and aid him toward working out his goal. What is the solution of our economic problem? The development of character.

"Let us develop character like we developed our crops and the other problems would solve themselves.

"You never can get any where by asking a man how much he has. He should be asked how he got his money and what did he use it for. Then adjust the taxes accordingly.

"The way we are breeding people will bring about the downfall of the Nation. People who have fine character have from one to three children, while those who are causing us trouble have from five to ten children. Of course, there are exceptions to this, but I am speaking generally."

"I have no fear of our economical problems for the immediate future, but I do fear for our children and grandchildren, perhaps within 10 or 20 years. Their futue depends upon what happens within the next two geneations."

Lace Evening Frocks Are Delight to Eye

Gowns of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 14.—After the glitter and shine of the early winter evenings, what an eye-gladdener the cool lace evening frock is! And how natural that this delicate stuff should be so much worn in a season when a look of feminine daintiness and refinement is an outstanding trend of dress fashions.

Black lace in webbed silhouette against the snow of a dinner table. White lace in fragile contrast to the black suit of a dancing partner. Cream color . . . rose beige . . . shell pink . . . pale blue and green . . . and all the rich jewel shades.

Quite simple styles are best, letting finely-traced designs show unrivaled. That's why so many lace frocks are self-trimmed, or combined with a near-relation like net.

Streamline in Lace.

The most formal lace evening frock gives you a stately air. Long flowing lines; scarf draped across the high neckline and fluttering down over the cut-out back; low skirt fullness swelling into a foamy train. A frock that puts you most effectively into the 1934 streamline silhouette, with all the details swept to the back.

The long-sleeved dinner frock with high neckline and deep back decolletage looks especially romantic in dainty lace. (You see the effect in the picture.) Sometimes this is an honest-to-goodness one-piece frock. More often it only looks that way, and really turns out to be a formal frock with a separate long-sleeved jacket.

Many Jackets.

Jackets of all kinds are varying these lace fashions, and making them handy, two-in-one frocks. We saw one short butterfly jacket with loose cape sleeves get elected to go on a cruise. (They're great travelers, you know, since they shake right out smooth after packing.)

Fingertip jackets with long loose sleeves, and fitted ones with the new peplums help lace dresses to go more places too.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Diet in Dyspepsia.

While there are many causes of what is called dyspepsia, disorders of the gall bladder make up the largest part. Some of these gall bladder disorders are caused by or accompanied by gall stones. In others there is gravel in the bile, but it does not stick together to form stones. Other gall bladder troubles are the result of infection, with or without mucous plugs that plug up the bile ducts. In nearly every case of prolonged disorder of the bile ducts some damage has been done to the liver.

Since dyspepsia has many causes there is no one way to treat it. The method that cures in one man may be quite useless for the next one. Since in so large a proportion of the cases the gall bladder trouble is responsible for the stomach symptoms, treatment should be directed to the former rather than the latter. What is done for the relief of stomach symptoms is to be regarded as of secondary importance.

The trend of opinion now is strongly toward the theory that many gall bladder troubles are due to an excess of cholesterol and other near-fats in the blood. Since there are methods of testing the blood for the amount of these substances it contains, and since physicians are increasingly keeping track of the cholesterin content of their patients' blood, we will know more about the relation of cholesterin and other liquids in the blood to dyspepsia, gall stones and other gall bladder diseases, damaged liver, atheroma of the arteries, aneurysm and apoplexy than are now known.

Since we get most of the cholesterol in the blood from our diet, we are interested in knowing which foods contain an excess of it and which are poor in it. According to a table compiled by Drs. Twiss and Green, those richest in the near-fats are brains, liver, kidney, sweetbreads, roe and yellow of an egg. This is in a list of 25 foodstuffs. The lower five in the same list of 25 are milk, rice, flour, pork and beef.

As experiences accumulate we will find that some changes will be made in this list. There will be many additions and some foods will be shifted considerably in their relative position. For example, the authors say that peas and beans, once regarded as rich in cholesterol, are now thought to be low in that substance though rich in one that is somewhat similar.

Based on this line of reasoning, the authors treat certain kinds of dyspepsia principally with diets. These diets are composed very largely of starchy foods and sweets. These carbohydrate foods are the keystone of the treatment. Their diets are rich in breads and cereals, sweets and desserts, vegetables and fruits. They are poor in fats and in meats. They contain very little eggs, brains, roe, sweetbreads, liver, kidney, butter and cream. Not much butter, eggs and cream is used in cooking, nor are they added in quantity to cereals, breads and beverages.

The meals should not be large or heavy, highly seasoned, or rich. Many dyspeptics are sensitive to fats. Some of these have to omit olive oil, salad dressing, fat meats and gravies from their diet. However, most of them appear to get along better with straight fats than they do with fat liver, brains, butter, egg yellow and other fats that analysis shows to contain more cholesterol.

Some dyspeptics do better when they eat small meals and with regularity and frequency. Others are more comfortable when they give the digestive apparatus long rest periods by eating only twice a day. However, those who eat twice a day are apt to eat at least one heavy meal, and heavy meals are apt to prove harmful. It is safer to eat a heavy meal at noon, however, than at night.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim.

The Story Thus Far.

Kidnaped by a masked band as he was returning to London in a rented automobile, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British Home Secretary, is placed upon a gallows and told he will be hanged unless he spares Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged the following morning for shooting Gervase Benham, friend of his wife. As the trap is about to be sprung a messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is at Sir Humphrey's London home with fresh evidence.

Sir Humphrey is released. In London Mrs. Brandt tells him that there were extenuating circumstances never divulged at th trial. She leaves after obtaining Sir Humphrey's promise of a reprieve. Sir Humphrey faints as he lifts up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. When he is revived he learns Brandt has been hanged.

Mrs. Brandt vanishes on her way to have dinner with Sir Humphrey. Scotland Yard detectives find Sir Humphrey missing. Young Detective Pank goes to Norwich, where he finds that Lord Edward Keynsham, whom Sir Humphrey had visited just before the abduction by the masked gang, plotted the kidnaping. Sir Humphrey returns home unexpectedly with the story that he had merely gone to a hospital for a rest. Even Scotland Yard's chief can not make him admit the true story. A lawyer calls to tell Rossiter that he was named by Brandt as one of the executors of his estate. Mrs. Brandt is co-executor.

"That would make you the more acceptable to her as executor," the lawyer ventured to remind him.

"I'm not saying that I will refuse the post," Sir Humphrey confided. "I shall ask you to give me a day or two to consider it. I should say there is no doubt but that Brandt had money on his side somewhere. Only last year he offered to settle £500,000 upon his wife if she would promise to leave the stage finally."

"All the information we have been able to gather," the lawyer observed, "points to Mr. Brandt's having been a man of great wealth. The position will no doubt elucidate itself."

"I gather the will is an American one?" Sir Humphrey asked.

"The only will we have knowledge of at present. We wondered, as there seems to be some mystery about the English estate, whether perhaps it was deposited in some way to avoid death duties. It seems certain, however, in that case, that Brandt would have left a letter explaining things, and so far as I can gather no one has received anything of the sort. You don't happen to know of any intimate friend with whom Brandt might have left it?" the lawyer asked, as he rose to his feet.

"Not one," Sir Humphrey confessed. "I used to see his name in the papers with his wife's at a great many of these social gatherings, but I myself have been somewhat of a recluse for the last few years. Good afternoon, Mr. Debenham. You shall have my reply very shortly. * * *"

Chapter XXII.

Sir Humphrey sat back once more in his chair with a little shiver of distaste. It was not a pleasant position. Executor to the hanged man!—and a large estate missing. He summoned Carthew.

"No one else, I hope?" he inquired.

"I'm terribly sorry, sir," his secretary apologized. "A young American gentleman has been waiting for some time on the chance of seeing you. I know him slightly and didn't like to turn him away altogether—Mr. Van Pleyden."

"What does he want?" Sir Humphrey demanded a trifle irritably.

Carthew shook his head.

"He knows that I am your confidential secretary, sir, but he would not tell me. I explained that you were most unlikely to see him without knowing his business, but he decided to take his chance. For what it's worth, sir, I might tell you that I met him in Washington when I was at the Embassy. He was their best man at polo, almost good enough for the international game, and he put me up for the Racquet Club in New York when I came across him there."

Under Obligations.

"So he's that sort, is he," Sir Humphrey observed, "and you feel under certain obligations to him. I quite understand, Carthew. I will see him for a few minutes. Afterwards tell Parkins to get a bath ready. I will change into another morning suit and go down to the House. No dinner at home tell him. I will have a cutlet there when I find out how things are going."

Carthew picked up the letters which his chief had signed, and disappeared for a brief space of time. When he returned he brought with him a tall, broad-shouldered young man, pleasant faced, clean shaven, of rather boyish appearance, but with several significant lines in his face.

"This is Mr. Van Pleyden, Sir Humphrey," he announced.

"Sir Humphrey Rossiter," the young American said, crossing the room with footsteps which seemed to eat up the ground. "I am proud and gald to known you, sir."

Likes Frank Expression.

Sir Humphrey liked the warm clasp of the young man's hand, and he liked, too, his frank expression. He had rather a weakness for Americans, and this one seemed to be of a pleasant type. He welcomed him affably and pointed to a chair.

"What can I do for you, Mr. Van Pleydon?" he inquired.

"I have come on rather a curious errand, sir," the young man announced bluntly. "I want something you have in your possession."

Sir Humphrey felt a sudden chill. Vaguely the voice seemed to him to be familiar. He was conscious, too, of an odor, pleasant enough in itself but reminiscent of throbbing moments of agony, the odor of aromatic soap or toilet water. His mind drifted back to those awful moments of his ordeal in Norfolk. He was oppressed with the sense of danger.

"First tell me who you are, and then what you want," he suggested "That is simple enough," the other replied. "You know my name—Richard Van Pleyden. My people are well known in Washington and New York. I served for a time during the war and was afterward in our Intelligence Department in Washington—C. I. X., if you have ever heard of it. When the war was over they wanted me to become a bond salesman, but I couldn't stick it, so I went into secret service work."

Tells of Adventures.

"What does that mean in America?" Sir Humphrey asked.

"Oh, we have a secret service—with plenty of work to do," the young man confided. "I've been to Equador, for example, twice, and to Mexico once. There wasn't excitement enough about it, though. Now I'm working for a syndicate—a very different matter. You have been away some days, have you not, Sir Humphrey?"

"I have," the latter admitted. "Came back yesterday."

"Noticed anything about your belongings?"

"My belongings? No. What should I notice?"

"Haven't looked in your safe, I suppose?"

"Good God, no! I don't open that once a month."

"Open it and have a look," Van Pleyden suggested.

Sir Humphrey rose to his feet, and every instinct he possessed warned him to ring the bell and summon Carthew. He resisted, however, out of sheer obstinacy, crossed the floor of the room and opened the safe.

"Everything as you left it?" the young man inquired.

Sir Humphrey, who was genuinely startled, made no reply for a moment. He stared in dismay at the disordered chaos of papers.

"Rather an untidy mess, I'm afraid," Van Pleyden continued. "We left the safe till the last and fancied we heard some one coming. Try your bureau.

Sir Humphrey unlocked his desk and looked through its contents, usually a miracle of neatness, now in obvious disorder. In a very few minutes he returned to his place.

"My papers, both in the safe and the bureau, appear to have been disturbed and the contents of both thoroughly ransacked. Have you had anything to do with this?" he asked sternly.

Difficult Proposition.

"Certainly I have," the young man assented. "You're up against a pretty difficult proposition, you know, Sir Humphrey. While you've been away there is scarcely an inch of this house that has not been searched, and yet I'll bet your servants are as honest as the day. Well, I'll own up, sir. You've put one over on all of us. You've been too clever for us."

"I'm glad of that," Sir Humphrey remarked. "Quite reassuring."

"So was the lady. There isn't one of her boxes that hasn't been gone through, and the rooms she has been occupying have been searched just as thoroughly as yours. No luck. However, the situation at the present moment is slightly improved. We are here alone together under favorable circumstances, and you have to sit there and face the questions which I am going to ask you. Where is it, Sir Humphrey?"

"So you're a Secret Service agent," Sir Humphrey mediated, leaning back in his chair. "Forgive me for taking rather a professional interest in this matter."

"Not in these days," the young man replied. "That was what we used to call ourselves when we were in Government employ. I quit Washington some years ago."

"For whom are you working now, then?" Sir Humphrey inquired.

"Myself," was the cool reply. "I am one of the syndicate."

"What syndicate?"

"It's just a little too early to ask that question," Van Peyton regretted. "We want something that either you or Mrs. Brandt must have. We have had a pretty good search for it and failed. During the last few hours we've had absolutely definite information. We know now that we need not bother the lady. It is you, sir, who have what we want, I am here to get it."

Manner Is Good.

"Your manner is good," Sir Humphrey acknowledged, "original, too. You might make yourself more comprehensible, though. For instance—what is it that you want?"

"You know that perfectly well, sir."

"I can assure you that I do not." Van Pleyden smiled incredulously. "We want the key," he confided.

Film Production Lags at Halfway Mark—Grace Moore to Star in Novel Musical

Third of Films Ready as Year Is Half Spent

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

It is highly probable that the last half of the current year—we are at the halfway mark now, in the matter of film releases—will witness greater productional activity in the motion picture industry than has marked the first six-month period.

This will be made necessary by the producers' avowed determination to make good all of their preseason promises on schedule. Since only a third of the scheduled productions for the current year have been completed to date, this means renewed and redoubled studio activity from this point forth.

Only a few of the producing companies have been able to come up to the midyear mark with half of the product on the way to the country's exhibitors. Fox is one of these fortunates and Monogram, of which one hears comparatively little in this neck of the woods, is another.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO-Radio, Warner Brothers and First National, Universal and practically all of the others are lagging. All, however, insist that when the producing year is completed they will be even, all of their contractual obligations met.

Off to Slow Start.

If this optimistic expectation can be fulfilled, a similar "slow" season will be avoided next year. Owing to industrial conditions, both within and without the picture industry last fall, the selling season was set back many weeks past the accepted date of September 1, when it should be well under way, contracts signed and a clear field ahead for the studio run. If this year's product is cleaned up on schedule, corresponding delay, it is pointed out, will not occur next fall.

Since they are all square with their projected list of productions to date, it is perhaps not surprising that Fox should hold out promise of interesting developments in the near future.

Sol Wurtzel, in charge of studio production for Fox, announces that on March 1 the cameras will begin to grind on "Merry Andrew," from the play by Lewis Beach, in which Peggy Wood will appear for the first time opposite Will Rogers.

"Gold Rush of 1934" is already in work with Claire Trevor, Harry Green, Roger Imhof, Jane Barnes, Suzanne Kaaren, Wini Shaw and Blanca Vischer in the principal roles.

Jimmy and Sally.

The completion of this year's program on the Fox lot also will bring about the co-stellar reunion of Jimmy Dunn and Sally Eilers, in "Almost Honest." This is ticketed to get under way on March 5.

Three other films will be started on March 15. These are "Call It Luck," a comedy in which Herbert Mundin and Pat Patterson will be starred; "Charlie Chan's Courage," in which Walter Connolly will succeed Warner Oland in the role of Chan, and a tentatively titled comedy, "On the High Seas," with the vaudeville and revue team of Mitchell and Durant the only players so far definitely signed for stellar parts.

The cast and chorus of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," currently appearing on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater, were entertained at a swimming party in the pool at the Shoreham Hotel last night following the last stage performance. Although ostensibly offered by the Shoreham management as an opportunity for the members of the company to have a good swim, the troupers were surprised by a regular aquatic carnival staged for their particular entertainment by the members of the Shoreham Swim Club. A pleasant time was had, &c.

That New Treatment.

Speaking of forthcoming screen productions, it is that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Sam Galanty, manager of the Washington Branch Exchange of Columbia Pictures, who calls attention to the fact that his company has in preparation what it is felt will be recognized as a picture making new uses of music as an aid to narrative and plot.

This will be a new vehicle for the screen appearance of Grace Moore, noted American soprano, who has made her way from the comparatively lowly ranks of musical comedy and revue to the highest pinnacle of grand opera and concert achievement.

Columbia emphasizes the fact that this picture, the title of which is not as yet divulged, if it has even so much as been thought of to date, will not be a "musical" in the accepted sense of that term. That is to say, it will not utilize a backstage or radio station locale to justify the introduction of a long list of extraneous songs. It will, however, contain much of the world's best music which will be logically and legitimately introduced.

To Sing Classics.

During the unfolding of the drama, Miss Moore will sing the best known aria from Verdi's "La Traviata," will be heard in the "Sextet" from Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," in an aria from Bizet's "Carmen," the "One Fine Day" aria from Puccini's "Madam Butterfly," and an original composition being written by Victor Schertzinger, the composer-director under whose supervision the picture is being made.

The way it all comes about is this. The scene is the courtyard, or airshaft, of the boarding house in which Judith (Miss Moore) is living in Milan. As the camera pans up and across from window to window, we pick up various musicians practicing. Here is a pianist, playing a la Rachmaninoff; there a violinist doing arpeggios; in this window we see a cellist; in that a bass violinist. Judith comes to the window, and after a few preliminary scales, breaks into the aria from Traviata. The musicians hear the wonderful voice, and one by one accompany her on their various instruments.

In another movement of the story, the mistress of the boarding house is represented as herself having been an operatic singer of repute. She has seen her best days, however, long since. Her greatest triumph was scored in the Sextet from "Lucia."

She presses her boarders for rent that is in arrears—but they are all wise to her weakness, the Sextet. Whenever they see her coming they contrive to be singing or playing the Sextet music. Like a battle steed sniffing the fray from afar, her eyes light up, and for the moment she imagines herself again the triumphant singer she once was—bursts into the Sextet number—and forgets about the rent.

Logically Introduced.

Miss Moore's rendition of Carmen is introduced logically and convincingly in the picture and is an important sequence in the picture, as, of course, is the "One Fine Day" number from "Madam Butterfly."

The picture will present a side of opera stars' life that has never before been filmed, their intense interest in their work and their almost childlike efforts to amuse themselves when the strain proves too great.

Miss Moore's characterization will be not unlike the Grace Moore of real life—a woman who can sing modern ballads, such as "Remember," which she rendered on the musical comedy stage, as well as the highly emotional operatic selections; a woman who can inbue even these heavy selections with a buoyancy and sparkle no other operatic star can approach.

With certain inevitable variations, this all sounds not unlike the musical treatment followed with some fidelity by Jerome Kern nad Otto Harbach in "The Cat and the Fiddle," and later in "Music in the Air." It is the one musico-cinematic treatment that bids fair to endure as a legitimate screen form.

The promotional telegram seems to be growing in popularity. Or perhaps Vic McLaglen tipped off Ham Fisher, the cartoonist, that he got to first base with a wire last week about "The Lost Patrol" and Ham decided to try a dose of the same. At any rate, along came this westernunion bit of buffoonery from Palm Beach, Fla., yesterday, which is quoted for what it is worth—if anything:

"Nelson Bell, Washington Post: You ask me how I started 'Palooka.' I don't know, but if you asked me how I stopped him I could tell you he leads with his left, I ducks and counters with my chin and he breaks his dukes. I win on technical K. O. I'm on my vacation and can't be funny on a bet. Too tired relaxing. (Signed) HAM FISHER."

Very nice, Ham, only we did not ask you nothin'

Mr. Fisher, it may be explained, is the comic artist who draws The Post's comic strip of "Joe Palooka," which has been loosely translated into a screen comedy that is coming to RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow, with Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez, featured. A very droll fellow, Mr. Fisher.

A Man of Parts.

Ernest Charles, leading tenor with the "Greenwich Village Follies," coming to the Fox stage on Friday of this week, where it will succeed another successfully condensed revue in the "Vanities," is a native of Los Angeles who has had a distinguished career in music.

Mr. Charles is a composer of the first rank, in addition to being a singer of similar standing. Some of his popular numbers, notably "Clouds" and "My Lady Walks in Loveliness," are featured by John Charles Thomas, eminent barytone, who, after a brilliant concert career, is now singing with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Co. Another prominent Charles composition is "Sweet Song of Long Ago," which is used by both John McCormick and Lawrence Tibbett in their concert repertoires.

When Mr. Charles reached New York from California aboard a tramp steamer some years ago, he stepped almost from the deck into the leading tenor role of "My Maryland," in which he played for 14 weeks. He then proceeded to Cleveland, where he did some radio work. Some one liked his voice well enough to call Vincent Lopez' attention to it and "Lopez speaking" kept Mr. Charles tied up for a year, after which followed an engagement in New York in George White's "Scandals."

Mr. Charles' ambition, naturally, the circumstances being what they are, is to write his own light opera and then sing the leading role in it himself. Already he is said to have chosen his subject and written several songs and duets which he hopes may eventuate into the nucleus of a satisfactory score.

"Three-Cornered Moon," Gertrude Tokonogy's comedy hit, which has scored on both stage and screen, will be presented Thursday and Friday, March 1 and 2, at 8:30 p. m., in the Wardman Park Theater by Cue and Curtain, the dramatic organization of the George Washington University. Following its New York season "Three-Cornered Moon" appeared in several lists of the "ten best plays of the season."

"So I Hear."

Ramon Novarro, just to keep the record straight, scored so decisively as a concert artist abroad last year that he is determined to continue that triumph at the earliest opportunity.

Following his week of personal appearances at Loew's Fox, beginning February 23, and a similar engagement at the Capitol Theater on Broadway, he plans to visit his native Mexico, with his first stop Durango, where he was born. A concert is planned for Mexico City, followed by visits to Guadalajara and Vera Cruz.

Central and South America and Cuba have made handsome offers for his appearance in concert.

Before sailing for Europe, probably in early spring, he plans to spend a few weeks in New York to prepare additional songs for his play, "It's Another Story," which is to be presented in London during the fall season with Novarro as its author, producer, director and star.

On the continent he plans to give concerts in Norway, Sweden, Berlin, Athens and Cairo.

Just a reminder that the Rialto and RKO-Keith Theaters still have it in for the dramatic desks and are opening their new bills tomorrow—Edmund Lowe and Shirley Grey in "Bombay Express" at the former, Durante, Lupe Velez, Bill Cagney, Marjorie Rambeau, Robert Armstrong, et al., in "Palooka," at the latter. Remember when everything used to open on Sunday? Well, we kicked about it the same way then! So what?

Extravagance Note.

A very elegant mess of inauguration weather that has been going to waste here lately, if you ask us.

Joan Thinks She Has It on You!

That is to say, Miss Blondell, by the smile on her lips and the glint in her eye, gives the impression of having taken the title of her next picture seriously. The title, since you ask, is "I've Got Your Number!" In it, Pat O'Brien appears opposite the blond star and together they are supported by a likely group of farceurs. "I've Got Your Number" is the film feature opening Friday at the Earle Theater.

Written and enacted by Miss Skinner; music arranged by Lowell Patton, costumes designed and executed by Helene Pons. Performance Tuesday night at the local Watrermen Memorial.

Three Katherines, two Annes and a Jane, and Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, who is quite definitely and brilliantly each lovely, unfortunate lady.

Despite the picturesque charm of her newer "The Loves of Charles II," and the wistful beauty of "The Empress Eugenie," "The Wives of Henry VIII" remains to many, and ever will remain, the artistic gem of Miss Skinner's extensive and varied repertoire. There appears to be no phase of human emotion beyond power of her pen and her interpretative acting ability. The magic and distinction of this actress-authoress is the impassioned moment of life itself in permitting you to see their little world through the eyes of her characters.

What does it matter that there is no one on the stage but one slender, typically well-bred young woman? She has the faculty of seizing beautiful moments, exalted feelings, sublime emotions, ribald passions, amorous frenzies, sly intriguing and working them into limpid song that comes echoing to us from across the footlights and peoples the stage with the characters of her imagination.

In rapid succession and in the colorful variations of their characters, the wives of Henry VIII pass before our eyes. Clothed in the lavish richness of the early renaissance, we meet pious Catherine of Aragon, frustrated but unvanquished; lovely Anne Boleyn, the tragically gay; pathetic Jane Seymour of the kindly impulses, undiplomatic tongue and vague forbodings; naive Anne of Cleves, ugly and honest; beautiful Katheryn Howard, who lost her head because of a love which did not include her husband; calm Katherine Parr, petty tyrant and tolerant guardian of the King's last days.

A truly remarkable solo-drama without a single dull moment and in which each personality retains its own vivid coloring.

Miss Skinner precedes her "Wives of Henry VIII" with some clever character sketches which include "Nurse's Day Out," an amusing travesty; "On a Beach at Barbadoes," which moves a little slowly, but is pregnant with tragedy; "A Lady Explorer," a delicious satire upon lady lecturers, and "Hotel Porch," the most trite of her characterizations, which is, nevertheless, a pitiless expose of a selfish woman's machinations.

For those who appreciate the theater in its highest form there can be no more enjoyable evening's entertainment than this unique performance presented by a woman who is truly a daughter of the drama and a most charming personality.

"The Wives of Henry VIII" will be repeated tonight, with "The Loves of Charles II" the matinee attraction, augmented by a group of the shorter sketches.

Liberty Called Major Problem

Virginia Professor Cites Dangers From Two Extreme Groups.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Dangers that beset liberty in the modern world in which the emphasis has shifted from political to economic democracy were pointed out by Robert Kent Gooch, professor of political science in the University of Virginia, in a public lecture last nght in Madison Hall.

"The real problem concerning liberty today is how to face frankly changed conditions and yet find a solution which will make possible a new freedom," Prof. Gooch said.

"Reexamination of liberty is the only procedure which offers any hope of steering a middle course between authoritavian opponents of liberty and its uncritical champions.

"The former in reality praise authority and call it liberty. Though this is an implicit tribute to liberty, a common-sense decency ought to render such a claim impossible. Uncritical champions of liberty continue to advocate what are in reality eighteenth century concepts. They think in terms of the French revolution, in terms which belong to an agrarian era, and show little evidence of realizing that conditions have changed, that a new era in liberty has been opened.

Virginia CWA Orders Present Work Continue

CCC Jobs for 50 World War Veterans Open in Old Dominion.

Richmond, Feb. 14 (AP).—Civil Works Administration projects in Virginia will continue uninterrupted despite the fact that tomorrow marks the "deadline" against which many local administrators have been working.

Instructions to this effect were sent to all district and local officials by State Administrator William A. Smith.

This order is to continue projects already under construction or approved by the State administrator.

Jobs in the Civilian Conservation Corps are open to 50 World War veterans with the quota to be filled by February 17, it was announced by Col. E. W. Jordan, regional manager of the United States Veterans' Bureau here.

Enlistment will be for six months.

1,200 Men at Work.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Maj. Walter Washabaugh, CWA administrator for Albemarle County, announced today that 1,200 men are now employed. Last week's pay roll was $13,000.

Up to the week ended February 10 the total paid out for labor had amounted to $84,700.08. Materials used during the same period cost $32,317.02.

Will Study Relief Standards.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—A committee to study standards for local public relief agencies has been appointed by the Roanoke Council of Social Agencies. Mrs. James J. Izard, president of the Junior League, is chairman of the committee, which includes Clem D. Johnston, T. X. Parsons, Miss Elsie Dyer, T. C. Rohrbaugh, Mrs. Joseph Forman, Dr. F. A. Farmer, M. A. Smythe and Judge Randolph C. Whittle.

Miss May Hankins, director of the Roanoke Social Service Bureau, says the bureau now is functioning along indefinite lines.

Mrs. E. H. Ould, J. S. McDonald, A. G. Smith, jr., A. B. Richardson and Mrs. M. S. Battle were named to bring in a slate of officers for the Council of Social Agencies.

Power Project Scored.

Danville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Danville's power expansion project, which would cost $3,000,000 and be financed by PWA funds, is described as "an unsound gamble" in the minority report of the city council today.

The report further declares that on the basis of employing 1,500 persons for two years at Government wage scales, the undertaking will finally cost $9,000,000.

Possibility that the Tennessee Valley Authority will bring power to Virginia cheaper than it can be generated here also is cited in urging defeat of the project in the referendum February 26.

Danville children, recently prohibited from skating in the streets, have been assured continuation of their winter sport under police protection.

The PWA committee has received instructions to select ten streets and have them roped off at night.

Old Style Buggy Sought by Smithsonian

Institution Wants an 1820 Model to Complete Its Collection.

Wanted—a buggy.

Don't rush. This buggy must be one of the first type made—back in 1820. The Smithsonian Institution wants the vehicle as a gift to the National collection. So if you have an ancient four-wheeler stuck away in the attic or out in the wood shed, come forth and do your part for your country.

The buggy, it is pointed out by Carl W. Mitman, head curator of the arts and industries department of the Smithsonian Institution, is an innate American product, but there is considerable mystery affixed to its origin.

It first appeared about 1820—a miniature wagon equipped with cross-wide springs, usually with a small rectangular body and four wheels. The inventor is unknown. The idea is believed to have arisen independently in the minds of several individuals. There was no patent.

Like the automobile of today, the buggy appeared in a multitude of body forms—from the old wheelwright shops, which were to be found in almost every village between Boston and Wilmington, Del. Speedier and as sturdy as the chaise, the buggy idea spread throughout the world and held its own until the coming of the automobile, and even after this the buggy remained for some time in the form of the "horseless carriage."

Somewhere, the curator believes, there is a model 1820 buggy. It is needed at the Smithsonian to fill a lost chapter in the material history of the American people.

Sites for Airport Given Approval

Charles Town, W.Va., Asks to Acquire Land.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Approval of two additional sites for a proposed airport here was granted yesterday by O. T. Wyatt, of the Department of Commerce Aeronautics Bureau.

Wyatt investigated several proposed sites with members of the community airport committee. Plans call for construction of the airport with civil works funds after acquisition by the town of the necessary land. Expense of purchasing or leasing the land will be met by popular subscription.

If no site is obtained within 10 days, the project will be abandoned. Dr. Jerry A. White is chairman of the airport committee. Working with Dr. White are J. D. Yowell, I. H. Russel, of the Kiwanis club; H. O. Evans, R. G. Early and T. R. Moore, of the Lions club, and Alvin Ennis, of the town council.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.). The first of eight meetings scheduled in Frederick County on the Government's corn and hog reduction program was held at the high school building this afternoon. Nearly 100 farmers of Middletown, Burkittsville, Jackson and Catoctin districts attended.

The plans were explained by Paul E. Nystrum and Joseph Vail, of the University of Maryland Extension Service, and County Agent Henry R. Shoemaker.

Next Wednesday has been designated as sign-up day for the farmers of these four districts. Other meetings scheduled are at Emmitsburg and Thurmont tomorrow, Jefferson and Adamstown, Friday, Frederick, Saturday, Libertytown and Walkersville, Monday.

Coal Rate Hearing Denied by I. C. C.

Danville, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). The Danville Traffic Bureau was advised today by Washington the Interstate Commerce Commission has, for the third time, denied railway companies appealing from the Danville coal rate decision of January 30, 1932, a rehearing on reparations.

In the original decision, the I. C. C., reduced the rate on coal from the Virginia and West Virginia coal fields to Danville by 34 cents a ton. Reparations for two years, and amounting to $175,000, also were allowed.

Today's decision was considered final so far as the I. C. C. is concerned, but the carrier companies can now appeal in the Federal courts.

Parks Planned For Panhandle

McWilliams Projec Opens New Beauty Spots for Tourists.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.). Plans for beautifying West Virginia State highway roadsides through PWA provision of parks for tourists, were brought to the Eastern Panhandle today by A. McWilliams, of the State road commission.

Mr. McWilliams, botanist and an experienced landscape man, regards the Eastern part of the State as particularly adaptable to beautification programs because of the wealth of its natural beauties. Parks are to be created on land donated to the State, and will be equipped and maintained by the State road commission.

Mr. McWilliams will meet representatives of the garden department of the Women's Club, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs here tomorrow night, to discuss plans for Berkeley County.

Bad Weather Holds Up Pacific Flight

Honolulu, Feb. 14 (AP).—Continued stormy weather in the vicinity of Midway Island today resulted in a further postponement of the flight of three naval seaplanes over 1,300 miles of the Pacific Ocean.

A message from Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, who had reached Midway aboard the aircraft tender Wright, said the planes should not take off in the face of prevailing bad weather.

Charlottesville To Keep Court On House Vote

Coleman's Bill Loses; Meeks as 29th Circuit Judge Indicated.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Feb. 14.—Unfavorable reports on measures to abolish the Charlottesville Corporation Court were agreed on today by the house courts of justice committee without a record vote.

The committee action, climaxing a two-hour hearing, was expected to result in the election by the Legislature of Edward Meeks, Amherst, as circuit judge of the Twenty-ninth District, succeeding the late Judge Bennett Gordon, Lovingston.

Delegate J. T. Coleman, jr., Lovingston, author of the bills involved, explained his proposals would eliminate the Charlottesville Corporation Court and place that city in the Twenty-ninth Circuit Court District with Amherst and Nelson Counties.

Transfer Asked.

His plan also called for transfer of Fluvanna, the third county in the Twenty-ninth, to the Eighth Judicial District.

Under the Coleman program, Judge A. V. Dabney, Charlottesville Corporation Court, would have been made a circuit judge.

Senator John Battle, Charlottesville, said his only interest was to see that his home town retained a court, irrespective of its name.

Robert Whitehead, Nelson County commonwealth's attorney, testified the shift would bring substantial savings to both the State and the counties by eliminating the salary of one judge. He said the new district would have an "ideal" population of about 50,000.

Shrader Objects.

Delegate E. O. McCue jr., Charlottesville, indorsed the measure.

Delegate L. H. Shrader, Amherst, opposition leader, charged Dabney would be unable to devote sufficient time to the counties. He insisted the circuit should remain as now constituted.

Other advocates of a hands-off policy included B. B. Campbell and S. D. Martin, Lynchburg attorneys with clients in the Twenty-ninth Circuit.

Wife Freed In Killing.

Norfolk, Feb. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Lelia Evans Rawlings, whose husband was killed when he grappled with her for possession of a gun, was freed today when arraigned in police court on a homicide charge.

She told Judge Sprindle that her husband, Lee Rawlings, returned home drunk February 4. She and her two children sought refuge in her bedroom, but her husband advanced on them with the gun. Her husband held the barrel and she the butt of the gun.

"The gun went off; that's all I know," she said.

Under his will, Rawlings leaves his entire estate, valued at $32,200, to his mother, Mrs. Eliza Wilson Rawlings. The will was dated August 1, 1931, several months after the Rawlings were married.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl). Revamping of the rural mail delivery system here has resulted in the consolidation of a number of routes and the retirement of a group of carriers who had served 30 years.

Three 30-year men at the Hancock postoffice have been given the privilege of retiring.

New York Temperature Hovers Near Zero Mark

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—The temperature dropped to 3 degrees above zero today, 28 degrees below the average temperature for this date and 2 degrees above the record low for February 14, established in 1916.

Twins Contest To Be Feature At Food Show

Whistlers Also Will Have Opportunity to Blow a Few Notes.

A twins contest tonight, and a whistling contest tomorrow night will conclude the series of entertainment competitions which have featured the third annual food show of United Food Stores, Inc., in the Washington Auditorium this week. The show will conclude Saturday night with a gala Mardi Gras carnival.

Twins most alike and twins who least resemble each other will figure in the prize awards, and the whistling contest is open to "all comers," Morris L. Kraft, president of United Food Stores, Inc., said.

Prizes in these events supplement the awards of capital prizes, including radios, refrigerators, washing machines, vacuum cleaners and other household appliances given nightly. Patrons of the show during the week will be given an opportunity to win an automobile Saturday night.

The cooking school of the Home Service Institute will holds its last two sessions this afternoon and tomorrow. This feature has drawn hundreds of housewives, according to Miss Wilma Coleman, in charge.

The baby contest yesterday afternoon resulted in a tie, with two prizes awarded. The winners were Patsy Sherzer, 23 months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sherzer, of 1444 V street southeast, and Jerry Shrout, 21 months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Shrout, of 303 South Spruce street, Lyon Park, Va. This afternoon babies between 2 and 3 years old will be eligible.

Exhibitors and show sponsors still have left huge supplies of free samples and food baskets which are distributed hourly during show sessions, from 2 to 5:30 p. m. and 7 to 9:30 p. m. daily.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14 (AP).—Another continuance for one week was granted today in the petition of Fay Webb Vallee for $7,400 monthly temporary alimony from her orchestra leader husband, Rudy Vallee. U. S. Building Faces Delay As 225 Quit

Mechanics Strike at New Labor-I.C.C. Structure; Tie-up Feared.

Union Protests Hiring of Carpenters to Lay Tile Flooring.

Another shutdown, a repetition of the one last fall which threw 1,000 men out of work for six weeks, looms today at the new Labor-Interstate Commerce Commission Building, following the walkout of 225 skilled mechanics yesterday.

The strike, supported by the Washington Building Trades Council, was called in protest against carpenters laying mastic tile flooring in the connected buildings. Cement finishers claim this work, arguing it was awarded them by the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

The carpenters', electricians' and bricklayers' unions are not affiliated with the building trades department, parent body of the local council.

Contractor Neutral.

"James Stewart & Co., the general contractors on this work," said a statement by E. A. Burnap, construction superintendent, "have been trying for many months to have the unions agree which trade shall lay the mastic tile flooring so the building could proceed. However, after it was found impossible for the unions to get together, the James Stewart company was forced, due to completion time, to order their subcontractor to proceed with the laying of this floor.

"The general contractor is strictly neutral and does not care which trade lays the floor so long as the work can proceed."

Carpenters started the job Monday. The flooring comes in foot-square blocks about half an inch thick, resembling linoleum, which are laid and seamed. Yesterday noon the cement finishers started walking out and were followed by sympathetic members of 12 other trades.

Union Warning Ignored.

The contractors were warned by the cement finishers and plasterers unions after carpenters were given the job Monday. The company's reply was to increase the number of carpenters, said Burnap.

At the close of the working day about 250 workmen were still on the job, according to the superintendent.

Some of the strikers may return today, Burnap speculated, or more workmen may join the walkout. In the latter case a complete tie-up will result if a sufficient number lay down their tools.

Merchants Catch Alleged Robber

Knocked Unconscious as Alarm Rings.

Trapped as he allegedly rifled a cash register of the Reliable Automobile Service Co., 2129 Fourteenth street northwest, Latimer J. Matthews, colored, 29, was knocked unconscious by an employe of the shop yesterday and taken to Gallinger Hospital with a possible fractured skull.

Albert Masters and Milton H. Trappe, employes of the store, were working in a rear room when an alarm on the cash register sounded. They said they found Matthews looting the till.

When the man attempted to flee, police were told, Trappe seized a stick and struck him. At the hospital, police said, they found $10.50 in his pockets. His condition is undetermined.

Street Car Service Termed "Inadequate"

A resolution seeking relief from what was termed "inadequate service" being rendered by the street car companies has been adopted by the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, No. 2, American Legion, it was announced yesterday.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to the Public Utilities Commission, and another to Representative Loring Black, New York, of the House District Committee, who is making an investigation of street car service.

Liquor Tax Charge Holds Man for Jury

Charges of possessing liquor on which no tax had been paid yesterday held Barney W. Wilson, colored, for action of the grand jury under bond of $1,000.

Wilson was brought into Police Court by Policeman F. W. Sanford, of the Traffic Bureau. He pleaded not guilty and waived a preliminary hearing. Sanford said he arrested Wilson with 12 half-gallon jars of liquor.

Plans for construction of a combination indoor and outdoor swimming pool at the University of Maryland will be completed by spring, the university announces.

If the project is approved and funds are made available, the pool will have a sliding roof which can be opened during the summer and closed during cold weather.

—But Old Postoffice Must Be Razed First

After weeks of consideration the Treasury Depart ment yesterday released this architect's drawing of the Internal Revenue Building as it is expected to appear eventually, fronting on Pennsylvania avenue, between Tenth and Twelfth streets, as shown. Immediate plans, financed by a public works allotment of $1,100,000, provide for an addition bounded by Tenth, Eleventh, C streets and Pennsylvania avenue. Thus, only that part of the building as far west as the center portal, as pictured above, will be started in the near future. The new Postoffice Department Building will be occupied in the next few weeks, but the Government is planning to use the old structure indefinitely after it is remodeled with PWA funds.

Robb to Press M'Alwee CWA Racket Charge

Conspiracy charges against Joe George McAlwee, CWA supervisor, dismissed last week in Police Court, will be taken directly to the grand jury by Assistant District Attorney Roger Robb, it was learned yesterday.

McAlwee, involved in an alleged "protection racket" among Civil Works Administration workers, appeared in court yesterday on four counts of petit larceny. He pleaded not guilty and was released under $500 bond for a future hearing.

Robb recommended the larceny hearing be postponed until March 7, pending outcome of the grand jury action.

Thomas Edgar Archer, a second CWA supervisor facing conspiracy charges, was held for grand jury action when charges against McAlwee were dismissed in court. He is also under $500 bond.

Wet Navy?

Yards May Be Allowed to Sell Wines.

That the Navy may go sufficiently wet to permit the sale of wine at Navy yards located in wet states was forecast yesterday by Acting Navy Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt.

A liberalization of the Navy's anti-rum regulations to admit wine where State laws permit it is under consideration by department officials, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Some time ago the Navy modified a prohibition against all alcoholic beverages in force since 1899 by allowing sale of 3.2 beer at Navy yards.

Nuns Allowed To Hear Choir

Bishop Curley Approves of Viennese Concert Sunday.

Catholic Sisters in and about Washington have permission to attend the concert to be given by the Vienna Boys' Choir Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall, according to Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey, under whose management the organization appears here. She has received word from Archbishop Curley that he has no objection to their hearing the choir.

The Wiener Saengerknaben was for several centuries an exclusively religious institution, having been founded more than 400 years ago by Emperor Maximilian I of Austria to sing mass daily in the court chapel. With the collapse of the Hapsburg regime, the group was disbanded, but was reorganized six years later by Father Josef Schnitt, the present rector. The choir has received the blessing of Pope Pius XI.

At the concert Sunday at 4 p. m., the choir will sing five selections of old church music, a group of secular songs by Rosenberger, Burkhart, Pfleger and Johann Strauss, and a light operetta, "Wedding by Lanterlight," by Offenbach.

CWA School Frescoes Win D. C. Approval

Eastern High's Walls to Be Decorated by Artists Soon.

Fresco painting on the walls of some of the District schools by CWA artists has been approved by the buildings and grounds committee of the Board of Education, Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, chairman, announced yesterday.

The frescoes will be placed on walls at Eastern High School by CWA experts in this work. Paintings on canvas will decorate walls of other schools.

The CWA art will be placed in all high schools for white students, and one junior high, th eGordon. A special committee will arrange for displays in schools for colored. About 50 projects have been approved by the buildings and grounds committee. These consist of a number of paintings of old Georgetown, which will be placed in Western High School, as well as the murals and frescoes.

The committee has arranged for further projects in District schools. Principals will cooperate with the buildings and grounds committee and the public works of art project in reccommending the type of work to be done. Execution of the projects, however, depends on the appropriation of further CWA funds.

Cooperating with Mrs. Smith in selecting the work, were Henry I. Quinn and Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith.

School Heads Plan Appeals To Congress

Await Chance to Tell of Urgent Needs Before Committees.

New Buildings and More Room in Others Held Imperative.

A conference preparatory to Congressional hearings on school needs was held by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and members of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon.

A general review was given the more urgent school items, but so far as could be learned no definite decision was made to ask for supplementary estimates at this time. The board members and superintendent are understood to have prepared themselves in the event District committees offer the opportunity to submit further requests to meet school needs.

The board is prohibited by law from making a direct request to Congress for supplementary items after the District bill has reached the Hill. However, if a committee member interrogates a school official on needs not provided for in the budget, a request may be made.

Commissioners May Act.

Another recourse is for the board to ask the District Commissioners for supplementary estimates. The Commissioners, providing they approve the requests, may in turn submit them to the Bureau of the Budget. The estimates would then have to pass the approval of the Budget Bureau before being submitted to Congress.

Rather than risk these undercurrents, the superintendent and board members are understood to favor taking a chance on members of Congressional committees giving them the opening to have further funds placed in the budget.

Officials here listed among the pressing school needs the addition to the Murch Elementary School, completion of the Deal Junior High School, a replacement of the Grant elementary or an addition to this building, an appropriation for the new Anacostia Junior High School, which was cut out by the Budget Bureau, and funds for continuing work on the new Woodrow Wilson High School.

Cold Spell Empties Rooms.

Need for the addition to the Murch School and completion of the Deal Building was brought to the attention of the board during the last two cold spells, when Deal pupils, who are attending classes in Murch because of lack of room in the Junior High School, were forced to leave unfinished classrooms because of the cold.

Dr. Ballou is understood not to favor replacement of the Grant. However, he is conducting a survey of population in the West End to determine if the number of children in the area justify the building of another elementary school or adding to the present one. This survey is among the matters understood to have been discussed by the superintendent at yesterday's conference.

Lifting 12,000 Tons With Finger Tips

Edwin C. Atkinson, chief overseer of Arlington Memorial Bridge, at the controls as he raises the two 6,000-ton leaves so the fireboat can pass on its ice-breaking mission. The boat could clear the closed span with something to spare, but no chances are taken. So far this month the bridge has been "broken" an average of once a day.

Processions to National Cemetery Must Wait as Craft Pass.

Overseer Wants Ruling Even Though Situation Hasn't Occurred.

The direct inspiration for construction of Arlington Memorial Bridge was a funeral, but funeral processions are not given complete right of way when passing over the monumental Potomac span.

Traffic was jammed and tempers strained on that Armistice Day in 1921 when thousands of persons, led by President Harding, drove with great difficulty to Arlington National Cemetery, where the body of the Unknown Soldier was to be entombed. Scarcely had the somber notes of taps melted away than Congress was asked to appropriate for a bridge linking Arlington and the District.

Necessary funds were allotted and the bridge built. But questioning of Edwin C. Atkinson, chief overseer, during a casual inspection of the structure's intricate working yesterday brought out that funeral processions play second fiddle to the fireboat or any other craft requiring opening of the draw span.

That is, if a hearse and its motorcade of mourners bound for the cemetery approach or enter the bridge just as a vessel toots for the draw, the procession must wait while the operation is performed.

Hasn't Yet Occurred.

Strangely enough, although Arlington funerals are frequent and the bridge has been in use a couple of years, such a situation has never occurred. Atkinson, who was chief overseer long before the span was opened to the public, says he planned to suggest a regulation on this still hypothetical issue, but Secretary of War Dern's list of rules was published last November before he could make his recommendation. The list, said Atkinson, does not mention the point.

From the Virginia hills nearby, as the overseer discussed the omission, came the muffled crack of a last military salute. A few moments later a funeral procession crossed the bridge, bound for Arlington, where the volleys probably were to be repeated. Three hours earlier it would have had to wait for the fire boat to pass under the two 6,000-ton draw leaves.

The "casual inspection" referred to disclosed, among other things, that the keeper's two-cylinder launch, which has saved 14 human lives and 2 horses, is being overhauled in anticipation of more rescues; that it takes 16 men to look after the bridge, which is almost half a mile long and as wide as New York's Fifth avenue, and that either from its top or from the catwalk directly beneath and only a foot or so above the river it offers some of the best scenery in the Capital.

Atkinson, master of ceremonies and an expert engineer, enlisted in the Navy in 1913 and was honorably discharged in March, 1917, only to reenlist immediately after the outbreak of war.

Leaving the service in 1919, he spent the next 11 years as a steam engineer at the Navy and State buildings. He has been at the bridge since April, 1930.

Adventurous zanies who cross the ice from shore to shore near the bridge are giving him considerable anxiety. Last Sunday, when the fireboat did not make its usual trip up the river to crack ice, four men walked across in spite of Atkinson's shouted warning. They did, however, heed his order not to take two small children with them.

One day last summer he sighted a canoe containing two youths and two girls above the bridge. One of the boys thumbed his nose at the overseer. Ten minutes later he was offering profuse apologies. The canoe had capsized about 100 yards below the bridge and all four might have been lost if Atkinson had not pulled them into his little launch.

One word more about those funerals, the keeper emphasized. The main entrance to Arlington Cemetery probably will be opened before long for the first time and that, he reckons, may hasten a showdown on which is to get right of way, boat or hearse.

He hopes there will be a ruling first to meet the delicate problem.

"Guest" Registers, Then Robs Clerk

Gets $17 but Misses More in Victim's Pocket.

A chatty stranger walked into the Astor Hotel, 1235 New York avenue northwest, early yesterday, registered as "J. C. Duncan," Baltimore, Md., and a few moments later drew a gun and robbed the night clerk of $17.

The clerk, Mosquear Brown, told police the robber was well dressed and carried baggage. He laughed and talked for several minutes after registering. Brown turned his back for a minute, then looked around to see the "guest" holding a revolver.

After scooping up the contents of a cash register, the man ripped out a telephone connection and fled. Brown said he overlooked a sum of money in his pocket.

Church Lecture Set.

Dr. Raphael Miller, minister of the National City Christian Church, will deliver an illustrated lecture on England in the Vermont Avenue Church Building, under the auspices of the Woman's Council of the church, tomorrow evening. Mrs. E. V. Pugh is president of the council.

D. C. Budget Hearing Set For Monday

Arguments Predicted on Items Proposed in Supplements.

The District Appropriations subcommittee in the House will begin executive hearings on the 1935 District budget next Monday and will probably finish them within the week.

Representative Buchanan, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, yesterday instructed Chairman Cannon of the District subcommittee to begin the hearings.

Because the Budget Bureau and the District Commissioners have already cut the 1935 budget to what they consider a minimum, it is not expected the hearings will require as much time as usual. Should the supplemental items submitted by the District heads to the Budget Bureau, but as yet unapproved, be sent to the House before a report is made on the original estimates, the hearings probably will last longer.

Supplements May Be Argued.

There is little of a controversial nature in the estimates now before Congress, totaling $35,821,013.94, save the question of whether the southeast incinerator will remain closed in 1935 and whether the Anacostia Junior High School construction item is to be restored.

The supplemental estimates, prepared by the commissioner after they found Budget Bureau cuts left them with an estimated surplus of $5,403,000, provide topics for debate, however, as does the proposal of the District heads, as yet unsubmitted, to appropriate $1,000,000 to begin construction of the Municipal Center and to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to buy the District Building for $5,000,000.

5 Per Cent Pay Raise Provided.

The supplemental estimates, now with the Budget Bureau, total $1,243,000 and provide for construction of additional school projects and a branch library in Georgetown.

While passage of the pending legislation to restore part of the Government employes' pay will reduce somewhat the estimated District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, reduce surplus, it will not, according to it sufficiently to bar the supplemental appropriations.

The present budget carries a f per cent restoration of pay as o July 1, although the Commissioner submitted their original estimate on the basis of full restoration o the 15 per cent pay-cut on July 1

Members of the District sub-committee, besides Chairman Cannon, are Blanton (Democrat), of Texas; Powers (Republican), of New Jersey; Parks (Democrat), of Arkansas; Jacobsen (Democrat), of Iowa, and Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Struck by Lamppost, Man Asks $15,000

Because he was struck by a falling lamppost that had been knocked down by a trailer of the National Delivery Association, Charles O. Hackney, of Mount Alto Hospital, yesterday in District Supreme Court filed suit against the association for $15,000.

According to Attorney J. Edward O'Connell, Hackney was standing at Ninth street and Mount Vernon place northwest last September 7 when the falling post hit him.

Court Lets Man Return Home To Feed Birds—Not See Wife

Went Back to Get Key for Clock, Row Followed, Husband Pleads.

A clock isn't much good without a key, and pigeons can't be fed by remote control—or something.

This, in substance, was the plea of Daniel Hartley in Police Court yesterday in explaining things to Judge John P. McMahon. Hartley was charged with striking his estranged wife, Mrs. Mabel Hartley, during an argument at their home, 1229 E street southeast.

The pair had been separated for some time, after being married 28 years, and Hartley established his residence several blocks away. He took with him a clock, but neglected to take a key, so he returned home for it.

Mrs. Hartley said he struck her. The husband denied it, but said he pushed her when she waved a chair in his direction.

Hartley also pleaded that he had to return home at times to feed his pigeons.

Judge McMahon agreed that the pigeons must be fed and told Hartley he might return home to do this, but ordered him not to enter the house, stay away from his wife and return to court in two weeks.

Walt Mason, Himself

Undaunted.

The floods came down where Punktown stood, and washed the town away; the buildings, made of brick and wood, were strewn in wrecked array. The water came while people slept, the billows dark and strong, and voters left their beds and wept—they wept, but not for long. For but a day were they cast down, were they distraught and sore; they said, "We'll build a better town than Punktown was before." And so with ardor they arose, and built the town anew, with ornaments and furbelows, and store fronts painted blue. And while they halted to admire the wonders they'd performed, there came along a frightful fire—the fire fiend whooped and stormed. Reduced to ashes in a night, it seemed like Punktown's end; but people viewed their ghastly plight, and felt their nerve ascend. Their faith in Punktown was not killed; they said, "It's desolate, but on its ruins we will build the best town in the State." And so they built the town once more, a Punktown fair to see, and every dwelling, every store, was modern as could be. Then fresh disasters came to pass, disasters large and small, an earthquake broke all panes of glass, and spoiled the new Town Hall. A cycline stood the town on end, caused agonies untold; a hailstorm came along to lend new terrors to the old. And still the Punktown spirit rose to meet each new distress, survived them all, and now she knows the secret of success.

Ernie Dusek Mat Choice Tonight

Battles Christy in One of Three Features at Auditorium.

Foe's Only Hope Seems to Lie in Arousing His Temper.

RASSLE addicts, who like to suffer along with their heroes, should be in for a most enjoyable evening at the Auditorium tonight for in practically every one of the five bouts carded a certain amount of agony is guaranteed. Three features are listed, all due to a finish, with the likely outstanding one being the melee between Vic Christy and Ernie Dusek.

Christy, a baby-faced California youth of 19 summers (and winters, too) seems to be rassling's tow-headed boy in this neck of the woods and he has an exceptional following, which would be even larger if he would show his temper more often. Many cash customers feel that his disposition is entirely too mild and that he takes too much from opponents without retaliating. But it should be different in tonight's fracas, for Ernie Dusek is so rough and tough that Vic is sure to get peeved in time, and, when he does, there should be quite some mat action shown.

Christy Keeps Cool.

No punches are pulled and no favors asked by any of the Duseks, which means that the smooth-working Christy, who held Ernie to a draw recently, is in for anything but a pleasant evening. When Vic does lose his temper, the fur flies, but even then he is comparatively cool and collected.

The younger Dusek, on the other hand, is a hot-headed hombre who seems to forget where he is and what he is doing when he gets real angry, and many believe that Christy's main hope of victory is to work Ernie into one of these rages and then give him the works. The dope indicates that Dusek should win, but dope does not mean much in the ear-scrambling game.

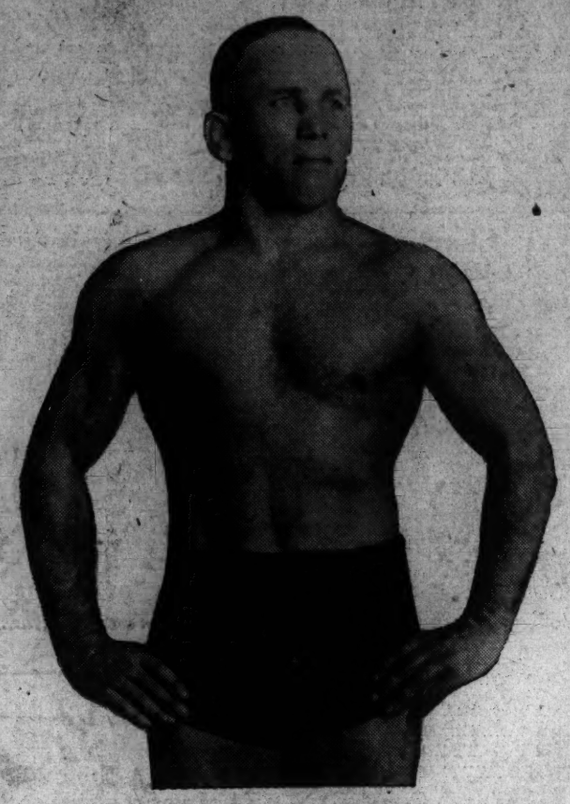
Rudy Meets Dean.

Another Dusek, rough Rudy, shows against the giant and bewhiskered Man Mountain Dean, while Paul Boesch clashes with the Masked Marvel in the other listed headlines. Rudy should win in jig time, but the Marvel promises Boesch quite a battle. The masked one, by the way, will take off his disguise after this bout, in case any one is interested.

In the curtain-raisers, Dick Shikat will open a campaign which he hopes will lead to a Jim Browning match by taking on Pat McKay, while Scotty McDougall is due to take a deal of punishment while mingling with the newly turned villain, Venka Zelezniak.

Women will be admitted free if presenting a paying escort at the door.

Job Is to Toss Man Mountain



ROUGH RUDY DUSEK,
who meets Man Mountain Dean in one of the three headline bouts on the rassle card at the Auditorium tonight. The two are slated to battle to a finish.

Virginia Tech, V.M.I. Renew Rivalry

Fives to Meet Saturday in Lexington, Matmen in Roanoke.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—The ancient rivalry between V. M. I. and V. P. I. will flare up again Saturday when both Tech basket ball teams come to Lexington and the varsity and freshman wrestling teams of the two schools clash at Roanoke. A freshman boxing meet with Greenbrier Military School also is on the home card Saturday.

Hope for Twin Victory.

V. M. I.'s crushing defeat of North Carolina in varsity wrestling and the fine showing made by the Cadet Freshman team in holding the Tar Babies to a 16-to-14 count mean that Cadet supporters have high hopes of a double mat victory over V. P. I. Coach Landis and his men remember Tech's upset victory last year, however, and are taking nothing for granted.

Bill Currence, undefeated in four starts; Capt. Charlie Dorrier, John Burgess, and Charlie Lathrop, all of whom have won three times out of four, are potential V. M. I. winners. Charlie DeCamps, 118-pounder, and Sam Lowe, heavyweight, have broken even against good opponents. The bout between Burgess and Waldrop, V. P. I.'s Conference 175-pound champion, should be one of the feature clashes.

Improved Teams.

Both Cadet cage teams are traveling at a faster gait than they were when they dropped close games to Tech quintets at Blacksburg, and the V. M. I. tossers are determined to get their revenge in '94 Hall.

V. M. I.'s close boxing score against North Carolina means that Coach Martin's boys have a good chance against a strong Richmond team. Billy Smith, football star, looked good in his varsity debut as a middleweight, and Willis Cavedo, Joe Oatley, and Bud Troutt won handily. Capt. Eddie Bain will be back in competition.

2 New Coaches For Army Eleven

Lieuts. Bryan, Doyle Are Named to Complete Staff of 1934.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP).—Lieut. Garrison H. Davidson, head coach of football at the United States Military Academy, West Point, today announced the appointment of two assistant coaches to replace Earl Blaik and Harry Ellinger and a realignment of his six assistants for the 1934 campaign.

The two additions to the staff are Lieut. Blackshear M. (Babe) Bryan, '22, a former coach at West Point, and Lieut. Ed J. Doyle, also a former assistant at the Point. The appointments give West Point an all-Army coaching staff for the first time since 1926. All were varsity players in their day.

Four Aids Retained.

Blaik and Ellinger, both former West Point men, who later resigned from the service, recently were appointed head coach and line coach, respectively, at Dartmouth. They both served at West Point as civilians.

The four assistants who aided Davidson last year, along with Blaik and Ellinger, were retained and are Lieut. Maurice (Moe) Daly, Lieut. Russell (Red) Reeder, Lieut. Laverne (Blondy) Saunders and Lieut. William (Bill) Wood.

Bryan will be first assistant coach, a new post, in charge of the second team, Davidson announced, with Daly replacing Ellinger as head line coach and Wood replacing Blaik as head back-field coach. The other assignments are Doyle, end coach; Saunders, assistant line coach in charge of the guards and tackles, and Reeder, assistant back-field coach. Davidson again will confine his attention to the first team with general supervision over the work of the others.

Penn Avenue Lassies Near League Crown

Westernport, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—The Pennsylvania Avenue High School girls basket ball team in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League took a step nearer its first league chompionship by defeating Bruce High girls, 30 to 21. It was the Cumberland girls' sixth consecutive victory. The game was rough and resulted in the banishment of three Bruce girls—Miller, Harvey and I. Biggs.

Penn led all the way, although the game was closely contested for three periods. Ethel Smith paced the Penn team by registering nine field goals. Naomie Clark accounted for 11 of Bruce's points.

Navy Downs Va. Cadets By 31-18

Both Teams in Ragged Form as New Low for Score Is Set.

Middies Manage to Lead by 14-9 Count at Halftime.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Although playing a ragged offensive game, coupled with a slump in finding the range of the rims, the Navy basket ball team easily disposed of Virginia Military Institute here today, 31 to 18. The Cadets likewise were erratic. The count was the smallest that has been registered on the local court this season.

The military boys were expected to be more or less of a set-up for the Tars, in consequence of which Johnny Wilson, Navy mentor, alternated in using first and second string players. The first half was utterly devoid of pep and scoring was particularly slow. Navy's attack functioned only in flashes and the visitors bungled their passing badly.

Mandelkorn scored a field goal in the first minute of play to give Navy a 2-point lead, and the home team stayed in the van except for one brief interval. This was after the teams had been at it for ten minutes, when Downey scored from court for the Cadets to knot the count at 7-all.

Rankin Gets 3 Points.

A moment later Rankin picked up 3 points for Navy on a field goal and foul throw, and while scoring continued slow, the Tars managed to finish the first half with a 5-point margin, at 14 to 9.

Navy started the second half with a complete second-string group on the floor. Play went on as listless as before, the Tars gathering only 5 points to the Cadets' 4 in nine minutes. At this juncture the Middie regulars returned to action, and Buzz Borries was the mainspring in a rally that gave the home team a little better advantage. Mandelkorn figured conspicuously in the closing minutes of play, while Hancock, who was the big gun for the Cadets, accounted for 7 of his team's 9 points during the half.

Frederick Bows To Silver Spring

St. John's Defeated, 19-14, in Slow Game.

Silver Spring High School won a loosely played game from the St. John's of Frederick five yesterday on the winner's court, 19 to 14.

The Springers outplayed the visitors in every department, taking some 80 shots, but making good on only 9. The Johnnies had few scoring opportunities, but had a better percentage on their shots, Rice making three from the center of the floor.

Keele and Clark were the spear-head of the winners' attack that saw the reserves in action during the last half.

Vince Dundee Accepts Terms for Two Bouts

Chicago, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Vince Dundee, Newark (N. J.) middleweight champion, has accepted terms for two title bouts at the Chicago Stadium. The first is planned for March 16 with Frankie Battaglia, Canadian, provided he defeats Kid Leonard, Moline, Ill., in Friday night's semifinal at the stadium.

The other is planned for May 11 against Jimmy McLarnin, welterweight champion. Dundee will meet Ben Jeby, New York, in a ten-round nontitle bout at the stadium Friday night.

Eastern Five Wins, 32-31, By Rally

G. W. Frosh, Ahead by 19-8 at Half, Bow to Late Attack.

Nolan and Dean Leaders as Champions Make 19-Point Splurge.

SCORING 19 points almost without interruption in the second half, Eastern High School overhauled George Washington freshmen and won a 32-to-31 decision in an exciting game yesterday at Eastern.

Assuming a 19-to-8 lead in the first half, the Frosh appeared to be easy winners, but they were completely outplayed and outfought by the high school champions in the final session. With Tommy Nolan and Lavelle Dean leading the attack, Eastern got back into the game. The drive was interrupted only once by a G. W. score.

Russell High Scorer.

Trackmen Vie At Virginia Tonight

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Many new faces will be on the Virginia varsity track team that competes for the first time in the season of 1934 in a triangular meet against Washington and Lee and Virginia Military Institute here tomorrow night.

Coach Hahn, however, is depending on the skill of the Cavalier veterans to keep Virginia in front in the three-sided contest. There'll be eleven events for varsity men, one for freshmen.

Virginia's entries in the dashes include two newcomers, Griff Dodson and Bill Minshall, and one old man, Grover Everett. In the two hurdle races Everett will be entered with the veterans, Linwood Antrin and Angus McDonald, and one new man, Donald Smith, who will be in his first varsity competition.

Run In 880 Event.

Homer Bast and Robert St. John, both varsity novices, will run in the 880-yard event, probably against Aldrich Dudley. Bast also is entered in the quarter mile with Tom Wright. St. John also is likely to run the 2-mile with George Priestman. James Briggs, Zeb Stafford and William Walcott, three youngsters, will be running in their first varsity 2-mile race.

In the mile relay the four Virginia entries will be chosen from East, Jackson, Wright, Dodson, MacDonald, Everett and Randolph Garnett.

Capt. George Coles will be Virginia's ace competitor in the shot put, the event in which he is best. James Stipe will be a new entrant in this weight event.

Listed for Pole Vault.

Bradford Weekes and William Armstrong are listed for the pole vault with St. George Tucker, Cully Wilkin and McDonald competing in the high jump.

First year men will compete in a medley relay. John Cocke will start with six laps of the running track to be followed by either Dan Yuter or Rust running two, C. L. Williams doing three, and George Waite finishing up as anchor man with 12 laps.

This will be the only varsity contest for the entire squad before the Southern Conference indoor meet, although some of the regulars may compete in Washington next week. The first year team has a meet next week against Woodberry Forest School.

Joyner, Wake Forest, Is Signed by Giants

New York, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—The New York Giants announced today that they had signed A. J. Joyner, brilliant collegiate player, of Wake Forest College, N. C., for the 1934 season. Joyner, was was graduated last June, played first base and outfield at Wake Forest. He is a right-handed hitter and had a batting average of .400 at college. Manager Bill Terry signed him in the South after lengthy negotiations.

Massanutten Wins.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Massanutten defeated Staunton Military Academy in a fast game here, 37 to 34. The visitors were never ahead. The Woodstock cadets were leading at half time, 19 to 11. Staunton tied the score at 32-all, but Henry and Hale came through with two double markers. Hale led the Massanutten scoring with 17 points. Smith carried the honors for Staunton with 12 points.

Peg-Leg No Handicap

There might be other peg-legged bowlers in the country who can match John Beckwith's scores, but St. Joseph, Mo., addicts never heard of them. He's been at it for five years now and averages 161 as a member of the Hillyard team in St. Joseph. He has never committed a foul.

The Gray Fox Was Right

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Riding down to Philadelphia to the Schmeling-Hamas fight we had, all in one cabin, Goldie, a manager; Lank Leonard, the big cartoonist; Nat Fleischer, editor of the Ring, a boxing magazine; Mike Jacobs, the ticket merchant; Pete Reilly, also known as the Gray Fox, a celebrated character and manager of many champions, and this reporter. The talk turned on boxing and on Schmeling and the Gray Fox spent most of the ride on his feet, using me as a foil and straight man and giving a very interesting demonstration of some of the finer points in the art of assault and battery.

He demonstrated the various punches that could be hit coming out of clinches, of parries for certain types of attack and then went on to lecture upon the person of Herr Schmeling, who at that time was still to face his trial at arms with Hamas. Now, as I write this I am riding home from the brawl and I am thinking how accurately the old Gray Fox analyzed Schmeling's strength and weakness.

"I never understood why they stood Schmeling up straight and tried to make a boxer out of him." Reilly said, taking the floor again. "Max was best when he fought out of a weave with left and right hands moving up and down in front of his face. His best punch was a right counter that he dropped DOWN when they hooked a left for his body under his raised guard. As soon as he stands up straight and holds the right cocked low, the punch is gone. His natural style was to throw punches out of a weave, even when it was an awkward weave. Instead of developing the weave they straightened him up. He can't fight that way."

A few hours later I watched a practical demonstration of the truth of these statements. Schmeling, standing up straight, was a ten-round target for Hamas' straight left to the face, followed by stinging right crosses. Hamas was weaving at HIM. From his straight stance, Schmeling might just as well have left both hands in the dressing room. In the last two rounds he fought from something resembling his old weave and came close to stopping Hamas. Reilly has never been more right, and Schmeling never waged a more stupid battle in all his career than he did in Philadelphia last Tuesday evening. He was quite game and quite thick.

There was a fine tactical mind at work in Hamas' corner. It had Hamas beautifully balanced with his body hung on a swivel, low and off to the right, the left hand extended. This gave Max no target whatsoever for his right. The only times the German connected solidly was when Hamas straightened up a couple of times and mixed it. There are two ways of disconcerting a weaver-one is to walk away and let him weave by himself and the other is to weave with him. Max did neither. He stood stock still, chin up in the air, a perfect target and let Hamas drill him with 20 to 30 straight left-hand shots per round. Many a time Hamas would be caught off balance and wide open for a shot and Max simply stood by him, staring, unable to deliver a punch from his awkward stance. If Hamas' weave protected him, Schmeling's position made Steve's chances doubly safe.

As early as the third round we began to bawl over to Schmeling's corner for them to send the German out weaving. He weaved in the fourth round, had Hamas at sea and in distress and won the round. And then, for some unknown reason, he abandoned it again and didn't return to the swaying crouch until the eleventh and twelfth, when he came close to pulling the fight out of the fire. Only Hamas' cool defense, the hang of his body away from Schmeling's right, saved him.

Too, the dash and zest has gone from the German. How difficult it is to recapture that. He was stable worn and in need of work. His timing was off and his reactions seconds slow. He did practically no work in the clinches, he couldn't or wouldn't get off first and let Hamas carry the fight to him. There was no appetite in the man's belly, no desperation from the clangs of the bell. He could have won had he fought the whole fight the way he battled the last three minutes. No the caravan has passed by. The day of the champion Schmeling is definitely done.

One hates to see it, and one hates to pass the verdict, but there is no other. Perhaps, with a fight or two under his belt, he may keep a fair level for a few years, but the cut over the left eye is the beginning of the end—nobody ever cut Schmeling before. Stribling gave him a shiner in Cleveland. Nobody else ever marked him. He is beginning to sop up punches. Hamas hit him six and seven times a minute without a return. His style is scrambled, and he is master of none. The goal no longer glitters as brightly. The flame of combat flickers. Ave atque vale, Schmeling.

Emory and Henry Five Trounces King, 59 to 19

Bristol, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Unleashing a general bombardment on the goal, Emory and Henry College's basket ball team scored a lopsided 59-to-19 victory over King College here. The game was a runaway after the first five minutes, with Glen Roberts, Propps, Robinson and Countiss scoring almost at will.

Handling the ball adeptly and showing uncanny accuracy in their shots, the Wasps were ahead, 28 to 4, at the end of the first half, which was unusual in that not a foul was called on an Emory player during the period. In fact, it was midway of the second half before Fulk, Wasp forward, was tagged for the first Wasp foul. In all, King had only six free throws, capitalizing on three, while Emory had 20 and scored 13.

Western's Reserves Rout Landon, 27-11

As a strategist, Coach Cliff Moore, of Western High School, was a successful failure yesterday afternoon as his charges walloped Landon, 27 to 11. Intent upon developing new material, Moore started an all-reserve team, intending to yank it when Landon started running up the score, but the reserves outplayed their rivals.

Brennan and Handley were outstanding for the victors, while Liezear was Landon's most prolific point-getter.

Both Hartley, Black Bills Indorsed

One of Two Proposals Must Be Rejected or Amended.

LEGALIZED boxing in the District of Columbia was a long step nearer realization yesterday as a result of action by the House District Committee, which voted unanimously to report favorably both the Hartley bill, providing for amateur bouts, and the Black bill, legalizing professional contests.

The amateur bill is a step in advance of the professional bill inasmuch as the Walsh boxing bill, a companion measure of Hartley's House bill, has been introduced in the Senate and favorably reported by the Senate District Committee. A professional boxing bill has not yet been introduced in the Senate.

Amateur Athletic Union leaders here were hopeful that a House vote on the Hartley bill would be taken on Monday, which is expected to be the next District day in Congress. Favorable action in the House is being viewed as certain.

Must Take Choice.

The House must take its choice between the professional and amateur bills, rejecting one or amending the other. Hartley's bill expressly forbids the staging of professional bouts while repealing that section of the District Penal Code which makes illegal the charging of admission for amateur bouts.

The District Penal Code is the obstacle in the path of amateur boxing in the schools, colleges and clubs of Washington. The penal code, forbidding the payment of boxers, does not affect amateurs inasmuch as amateur boxers receive no purses, but the section of the code preventing admissions from being charged makes amateur boxing an expensive burden to local institutions.

Under both the Hartley and Black bills, a commission of three to be appointed by the District Commissioners would be set up to govern boxing in the Capital.

Manassas Five Wins C. C. C. Game, 23-22

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Dropping a 15-to-13 lead in the first half the Bloody Angle C. C. C. lost to the Manassas C. C. C. five, 23-22.

A final spurt almost recovered the game for the brush marines, the gun ending play when their rally reached to within a point of its objective. Lee and Norfleet, with nine and eight points, respectively, led the locals in scoring, while Gleed showed the way for the winners with seven markers.

Augusta Five Rallies To Conquer Fishburne

Augusta Military Academy, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Although Brewer, opposing guard, rang up 16 points for high scoring honors, the Augusta Military Cagemen defeated their old rivals, Fishburne, in a late rally, 35-to-29.

Valentine, with 11 points, led the Augusta team to victory. With the score tied at 27-27 and five minutes to play, he and Perry came to life to put the game on ice.

Warrenton Wins Two From Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Again failing to defeat their season's jinx, the Fredericksburg Yellow Jackets dropped a double-header to Warrenton High here last night, the Horsemen winning 17 to 10, while the Fredericksburg girls team lost, 23 to 13.

The Jackets constantly threatened Warrenton's slim lead, but, with B. Davis leading the scoring with 7 points, the visitors maintained their lead until the final whistle. Teed, Wright, Calamos and Dice divided scoring honors almost equally.

Two players scored all points for the Warrenton girls team, Hazel Poe finding the ring for 17 and Anne Karp for 6. Mildred Forbush, of Fredericksburg, broke through a tight plainsman defense for 7 points, while her bottled-up mates were held to 6 markers.

Coach Gives Up Job.

Funderberg to Fight Smith at Centreville

Centreville, Md., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Benny Funderberg, of Baltimore, former sparring partner of Jack Dempsey, will be matched with Big Boy Smith, of Princess Anne, in the weekly boxing card of the Eastern Shore Athletic Club here Friday night, following a local amateur exhibition in the local ring tomorrow night.

In the semifinal professional fight, Gunner Bothel, of the U. S. Army, will meet Mel Sheppard, promising young 180-pounder. Pete Minch, of this town, who suffered a technical knockout at the hands of Tex Nichols, of Betterton, recently, will meet the same opponent again, and in the opener Russell Driscoll will meet Henry Gonzales, of Betterton.

A one-hour wrestling bout will see Swede Garbo, a familiar figure on the Eastern Shore, in action against Harry Child, of Baltimore. Both are former Loyola College students. Child has met Gus Sonnenberg, Ray Steele and some of the best in the grunt and groan game.

1934 Plans Made By Valley League

George Holtzman Named Head of Circuit.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Baseball again is to reign as king of sports in the Shenandoah Valley, judging from the enthusiasm shown at a reorganization meeting of the Valley League.

Harrisonburg, New Market and Woodstock appear certain to have clubs in the league next summer. Bridgewater, the fourth member of the circuit last season, is expected to have a club in the fold.

George Holtzman, of Mount Jackson, was elected president of the circuit at the meeting to succeed the late Verne R. Slater, of Harrisonburg, who piloted the league through its first season last summer. W. C. Chandler, Harrisonburg, and Carlos Thuma, Bridgewater, were chosen vice-presidents.

Minton Wins at $10.90 as Four Horses Finish Noses Apart in Hialeah Feature

Terrier Runs A Thrilling Second

Crazy Jane Triumphs for $12.90 Mutuel; Zulu Lad Scores.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 14 (AP).—Four horses came down to the wire noses apart in the Mariana Purse here this afternoon to provide the most thrilling finish of the meeting. The Shandon Farm's Minton, strongly ridden by Eddie Litzenberger, tiny Calgary, Canada, apprentice, stuck the tip of his nose in front in the last lunge to emerge victorious. Right alongside came N. E. Stanton's Terrier, Jones & George's Broad Meadows and J. E. Smallman's Fancy Flight, the latter favorite. Minton covered the six furlongs in the brilliant time of 1:10 3-5 and paid $10.90 straight.

The return of warm weather, a fast track and the usual eight-race bargain bill on a Wednesday attracted another banner crowd for the sport.

Fancy Flight Tires.

Fancy Flight, gifted with high early foot, stole a good lead, as expected, but the competition became too keen for the filly when the "money" came in sight. Broad Meadows, showing improvement under Porter's hard urging, forced the pace, while Terrier and Minton followed clase by. After entering the stretch, little Litzenberger shot Minton covered the 6 furlongs in mount fought it out tenaciously with Terrier, on the outside, and Broad Meadows. Fancy Flight tired just enough to fade out of the picture.

Dark Conquest finally graduated from the maiden ranks in the first race, and his task was a simple one. The gelded son of Traumer met very mediocre opposition and he outran the field all the way to win by 5 lengths under Alfred Robertson. Earl Porter made a bid to win with the long shot Tremolo, which saved the place by a half length from Heiress. The winner was a $3.30 choice.

The Manhasset Stable's Sablin, a first-time starter coupled with Greentree's Up and Up, turned in an auspicious effort to win the juvenile dash. Silvio Coucci had the son of Display on the head end from the start and the colt drew farther clear with each stride, passing the judges a length and a half before Prosecutor. The latter was an easy second over Evangelist, while Up and Up was just out of the picture. The entry was heavily backed, returning $3.70.

Crazy Jane, which couldn't win this winter for J. E. Widener, was privately purchased by Paul Ratti early today and made good at the first asking in the third contest. Well handled by Johnny Gilbert, the Daughter of Haste came from close off the pace entering the stretch and easily moved away from Beefsteak to score by a length and a half, paying $12.90. Beefsteak ran Aunt Flor into early defeat and held on well to save the place by four lengths. Aunt Flor was an easy third.

Moane Keala Scores.

Charlie Kurtsinger, who returned to winning form the day before on Charlie K, scored his second success of the winter in the fourth race astride Moane Keala. Claremont ran the $10.70 shot to a half length, while beating Hastipast nearly two lengths for the place. It was a two-horse affair from the start, with Claremont weakening in the last sixteenth. Drombo, the favorite, got off very slowly and could not overcome the handicap.

Zulu Lad had the speed of a smart field of sprinters in the St. Valentine Purse, sixth on the card, and lasted to score a surprise triumph at $26.10 for $2. Precept again was second, having a length to spare over Herowin. Zulu Lad rushed to the front and disposed of Piety and Don Manuel, the latter a heavily played Chicago invader, which won his last four starts as a juvenile. Precept, slow to find his stride, closed very fast and was wearing the winner down, losing by a half length.

Renewed won his second straight race over the turf course in the seventh. Apprentice Litzenberger grabbed himself a double, piloting the veteran home by a half length. Bright Beauty closed a great gap, as in her last start, and nosed out Fingal for place honors. Renewed ran Chuck B into the ground in the first 6 furlongs and lasted under strong handling to pay $11.70.

The Escorial, which is located in a barren district of Spain about 31 miles northwest of Madrid, is one of the most remarkable buildings in the world. It is also one of the largest, covering nearly 400,000 square feet. It includes many towers, gateways, about 14,000 doors, and 11,000 windows—and its art treasures are world famous and priceless.

Yet, strange as it seems, the name Escorial means, literally, "a heap of rubbish."

Mrs. Frye, 63-year-old grandmother, of Girard, Ohio, can play just about every instrument in an orchestra—including one of her own invention. Orthodox instruments which she uses include the harmonica, saxophone, trumpet, barytone horn, violin, melophone and drums. She also gets music out of a "bottle xylophone" which she made for herself.

She got a late start in music. Her 8 children and 13 grandchildren kept her so busy that she did not find time to devote herself to it until she was 56.

On April 21, 1889, there was no Oklahoma City, no population, and very little else except good land. The Government opened the land to settlement on the next day, and at a given signal thousands of settlers surged into the new country on horseback, in wagons and on foot. By nightfall of the first day 10,000 people had moved into what is now Oklahoma City, to live under tents until more permanent shelter could be provided.

Dear Al:

I received four telegrams today. In substance they each said, "Remarkable that you took credit for winner on Below Zero stop please send name and address of bookmaker who pays off on disqualified horses stop." I will have to admit that I'm a trifle punch drunk. After all, I'm just trying to get the horses I name home in front. One thing ihs certain, friend, I didn't disqualify him. If I could have disqualified about 31 horses today, Mike and I would have cashed on seven winners. As it was, we managed to smuggle one home.

BILL.

First race—Happy Scot escapes top weight by taking an apprentice rider. This fellow has been working and deserves the top ranking among these. Fervid and In High appear to be the best of the others. Suspicious is entered and will be dangerous should track conditions change.

Second race—Migrate had little racing luck last out. Free sailing tomorrow will find this one battling for the main end of the purse. Neon has been in the money frequently and should get some part of the award here. Whoa Back to complete the cash picture.

Third race—Excitation seems to have found a promising spot in this mile. Carries light weight and is ready. Phanton Legion is dangerous. Butter Beans and Chu Chu are possible upsetters.

Fourth race—Ladogan packs enough punch to lead this field to the wire, I do believe. Bartering Kate and Fire Mask look like the ones to cause the most trouble.

Fifth race—Coequel gets a fling in fast company and goes with the Bennings stamp of approval. No stand out but a horse with a good fighting chance of getting home at excellent odds. Gay Joe and Boy Valet for the rest.

Sixth race—Eurydice has defeated this kind before. Needs only an encouraging ride. Flaghorn is ready to make a race out of it as is Indian Salute.

Gonzaga Defeats Friends, 34 to 21

Puts on Pressure in Last Half of Triumph.

Applying pressure in the second half after being held to a 14-6 advantage in the first, Gonzaga defeated Friends School, 34-21, yesterday afternoon on the Purple's court.

Dick Vosby, high scorer with an even dozen points, kept Friends in the running until midway in the final period when his team wilted, and Gonzaga, led by Billy Boyle, went on to win. Phil Roache's floor game for the winners was outstanding.

DARK CONQUEST was much the best. He took the lead early and under steady restraint drew away and won galloping. TREMOLO moved up with a rush and finished gamely. HEIRESS closed a big gap. CARLARO had no mishap. DONNA BETTINA had a very rough trip, but finished gamely. PASS had early speed. SHUFFLE OFF quit badly.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway). The Helpful. Purse, $700. For maiden 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:50½. Off at 2:53. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SABLIN, $3.70, $2.20, $2.20; PROSECUTOR, $2.40, $2.70; EVANGELIST, $5.50.

SABLIN, a fine-looking colt, broke fast, was sent right to the front and, running straight and true, drew away easily in the final furlong. PROSECUTOR displayed keen speed and held on well. EVANGELIST, on the inside all the way, ran a good race. UP AND UP broke well but dropped back and came again in the final sixteenth. TUTTICURIO tired.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700, claiming prices $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:19½. Off at 3:22½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRAZY JANE, $12.50, $6.20, $5.60; BEEFSTEAK, $5.00, $4.20; AUNT FLOR, $5.30.

CRAZY JANE, much improved, was allowed to rate along to the middle of the turn, where she was sent to the front, drew out and won nicely in hand. BEEFSTEAK, after a long rest, came back in fine shape, showed good speed and held on gamely. AUNT FLOR had plenty of speed but tired badly. DON'T BLUSH dropped out of it early, but came again fast at the end. STEEL is worth noting. MACHILLA ran a miserable race, being outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700, claiming prices $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:50½. MOANE KEALA got away fast, followed a fast early pace, assumed the lead inside the sixteenth pole and won going away. CLAREMONT displayed keen speed, saved ground and held on gamely. HASTIPAST was well up all the way and had no excuse. DROMBO broke slow and lacked early speed, came to the outside in the stretch and finished fast. UPPERCUT had no excuse. BLACK HARMONY was never a contender.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Mariana. Purse, $700, claiming price, $2,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16½. Off at 4:19. Stock Rallies In Late Sales Record Gains

Metals Lead in Advance; Trading Volume Drops to 1,938,360 Shares.

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Stocks were quiet and wishy-washy until the last hour of today's market, when a rally enlivened trading and brought a higher closing for most favorites. Volume, at 1,938,360 shares, was under the 2,000,000 mark for the first time since mid-January.

Metals again did the leading when the market decided to improve. Otherwise, there was a rather noticeable preference for automotive equipments, some motors and merchandising issues and a few oils. Net gains averaged into a rise of half a point for the price composite.

Cigarette Shares Sag.

Cigarette shares sagged around 1 to 3 and were off at the finish, although above their lows. Alcohols had another dip, then firmed. Aircrafts found speculative currents more favorable and United rose more than 2 net while Douglas was up 1.

Mining issues still reflected expectations of beneficial action for silver; also National Lead's earnings last year, equal after preferred dividends to $6.98 a common share, against $2.92 in 1932, were encouraging.

Consolidated Oil's "recovery" dividend of 28 cents a share, its first payment since April, 1931, and a 10-cent extra by Seaboard Oil gave the petroleums some lift. Consolidated figured in heavy volume, but made little progress, though Seaboard was up nearly 2.

On Rising List.

Miscellaneous strong and active issues included Montgomery Ward, Eaton Manufacturing, Pierce Arrow, Hayes Body, Mullins, Park Utah Mines, American Smelting, Howe Sound and International Silver, which rose fractions to a couple of points.

American Telephone came forward toward the finish when it was learned that the company's December gross, representing earnings of the long lines, had increased over a year ago.

Steels were cheered by a higher operating ratio, American Rolling Mill, U. S. Steel, U. S. Pipe, Gulf States and Youngstown gaining about a point each.

Paris Gold Shrinks $130,000,000 Total

Paris, Feb. 14 (AP).—Withdrawal of nearly 2,000,000,000 francs in gold (approximately $130,000,000) from the Bank of France reserves, it was reported today, will appear in tomorrow's statement for the week ended February 9.

This heavy drain was attributed to British and American buying and lack of confidence because of Royalist rioting that forced out the Daladier cabinet.

Half of this gold, bankers said, went to England, and most of the remainder has gone, or is destined to go, to the United States. Since January 9 the bank has lost 7,000,000,000 francs in gold (approximately $455,000,000) in withdrawals, but still has 75,000,000,000 francs (approximately $4,875,000,000).

Further Study Has Convinced Careful Wall Street Analysts That Security Exchange Bill as It Now Stands Endangers the Market.

By Ralph West Robey.

By Ralph West Robey.

Opportunity for further study of the pending security exchange bill has convinced many of the more careful analysts in Wall street that the measure is much more drastic than at first realized. Several of these now seriously question not only whether the Stock Exchange could continue to operate in any real sense if the bill, as now drafted, were passed, but as well whether organizations dealing in the publication of corporate data could remain in existence. They see the possibility, accordingly, of a wholesale emasculation of the market for existing securities unless the bill is substantially modified.

That there should be such opinions as these in the financial district is not surprising. Many members of the street, of course, desire unlimited freedom to do much as they please and look upon any attempt at regulation as an unwarranted curtailment of private rights. If the question of supervision comes before these individuals, accordingly, it automatically is opposed and is interpreted as a move which materially will weaken the market and make more or less ruinous changes in our financial picture. Here, however, I am not concerned with the opinions of this group.

Criticisms Based Upon Social Point of View.

Rather, those to whom I have reference are individuals who have just as much of a social point of view and are just as sincerely interested in the economic welfare of the country as a whole as any member of the Administration. Their conclusions and criticisms of the bill, accordingly, should not be taken as a reflection of a desire for unlimited freedom but as the careful opinions of various ipdividuals who are in a position to express expert judgment on the probable effects of the bill.

Unfortunately, it is impossible to present here the views of this group in their entirety. To do so would necessitate a detailed analysis of the whole bill, because many of their objections rest upon wording rather than the general idea involved. Their general line of thought, nevertheless, can be indicated by citing one or two broad points.

Perhaps the most important of these is the requirement of reports and the responsibility for all statements made in connection with a security. The provisions here are, for all practical purposes, the equivalent of those contained in the Securities Act of 1933—the so-called truth-in-securities bill. The group of critics in question hold that just as this security bill effectively has placed a curb on all private security issues so the provisions in the security exchange bill will prevent the listing of stocks and, consequently, dry up the market. Further, and of even more importance from a social viewpoint, these provisions go clear beyond all reason in the way of protecting the public—in fact, go so far that to a marked extent they make the reports less useful to the public. Finally, it is maintained that by placing the burden of proof of accuracy upon the one making the statements a responsibility is imposed which contains such a great liability that organizations will be unwilling to assume it. A net result of these provisions, it is held, too, will be to place a relatively greater handicap upon small organizations.

Federal Trade Commission Control Raises Questions.

The second broad group of objections arises from the relationship which will be established between brokers and dealers, on the one hand, and the Federal Trade Commission, on the other hand. Here, it is emphasized, according to the present law in order to get a license one must agree not only to observe all provisions as they now stand but the later rules and regulations which may be issued by the Commission under the extremely broad powers given it. They hold that this means obeying the orders of a political body and a political body that has not been outstanding for its capacity. Further, that while in case of a dispute the broker or dealer has a theoretical right of appeal, actually this means comparatively little because the Commission's evidence is presumptively correct.

As a final point raised by this group may be mentioned their attitude on the margin requirements. Here the criticism is directed at the establishment of a statutory minimum. Such a provision, it is said, is perfectly fitted for bucket shop operations and the activities of short sellers. In no real sense, it is maintained, does it afford any protection to the public.

All of these, it seems to me, are serious criticisms of the bill as it now stands. In none of them, however, is there necessarily any fundamental conflict between those advancing these criticisms and those trying to reform the stock exchange. Granting that the real purpose of the bill is to make our financial markets of more service to the public at large, accordingly, it should be possible for the two sides to get together.

Bond Market ontinues Rise On New Buying

Wider Demand Gives Push to Prices; Sales Up to $19,303,000.

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Favored by a continuation of the improvement in business and industry, bonds stepped up smartly today under a pronounced expansion of demand.

Transfers totaled $19,303,000, par value, compared with $13,718,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced four-tenths of a point.

Little attention apparently was paid to the start of Congressional committee hearings on the bill for the Federal regulation of security exchanges.

Control Fears Ignored.

The loan market does not expect to be seriously affected by the control measure when it is finally whipped into shape for passage. A large part of listed bond dealings is on an outright basis, although margin transactions are not uncommon in some of the more speculative groups.

Both traders and investors were further cheered by a substantial advance in electric power output as well as the estimate of Iron Age that steel production, currently, was at about 41 per cent of capacity against 38 per cent last week. Earnings reports of the railroads and other corporations were also encouraging.

Secondary loans were still the most popular, although prime investment bonds improved.

Rails Lead Again.

The rails were again the leaders. In the carrier group gains of fractions to around 2 points were recorded by some issues of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, Great Northern, M-K-T, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Iron Mountain, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Wabash and Western Maryland.

Among the better utilities and industrials were bonds of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Western Union, Walworth, Vanadium, United Drug, Studebaker, Skelly Oil, Richfield Oil, Paramount, International Telephone, Columbia Gas, American Water Works and American Rolling Mill.

U. S. Government securities were quiet but firm. Most foreign obligations improved. Advances of 1 to 2 or more were held by loans of Argentina, Berlin, Brazil, France, Lautaro Nitrate, Peru, Rhine-Westphalia and Great Britain. Bonds of Austria were a little heavy, reflecting the civil warfare in that country. Some Dutch Indies issues were also soft.

Paris—Under fear of Austrian complications, prices on the bourse sagged. There were a few exceptions, however, notably Suez shares. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—A firm tone was registered on the boerse, dye and machine shares benefiting. The market closed sustained.

Firm Tone Predominates; Aircrafts Rally; Sales 355,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—A fairly firm undertone predominated at the close of the curb market today, following forenoon selling. Aside from a few specialties, early losses were canceled or converted into net gains. Oils were narrow and a shade mixed.

This coffee was the balance unsold on January 30, on which date bids were accepted on 39,000 bags at prices ranging from 10.25 to 10.76 cents a pound.

Lumber production and new business received during the week ended February 3 at the country's sawmills were somewhat less than for the previous two weeks, reports the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, but shipments were heavier than for any week of the year. Unfilled orders were equivalent to 21 days' average production.

The New York Cotton Exchange Service estimates cotton consumption by domestic mills at 516,000 bales in January, compared with the Census Bureau's figures of 548,000 bales for December and 470,000 for January, 1933.

The Rubber Manufacturers Association reported today that shipments of pneumatic casings in December amounted to 3,531,121 units against 2,197,485 in November and 1,818,700 in December, 1932. Production during the month amounted to 3,081,886 units, compared with 3,039,386 in November and 1,982,681 in the same month in 1932. Casings in the hands of manufacturers on December 31 amounted to 8,888,070 against 9,246,563 at the close of the previous month and 7,644,359 on December 31, 1932.

Increased consumption of sugar, coupled with a sharp decrease in Javan production, will result in a reduction of 931,000 long tons, raw sugar value, in world sugar stocks during the present season, according to B. W. Dyer & Co., sugar brokers. The present will be the third consecutive season in which a reduction in stocks has taken place, says the firm.

American Stores Co. reports sales for the five weeks ended February 3 at $10,602,865 against $10,157,087, an increase of 4.4 per cent.

Standard Statistics Co. says the acceleration of general business throughout the country "indicates that freight volume and railroad earnings will show increasing gains during the first quarter." January gross revenues, it estimates, will be 20 to 25 per cent above a year ago, while net operating income "may be some 300 per cent more than for January, 1933, notwithstanding the likelihood of a moderate advance in operating expenses."

The Iron Age composite price for heavy melting steel scrap has risen to $12.08 a ton from $11.92, making a new high for the year. The 1933 top, reached last August, was $12.25 a ton.

Cotton Losses Trimmed by Trade Buying

March Closes at 12.06 as General Market Drops 5 to 13 Points.

New York, Feb. 14 (AP)—An early decline of approximately $2 a bale in cotton was followed by equally sharp recoveries in the later trading today. May contracts, after selling off to 11.90 under further heavy liquidation, advanced to 12.32 in the late trading and closed at 12.23, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 5 to 13 points.

The opening was 10 to 19 points lower on a renewal of the selling which had developed yesterday on reports of opposition to the crop-control bill in Washington.

The initial pressure sent active months about 14 to 23 points net lower, and after quick rallies of 10 or 12 points prices eased off again under continued liquidation coupled with selling through houses with foreign connections. There was also a little more selling here for Southern account.

Decline Is Extended.

The decline extended to 11.75 for March and 12.20 for October, making net losses of about 32 to 39 points and reactions of $3 a bale from yesterday's highs.

The market rallied rapidly during the afternoon on an increased trade demand combined with covering and rebuying by recent sellers. March sold up to 12.15 and October to 12.62, but the bulge met renewed liquidation and closing prices were 9 to 12 points off from the best.

The afternoon rally was accompanied by reports of a continued firm spot situation in the South and rather more bullish views were expressed in some quarters as to the prospects for crop control legislation in one form or another.

The census report showing domestic consumption of 508,034 bales for January were without apparent effect. Exports today, 12,427, making 5,256,027 so far this season. Port receipts, 11,679. U. S. port stocks, 3,633,420

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil today declined 4 to 8 points early under liquidation, promoted by the early decline in cotton, but rallied sharply on renewed covering and buying by Wall street and commission houses.

Prices sold into new high ground for the later positions on the late rally in cotton and the firmness of crude oils. Final prices were 2 to 6 points net higher. Sales, 114 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; March closed 5.28; May, 5.49; July, 5.70; September, 5.92.

British India Grants Japan Cotton Quota

Recent negotiations between representatives of the British Indian and Japanese governments have resulted in the conclusion of an agreement providing for specific quotas on imports of cotton piece goods from Japan to former lower import duties in return for definite Japanese imports of British Indian cotton, effective after the exchange of early ratifications at London, the agreement to remain in force until March 31, 1937, according to a cablegram from Consul General Arthur C. Frost, Calcutta, January 11.

The agreement specifies that the policy of according most-favored-nation treatment to each other's products will continue for all articles with certain specified safeguards against exchange variations.

The agreement provides for an import duty of 50 per cent ad valorem or 5¼ annas per pound, whichever rate returns the higher duty, on plain gray cotton piece goods with an import duty of 50 per cent ad valorem on other piece goods. These are the rates that were in force previous to August 30, 1932, and recently announced by the British Indian government as again applying to all non-British piece goods with effect from January 8.

The agreement provides for an annual import quota of 325,000,000 yards of Japanese piece goods into British India. This allotment is linked with and contingent upon Japan's purchases of 1,000,000 bales of British Indian raw cotton. In the event that imports of British Indian cotton fall below that figure, the piece goods quota will be reduced by 2,000,000 yards for each 10,000 bales under the specified amount. If exports of British Indian raw cotton exceed 1,000,000 bales, the piece goods quota increases by 1,500,000 yards for each additional 10,000 bales, but with the total yardage in no case exceeding 400,000,000.

The Japanese piece goods quota comprises the following categories: Plain gray, 45 per cent; bordered gray, 13 per cent; bleached, 8 per cent; colored and other piece goods, 34 per cent, with certain adjustments permissible within these classifications. The agreement specifies that transfer of unused quotas is permissible, up to 20,000,000 yards, from one-half year period to the next subsequent period.

Exchange Head Urges Federal Incorporations

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Federal incorporation of large companies, long agitated by many proponents of financial reform, has found a staunch advocate in Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

This was publicly advocated by Whitney first on February 28, 1933 and he now urges it as an alternative for certain provisions of the Fletcher-Rayburn bills for control of securities exchanges.

Whitney fears that some of the requirements for listing of securities on exchanges, as proposed in these bills, are so severe that many leading corporations may prefer to remove their securities from organized exchanges. A National companies act, however, it is argued, could bring them all under the same regulations, whether their securities were listed or not.

Plan Suggested in 1933.

Whitney's espousal of Federal incorporation last February 28, was presented as a suggestion in an address in Cleveland. After explaining the need for uniform corporate practices, and saying "Unfortunately some of our States, in order to secure revenue for taxes, &c., have adopted exceedingly liberal corporate laws," and "such laws have permitted practices which have been very detrimental to investors," he said, "A Federal corporation law might be enacted, but if for any reason that should prove impracticable, then the adoption of a uniform law by the several States is a vital necessity."

In his first public comment on the proposed stock exchange regulation yesterday, Whitney again brought up the subject of Federal incorporation, asserting that it would be more effective than suggested rules for corporations with listed securities.

Regulations for corporations and responsibilities of their officers, he said, "belong in a National corporation law, where they can be made applicable not only to companies which are listed upon exchanges but to all American corporations which are publicly owned and are engaged in interstate commerce and the use of the United States mails."

Legislation Plan Severe.

In this connection, Whitney criticized the proposed legislation as too severe, and said it would seem virtually to empower the Federal Trade Commission to control the management of every listed company. He pointed out, however, that companies might avoid this by removing their securities from listing.

This, it has been explained, might handicap them in new financing, but many big corporations rich in cash reserves and not planning extensive expansion, might go for years without new financing.

The report on stock exchanges by the committee headed by Assistant Commerce Secretary Dickinson and that by the Twentieth Century Fund, both of which appeared recently, suggested Federal incorporation as a cure for some of the ills of high finance. Under some State laws, of which many corporations have taken advantage, it has been pointed out, directors of a company may even meet in private and effectively vote away important rights and much of the equity of the stockholders without their consent.

Raw Cotton Exports Rise During 1933

Raw cotton, including linters, accounted for 87 per cent of the total value of United States exports of textile and textile fibres in 1933, compared with 84 per cent in 1932, according to statistics compiled in the Commerce Department's textile division.

Aggregate shipments abroad under the group classification of "textile fibers and manufactures thereof" in 1933 had a value of $456,000,000 against $409,000,000 in 1932. Raw cotton, including linters, accounted for $395,000,000 and $343,000,000, respectively, of this trade.

Exports of cotton manufactures and semimanufactures during 1933 were valued at $39,351,000, compared with $45,525,000 in 1932. Exports of all textile manufactures and semimanufactures, including the products of cotton, wool, silk and synthetic fibers, amounted to $57,558,000 in 1933, compared with $63,639,000 in 1932.

Item.	1932.	1933.
Cotton manufactures and semimanufactures	$45,525,000	$39,351,000
Wool manufactures and semimanufactures	1,226,000	1,306,000
Silk manufactures	4,547,000	4,879,000
Rayon manufactures (including yarns)	2,491,000	2,485,000

Peaches at $2 Seen as Result Of Cold Injury

Shenandoah Valley Crops Believed Reduced by 35 Per Cent.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Injury to the 1934 peach crop in the Shenandoah Valley as a result of the recent sub-zero temperature will mount as high as 35 per cent of the crop, reports from many sections of the area indicated.

The injury also will be felt in portions of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, which had a warm spell the last of January.

From Romney, W. Va., came reports that the buds were frozen hard and that the injury is widespread in the Panhandle of West Virginia.

In Albemarle County, especially in the Greenwood region, where the sudden drop of 60 degrees was felt on January 28 in addition to the freeze of last week, injury to the Belle variety is estimated at 14 to 17 per cent with Albertas injured 20 to 24 per cent.

Higher prices for peaches were forecast here today as a result of the freeze. In sharp contrast to the season of 1932 when peaches went begging in this section at 25 cents a bushel on the tree, growers now estimate that the popular varieties will probably bring $2 per bushel this summer.

Benefits to Follow Cold.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—Possible heavy crop losses from the East's unprecedented cold wave may be offset by other factors, it was said by fruit men of a half dozen States today.

The peach crop in the West Virginia-Maryland-Virginia section, they said, probably has been reduced by 60 per cent but they find consolation in the fact that the work of thinning the crop in June will be reduced.

Chinch Bugs Infest Six Midwest States

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 14 (AP).—Possibility of severe damage to small grain crops in six States by chinch bugs was reported today by Myron H. Swenk, University of Nebraska entomologist, who said the infestation was reported the heaviest since 1887.

"Conditions in Nebraska have not been measured accurately," Swenk said, "but in southeastern Nebraska we think there are as many or more bugs as in any year for the last 30.

"Taking in the whole territory of southern Indiana, a large part of Illinois, southern Iowa, northern Missouri, northeastern Kansas and southeastern Nebraska, it is said we would have to go back to 1897 to find as many."

Building Permits Value $20,179,438

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—The estimated value of building permits in more than 200 cities reporting to Dun & Bradstreet in January aggregated $20,179,438, compared with $17,744,805 in the same month last year, an increase of 13.7 per cent. The total, however, was 19 per cent below that reported for December, which aggregated $24,915,216.

Building permits issued in New York City showed the largest increase, jumping to $4,466,545, compared with $2,800,700 in January, 1933. The December permits in New York City aggregated $6,944,715.

Chicago also had a big increase, passing the million-dollar mark for the first time in more than two years with permits valued at $1,098,500, contrasted with $109,100 a year ago.

C. M. Will Allot Stock to Employes

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—General Motors Corporation will distribute 38,439,810 and 58,435 shares of its common stock to 28,305 employes, members of its 1928 savings and investment fund plan, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president, reported today.

Of the total payment, $8,084,485 represents the employes' original savings investment and the balance interest and benefits of the corporation.

Under the plan, originated in 1919, the corporation contributes 25 cents for each dollar paid in by employes. Interest is also paid on the savings.

Better Tobacco Price.

Boots and Shoe Sales.

(Associated Press.)

An increase of 11.8 per cent in the production of boots and shoes during 1933 over 1932 was reported by the Department of Commerce. The 1933 output was 350,381,737 pairs, compared with 313,269,854 in 1932.

U. S.-Canadian Wheat Exports Rise in Week

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from United States and Canadian ports as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended Feb. 1, 1934, totaled 5,518,723 bushels as compared with 5,287,000 bushels in the previous week and 5,577,000 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 197,031,002 bushels as against 191,278,140 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were 13,000 bushels compared with 20,000 bushels in the preceding week and 374,000 bushels last year. For the season, corn exports totaled 231,000 bushels, as against 4,085,742 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Finished Steel Sale Drops in January

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by the U. S. Steel Corporation in January showed a decrease of 289,002 tons to a total of 391,717 tons, compared with 680,830 tons in December.

January deliveries in the past several years have exceeded those of December, but the steel business was unusually brisk in the last month of 1933, due to the rush of consumers to take deliveries before the quarter ended. January, 1934, thus found consumers supplied and output declined.

Santa Fe Car Loadings Drop to 20,549 Cars

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Freight loadings on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway last week totaled 20,549 cars, against 20,000 the previous week and 19,939 a year ago.

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific's traffic aggregated 22,647 cars, compared with 22,783 and 18,199, respectively, the week before and a year ago.

Chicago & Northwestern's loadings last week amounted to 32,438 cars, against 32,899 the week before and 15,707 in the 1933 week.

Illinois Central loaded 28,088 cars in the week of February 10, compared with 26,117 in the previous week and 25,037 in the same week last year.

Loadings on the Wabash Railroad amounted to 11,843, compared with 12,213 and 10,848, respectively, in the week before and the same week last year.

Southern Pacific's freight traffic last week totaled 17,858 cars, against 17,100 and 13,816, respectively, in the previous periods.

Improving Business.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 14 (AP).—Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes today pointed to an increase in the number of corporation charters issued by his office as an indication of improving business. He said 365 charters were issued during January, 1934, an increase of 37 per cent over the 410 issued in January, 1933.

Wholesale Orders Rise.

Chicago, Feb. 14 (AP).—The Association of Commerce in its weekly trade report today said that the semiannual meeting of the Interstate Buyers Council aided in giving trade a big boost. Wholesale orders during the meeting approximated $6,000,000 and one prominent jobber reported the best buyer attendance in the last eight years.

Country Clothing Stores.

Chicago, Feb. 14 (AP).—C. E. Gallivan, vice president of Society Brand Clothes, Inc., said today upon his return from a Nation-wide tour that he had found an increase of from 10 to 50 per cent in the business of the country's clothing stores. He said he had found not a single store that had not increased its business.

Machine Tool Panic.

Chicago, Feb. 14 (AP).—The American Machinist, trade publication, says that "because of increased activity in machine tool plants and the large number of inquiries out, looks as though quick deliveries will be difficult to attain in the near future."

Philippine Sugar Imports Increase

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Raw sugar shipments from the Philippines to the United States from November 1, 1933, to January 31, 1934, the first three months of the current crop year, amounted to 216,000 long tons against 204,000 tons during the same period in 1932-33, an increase of 5.8 per cent, according to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. Refined sugar exports for the same period were 17,000 tons against 16,000 in 1932-33, a decrease of 17.6 per cent.

Shipments from January 16 to 31 of raw and refined sugar totaled 61,100 tons, the only quarter-month since 1930 to exceed 60,000 tons during the last half of January in 1933.

The proposed import quota of 1,037,000 short tons suggested for the Philippines in the President's message to Congress compares with 1,550,000 tons estimated as available for Continental United States from the 1934 crop after deducting local consumption.

Unfilled Auburn Export Orders Set New Record

Auburn, Ind., Feb. 14.—Unfilled orders in the export department of the Auburn Automobile Co. here are at an all-time record for any similar period, W. H. Beal, president, announced today.

The company's 1934 line of cars has found an enthusiastic reception in the export trade, Beal said, and many new dealers and distributors have been added in these markets. Unfilled export orders on hand as of February 10, according to Beal, are greater than the entire export sales of the company for 1933.

Peaches at $2 Seen as Result Of Cold Injury

Shenandoah Valley Crops Believed Reduced by 35 Per Cent.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—Injury to the 1934 peach crop in the Shenandoah Valley as a result of the recent sub-zero temperature will mount as high as 35 per cent of the crop, reports from many sections of the area indicated.

The injury also will be felt in portions of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, which had a warm spell the last of January.

From Romney, W. Va., came reports that the buds were frozen hard and that the injury is widespread in the Panhandle of West Virginia.

In Albemarle County, especially in the Greenwood region, where the sudden drop of 60 degrees was felt on January 28 in addition to the freeze of last week, injury to the Belle variety is estimated at 14 to 17 per cent with Albertas injured 20 to 34 per cent.

Higher prices for peaches were forecast here today as a result of the freeze. In sharp contrast to the season of 1932 when peaches went begging in this section at 25 cents a bushel on the tree, growers now estimate that the popular varieties will probably bring $2 per bushel this summer.

Benefits to Follow Cold.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—Possible heavy crop losses from the East's unprecedented cold wave may be offset by other factors, it was said by fruit men of a half dozen States today.

The peach crop in the West Virginia-Maryland-Virginia section, they said, probably has been reduced by 60 per cent but they find consolation in the fact that the work of thinning the crop in June will be reduced.

Furthermore, the sub-zero wave is believed to have killed off a good percentage of insect larvae and thus eliminated some of the summer spraying burden.

Chinch Bugs Infest Six Midwest States

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 14 (AP).—Possibility of severe damage to small grain crops in six States by chinch bugs was reported today by Myron H. Swenk, University of Nebraska entomologist, who said the infestation was reported the heaviest since 1887.

"Conditions in Nebraska have not been measured accurately," Swenk said, "but in southeastern Nebraska we think there are as many or more bugs as in any year for the last 30.

"Taking in the whole territory of southern Indiana, a large part of Illinois, southern Iowa, northern Missouri, northeastern Kansas and southeastern Nebraska, it is said we would have to go back to 1887 to find as many."

Swenk said the dry weather with no prolonged low temperatures furnished nearly ideal weather conditions for the bugs.

Building Permits Value $20,179,438

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—The estimated value of building permits in more than 200 cities reporting to Dun & Bradstreet in January aggregated $20,179,438, compared with $17,744,805 in the same month last year, an increase of 13.7 per cent. This total, however, was 19 per cent below that reported for December, which aggregated $24,915,270.

Building permits issued in New York City showed the largest increase, jumping to $4,488,544, compared with $2,649,789 in January, 1933. The December permits in New York City aggregated $8,944,775.

Chicago also had a big increase, crossing the million-dollar wark for the first time in more than two years with permits valued at $1,298,200, contrasted with $169,100 a year ago.

G. M. Will Allot Stock to Employes

New York, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—General Motors Corporation will distribute $8,499,670 and 56,433 shares of its common stock to 28,393 employe-members of its 1928 savings and investment fund class, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president, reported today.

Of the total payment, $5,084,485 represents the employes' original savings investment and the balance interest and benefits by the corporation.

Under the plan, originated in 1919, the corporation contributes 25 cents for each dollar paid in by employes. Interest is also paid on the savings.

Better Tobacco Prices.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 14 (Spl.).—When R. S. Richardson, Caroline County tobacco grower, sold a 100-pound lot of Caroline-grown tobacco for $45, he received the top price of the year in the Richmond market.

Mr. Richardson sold a total of 765 pounds at a range from $15 to $45, with an average of $26.43 per hundred. While his top figure was the best of the season on the Richmond market, his average was close to the best made during the season.

Boots and Shoe Sales.

(Associated Press.)

An increase of 11.8 per cent in the production of boots and shoes during 1933 over 1932 was reported by the Department of Commerce. The 1933 output was 350,361,737 pairs, compared with 313,269,854 in 1932.

For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 127,951,962 bushels, as against 191,279,149 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Finished Steel Sale Drops in January

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by the U. S. Steel Corporation in January showed a decrease of 268,862 tons to a total of 331,777 tons, compared with 600,639 tons in December.

The total for January, 1933, was 285,138 tons.

January deliveries in the past several years have exceeded those of December, but the steel business was unusually brisk in the last month of 1933, due to the rush of consumers to take deliveries before the quarter ended. January, 1934, thus found consumers supplied and output declined.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 14 (AP).—Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes today pointed to an increase in the number of corporation charters issued by his office as an indication of improving business. He said 563 charters were issued during January, 1934, an increase of 37 per cent over the 410 issued in January, 1933.

Wholesale orders during the meeting approximated $6,000,000 and one prominent jobber reported the best buyer attendance in the last eight years.

Gelb, vice president of Society Brand Clothes, Inc., said today upon his return from a Nation-wide tour that he had found an increase of from 10 to 60 per cent in the business of the country's clothing stores. He said he had found not a single store that had not increased its business.

Philippine Sugar Imports Increase

New York, Feb. 14.—Raw sugar shipments from the Philippines to the United States, from November 1, 1933, to January 31, 1934, the first three months of the current crop year, amounted to 318,066 long tons against 294,925 tons during the same period in 1932-33, an increase of 7.8 per cent, according to cables to the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. Refined shipments for the same period were 13,179 tons, against 16,002 in 1932-33, a decrease of 17.6 per cent.

Shipments from January 15 to 31 of raw and refined together totaled 73,169 tons this year against 60,906 tons during the last half of January in 1933.

The proposed "import quota" of 1,037,000 short tons, suggested for the Philippines in the President's message to Congress, compares with 1,350,000 tons estimated as available for Continental United States from the 1934 crop after deducting local consumption.

Unfilled Auburn Export Orders Set New Record

Auburn, Ind., Feb. 14.—Unfilled orders in the export department of the Auburn Automobile Co. here are at an all-time record for any similar period, W. H. Beal, president, announced today.

The company's 1934 line of cars has found an enthusiastic reception in the export trade, Beal said, and many new dealers and distributors have been added in these markets. Unfilled export orders on hand as of February 10, according to Beal, are greater than the entire export sales of the company for 1933.

D. C. Rum Job Deadlock May Go to Roosevelt

Change in Civil Service Rule Seen; Meredith Is Secretary.

Possibility of Presidential intervention in order to release the selection of the eight inspectors of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board from a Civil Service status was seen yesterday after Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen called at the White House and conferred with Marvin McIntyre, one of President Roosevelt's secretaries.

Considerable political pressure from Capitol Hill has been brought to bear against the recent Civil Service Commission ruling requiring that the inspectors be selected from Civil Service lists, and it is understood that the matter is now before the President.

Meredith Appointed.

As the District's arrangement with the Civil Service Commission was created by executive order of the President in 1930, it is assumed that he may alter it at will.

Ever since the District liquor act was passed, the District heads have been besieged by members of Congress, especially those of Virginia and Maryland, seeking appointment of their constituents. The inspectorsships pay $2,300.

Meanwhile, the commissioners appointed a secretary of the board, William Payne Meredith, but postponed until today the announcement of its selections of inspectors, presumably until word is received from the President.

Recommended By Smith.

Meredith's appointment was made without recommendation from the liquor board, and it was said that the commissioners have assumed the responsibility of naming the inspectors as well, despite earlier reports that the board would be allowed to select its own staff.

Meredith, long a resident of the District and formerly in the insurance and real estate business, was recommended by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Alexandria.

He is a member of the board of governors of the Chevy Chase Club and the Racquet Club. He resides at 2446 Kalorama road.

Scholarship Topics Analyzed

Dr. Thomas H. Healy Stresses That Essayists Can Not Segregate Purely National Themes From Those Involving the World.

To encourage intelligent study of today's history-making events, The Washington Post and four great local centers of learning—American, Georgetown and Howard Universities and the Catholic University of America—are cooperating in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, which calls for preliminary essays by high school seniors on governmental topics, and which carries major awards of five four-year tuition scholarships at the sponsoring universities.

For the benefit of the hundreds of students already enrolled in this competition, The Post is publishing a series of articles, of which the following is the fourth contributed by professors at these four universities.

A General Statement on the Seven International Problems.

By Thomas H. Healy, Ph.D.
(Assistant Dean, Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.)

Before choosing one of the seven topics listed under international problems in The Washington Post Essay Contest and before preparing the essay on the chosen topic, certain general factors should be given careful consideration.

While listed as international, they all have an important bearing on our domestic problems. We should understand from the beginning that there is no major foreign policy of the United States that does not affect in an important way many other nations, and that practically every one of our international policies has a very important relationship to problems and policies that all too often, and by mistake, are considered as purely domestic.

No Segregation.

In discussing such problems, another dangerous mistake is frequently made of considering "Nationalism Versus Internationalism" as a decisive factor. There has never been a time in the history of the United States—and there probably never will be—when we can play the role of 100 per cent nationalism or the reverse—100 per cent internationalism—on any major policy. The economic life and political position of the United States are such that we must always be both national and international. The only true question involved is the extent to which we should put more or less stress on one or the other of these two essential, integral factors in our national life.

Political policies can not be segregated from economic policies. It is rare to find an economic policy (whether it be National or international) that has not a political bearing—or a political policy that has not an important economic bearing. The social factor runs through most of these problems, whether they be political or economic.

Studied Together.

Principles and practices must be examined jointly. All too often have ideals and principles been sacrificed by students who examine matters purely from practice; on the other hand, dangerous mistakes have been made by well-intentioned idealists who have concentrated entirely on principles and ignored practical realities.

No examination of our present policies would be adequate unless it gave careful consideration to our policies of the last century and a half and the possible effect on the future.

The role of the true student should be to endeavor to find the golden mean in our international policies, after considering carefully all of the factors mentioned above.

The general ideas here presented will be supplemented and completed in two subsequent articles opening up specific avenues of thought as to the major factors involved in the seven international problems listed.

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona-fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial school within the following area: The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15 for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments or inquiries promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 14 (U.P.).—An aged, crippled Negro and an immaculately dressed young white man both chanced to pass a manhole at the same time here and heard a piteous wailing call.

Together they pried off the manhole lid. The call was repeated. The Negro tried to descend to aid but his condition didn't permit. So the white man went into the river of the city's waste and rescued an almost dead mongrel dog.

Lorton Action Fails to Satisfy

Shoemaker Says Disease Threat Remains in Prison.

The removal of fifteen allegedly diseased prisoners from the District Reformatory laundry at Lorton, Va., by Col. J. W. L. Peak, superintendent, failed to satisfy Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, yesterday.

Shoemaker, whose remarks on the floor of the House Tuesday led to the removal, told newspapermen that 29 other prisoners in the laundry, which does all the Federal departmental work, are suffering from athlete's foot. He explained that this infection is contagious.

He also declared that 20 other prisoners suffering from social diseases are working in the mess hall and kitchen and that unless they are removed there is danger of another outbreak among the prison inmates such as occurred last year.

Shoemaker said he had the names and medical records of all Lorton prisoners suffering from a social disease and added he would be glad to turn them over to District or prison authorities.

6 Undefeated Years Is Record Of Former Roanoke Debater

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—There isn't much use to argue with Stuart T. Saunders, former Roanoke College debater, because he's almost always right.

In fact, it has been revealed here that in six years of debating at Roanoke College and Harvard University, Saunders has never been on the losing side. His ability was recognized formally the other day when he was awarded the Ames competition prize at the Harvard Law School.

While at Roanoke College, from which he was graduated in 1930, Saunders was president of the local chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, National debating fraternity, and led the team which won five out of seven starts in his senior year.

At the Harvard Law School he continued his argumentative victories with promotions in the elimination competition for the Ames award, an endowed institution designed to select the group of men best fitted to argue cases before an appellate court.

For three years Saunders and his partner enjoyed success, and last month they won their final argument before justices from three State supreme courts.

Juggernaut!

14 Killed, 338 Hurt in Month by Autos.

Fourteen persons were killed and 338 injured in a total of 638 automobile accidents in the District last month, according to figures from the police precincts submitted to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Accident deaths increased by nine over the same period last year. Curiously enough, January 13 saw more persons killed than any other day. Three were fatally injured on that date.

Miscellaneous parking regulations caused the greatest number of arrests for traffic violations, with overtime parking the ranking offense.

Six persons were arrested for making too much noise. A total of 4,681 arrests were recorded.

Taken unconscious from the gas-filled kitchen of her home, 1700 Sixteenth street southeast, Mrs. Evalyn Burke, 24, was treated at Casualty Hospital after being revived by the Fire Rescue Squad. Her condition is not serious. She was found leaning over the open jets of a gas stove.
